A nequitiæ præparetis ad bona, quid de sancto sacerdote dicat, si quantulumcunque adhuc interni auditus in vobis remanet, auscultate: ⁂ 'Pactum meum,' inquiens, 'fuit cum eo,' de Levi namque vel Moyse secundum historiam loquebatur, 'vitæ et pacis, dedi ei timorem, et timuit me, a facie nominis mei pavebat, lex veritatis fuit in ore ejus, et iniquitas non est inventa in labiis ejus, in pace et in æquitate ambulavit mecum, et multos avertit ab iniquitate. Labia enim sacerdotis custodient scientiam, et legem requirent ex ore ejus, quia angelus Domini exercituum est.' Nunc item mutavit sensum, et malos increpare non desinit: ⁂ 'Vos,' inquiens, 'recessistis de via, et descandalizastis plurimos in lege, et irritum fecistis pactum cum Levi, dicit Dominus exercituum. Propter quod et ego dedi vos contemptibiles et humiles in omnibus populis, sicut non servastis vias
B meas, et accepistis faciem in lege. Nunquid non pater unus omnium nostrum: nunquid non Deus unus creavit nos? Quare ergo despicit unusquisque fratrem suum?' Et iterum: ⁂ 'Ecce veniet Dominus exercituum, et quis poterit cogitare diem adventus ejus? et quis stabit ad videndum eum? Ipse enim egredietur quasi ignis ardens, et quasi poa lavantium, et sedebit conflans et emundans argentum, et purgabit filios Levi, et colabit eos quasi aurum et quasi argentum.' Et post pauca: ⁂ 'Invaluerunt super me verba vestra, dicit Dominus, et dixistis: Vanus est qui servit Deo, et quod emolumentum, quia custodivimus præcepta ejus, et quia ambulavimus coram Domino exercituum tristes? Ergo nunc beatos dicemus arrogantes, siquidem ædificati sunt facientes iniquitatem, tentaverunt Deum, et salvi facti sunt.'] Quid vero Ezechiel propheta dixerit, attendite:
C ⁂ 'Væ,' inquiens, 'super væ veniet, et nuntius super nuntium erit, et quæretur visio a propheta, et lex peribit a sacerdote et consilium de senioribus.' Et iterum: ⁂ 'Hæc dicit Dominus: Eo quod sermones vestri sunt mendaces, et divinationes vestræ vanæ, propter hoc ecce ego ad vos, dicit Dominus: Extendam manum meam super prophetas qui vident mendacia, et eos qui loquuntur vana in disciplina populi mei non erunt, et in scriptura domus Israel non scribentur, et in terram Israel non intrabunt, et scietis quia ego Dominus. Propterea populum meum seduxerunt dicentes, pax Domini, et non est pax Domini. Hic struit parietem, et ipsi ungunt eum, et cadet.' Et post aliquanta: ⁂ 'Væ his qui concinnant cervicalia subtus omnem cubitum manus, et faciunt velamina super omne caput universæ ætatis ad subvertendas animas. [Animæque

Et infra: ⁂ 'Fili hominis dic, Tu es terra quæ non compluitur, neque pluvia facta est super te in die iræ, in qua principes in medio ejus, sicut leones rugientes, rapientes rapinas, animas devorantes in potentia, et pretia accipientes, et viduæ tuæ multiplicatæ sunt in medio tui, et sacerdotes ejus despexerunt legem meam, et polluebant sancta mea. Inter sanctum et pollutum non distinguebant, et inter medium immundi et mundi non dividebant, et a sabbathis meis obvelabant oculos suos, et polluebant in medio eorum.' Et iterum: ⁂ 'Et quærebam ex eis virum

Et effudi in eam animum meum in igne iræ meæ ad consumendum eos: vias eorum in caput eorum dedi, dicit Dominus.' Et post aliquanta: ⁂ 'Et factus est sermo Domini ad me dicens: Fili hominis loquere filiis populi mei, et dices ad eos: Terra in quam ego gladium superinducam, et acceperit populus terræ hominem unum ex ipsis, et dederit eum sibi in speculatorem, et viderit gladium venientem super terram, et tuba cecinerit, et significaverit populo: et audierit qui audit vocem tubæ et non observaverit: et venerit gladius et comprehenderit eum, sanguis ejus super caput ejus erit. venientem et non significaverit tuba, et populus non observaverit: et veniens gladius acceperit ex eis animam, et ipsa propter iniquitatem suam capta est; et sanguinem de manu speculatoris requiram. Et tu fili hominis speculatorem te dedi domui Israel, et audies ex ore meo verbum cum dicam peccatori, morte morieris: et non loqueris ut avertat se a via sua impius: et ipse iniquus in iniquitate sua morietur, sanguinem autem ejus de manu tua requiram. Videamus igitur quid evangelica tuba mundo personans inordinatis sacerdotibus eloquatur, non enim de illis, ut jam diximus, qui apostolicam sedem legitime obtinent, quique bene norunt largiri spiritualia conservis suis in tempore cibaria, si qui tamen multi in præsentiarum sunt; sed de pastoribus imperitis, qui derelinquunt oves, et pascunt vana, et non habent verba pastoris periti, nobis sermo est. Evidens ergo indicium est, non esse eum legitimum pastorem, sed *mediocrem quidem Christianum, qui hæc non tam nostra, qui valde exigui sumus, quam Veteris Novique Testamenti decreta recusarit, vel inficiatus fuerit; sicut bene quidam nostrorum ait: ' Optabiliter cupimus, ut hostes Ecclesiæ sint nostri quoque absque ullo fœdere hostes; et amici ac defensores nostri non solum fœderati, sed etiam patres ac domini habeantur.' Conveniant namque singuli vero examine conscientiam suam, et ita deprehendent an secundum rectam rationem sacerdotali cathedræ insideant. Videamus, inquam, quid Salvator mundi Factorque dicat. ∴' Vos estis,' inquit, ' sal terræ, quod si sal evanuerit, in quo salietur? ad nihilum valet ultra, nisi ut projiciatur foras ut conculcetur ab hominibus.' Hoc unum testimonium ad confutandos impudentes quosque abunde sufficere posset, sed ut evidentioribus adhuc astipulationibus, quantis semetipsos intolerabilibus scelerum fascibus, falsi hi sacerdotes opprimant, verbis Christi comprobetur, aliqua annectenda sunt. Sequitur enim: ×' Vos estis lux mundi. Non potest civitas abscondi supra montem posita, neque accendunt lucernam et ponunt eam sub modio, sed super candelabrum, ut luceat omnibus qui in domo sunt.' Quis ergo sacerdotum hujus temporis ita ignorantiæ cæcitate possessus, ut lux clarissimæ lucernæ, in aliqua domo cunctis noctu residentibus, scientiæ simul et bonorum operum lampade lucet? Quis ita universis ecclesiæ filiis tutum, publicum, conspicuumque refugium, ut sit civibus firmissima forte editi montis civitas vertice constituta, habetur? Sed et quod sequitur: ϒ' Sic luceat lux vestra coram hominibus, ut videant opera vestra bona, et magnificent patrem vestrum qui in cœlis est:' quis eorum uno saltem die potest implere? Quin potius densissima quædam eorum nebula, atraque peccaminum omni insulæ ita incumbit nox, ut omnes pene a via recta avertat, ac per invios impeditosque scelerum calles errare faciat, quorum non modo Pater cœlestis non laudatur per opera, sed etiam intolerabiliter blasphematur. Velim quidem hæc scripturæ sacræ testimonia huic epistolæ inserta vel inserenda, sicut nostra mediocritas posset, omnia utcunque historico vel morali sensu interpretari. Sed, ne in immensum modum opusculum hoc, his qui non tam nostra quam Dei despiciunt, fastidiunt, avertunt, proteletur, simpliciter et absque ullo verborum circuitione congesta vel congerenda sunt. Et post pauca: +' Qui enim solverit unum de mandatis istis minimis, et docuerit sic homines, minimus vocabitur in regno cœlorum.' Et iterum: ∴' Nolite judicare, ut non judicemini: ×in quo enim judicio judicaveritis, judicabitur de vobis.' Quis rogo vestrum respiciet id quod sequitur? + Act. i. 18. Juda.' Et paulo post: + 'Hic itaque acquisivit agrum de mercede iniquitatis.' Hoc, securo vel potius hebeti corde, quasi non de vobis lectum fuisset, audistis. Quis, quæso, vestrum non quærit agrum de mercede iniquitatis? Judas namque loculos compilabat, vos Ecclesiæ donaria filiorumque animas ejus vastatis. Ille adiit Judæos ut Deum venderet, vos tyrannos et patrem vestrum diabolum ut Christum despiciatis. Ille triginta argenteis venalem habuit omnium Salvatorem, vos vel uno obolo. Quid plura? Fertur vobis in medium Matthiæ in confusionem vestram exemplum, sanctorum quoque Apostolorum, electione vel judicio Christi non propria voluntate sortiti, ad quod cæci effecti non videtis quam longe a meritis ejus distetis, dum in amorem et effectum Judæ traditoris sponte corruistis. Apparet ergo eum qui vos sacerdotes, sciens, ex corde dicit, non esse eximium Christianum. Sane quod sentio, proferam. Posset quidem lenior fieri increpatio, sed quid prodest vulnus manu tantum palpare, unguentove

A ungere, quod tumore jam vel fœtore sibi horrescens, cauterio et publico ignis medicamine eget, si tamen ullo modo sanari possit, ægro nequaquam medelam quærente, et ab hoc medico longius recedente? O inimici Dei et non sacerdotes, veterani malorum et non pontifices, traditores et non sanctorum apostolorum successores, et non Christi ministri. Auscultastis quidem secundæ lectionis apostoli Pauli verborum sonum, sed in nullo modo monita virtutemque servastis, et simulachrorum modo, quæ non vident neque audiunt, eodem die altari astitistis, tunc et quotidie vobis intonantis: ‡‘ Fratres,’ inquit, ‘ fidelis sermo est, et omni acceptione dignus.’ Ille dixit fidelem et dignum, vos ut infidelem et indignum sprevistis: ×‘ Si quis episcopatum cupit, bonum opus desiderat.’ Vos episcopatum magnopere avaritiæ gratia, non spiritualis profectus

B obtentum cupitis, et bonum opus illi condignum nequaquam habetis: ϒ‘ Oportet ergo hujusmodi irreprehensibilem esse.’ In hoc namque sermone lachrymis magis quam verbis opus est, acsi dixisset apostolus eum esse omnibus irreprehensibiliorem debere: ‘ Unius uxoris virum.’ Quid ita apud nos quoque contemnitur quasi non audiretur vel idem dicere et virum uxorum? ‘ Sobrium, prudentem.’ Quis etiam ex vobis hoc aliquando inesse sibi saltem optavit? ‘ Hospitalem:’ Id si forte casu evenerit, popularis auræ potius quam præcepti gratia factum, non prodest, Domino Salvatore ita dicente: ‘ Amen dico vobis, receperunt mercedem suam:’ +‘ Ornatum, non vinolentum, non percussorem, sed modestum, non litigiosum, non cupidum.’ O feralis immutatio, O horrenda præceptorum cœlestium conculcatio! Nonne infatigabiliter ad hæc expugnanda,

C vel potius obruenda, actuum verborumque arma corripitis, pro queis conservandis atque firmandis, si necesse fuisset, et pœna ultro subeunda, et vita ponenda erat? Sed videamus et sequentia: ‘ Domum,’ inquit, ‘ suam bene regentem, filios habentem subditos, cum omni castitate.’ Ergo imperfecta est patrum castitas, si eidem non et filiorum accumuletur. Sed quid erit, ubi nec pater, nec filius mali genitoris exemplo pravatus, conspicitur castus? ‘ Si quis autem domui suæ præesse nescit, quomodo Ecclesiæ Dei diligentiam adhibebit?’ Hæc sunt verba quæ indubitatis effectibus approbantur: ‡‘ Diaconos similiter pudicos, non bilingues, non vino multum deditos, non turpe lucrum sectantes, habentes mysterium fidei in conscientia pura. Hi autem probentur primum, et sic ministrent, nullum crimen habentes.’ His nimirum horrescens diu immo-

D rari, unum veridice possum dicere, quin hæc omnia in contrarios actus mutentur, ita ut clerici, quod non absque dolore cordis fateor, impudici, bilingues, ebrii, turpis lucri cupidi, habentes fidem et, ut verius dicam, infidelitatem in conscientia impura, non probati in bono, sed in malo opere præsciti ministrantes, et innumera crimina habentes sacro ministerio adsciscantur. Audistis etiam illo die, quo multo dignius multoque rectius erat, ut ad carcerem vel catastam pœnalem quam ad sacerdotium traheremini, Domino sciscitanti, quem se esse putarent discipuli, Petrum respondisse: ×‘ Tu es Christus filius Dei vivi;’ eique Dominum pro tali confessione dixisse: ϒ‘ Beatus es Simon Bariona, quia caro et sanguis non revelavit tibi, sed pater meus qui in cœlis est.’ Ergo Petrus a Deo patre doctus, recte Christum confitetur: vos autem moniti a patre vestro

E diabolo, inique Salvatorem malis actibus denegatis. Vero sacerdoti dicitur: +‘ Tu es Petrus, et super hanc petram ædificabo Ecclesiam meam:’ vos quidem assimilamini ‡‘ viro stulto, qui ædificavit domum suam super arenam.’ Notandum vero est, quod insipientibus in ædificanda domo, arenarum pendulæ mobilitati Dominus non cooperetur, secundum illud: ‘ Fecerunt sibi reges, et non per me.’ Itidemque quod sequitur eadem sonat dicendo: ×‘ Et portæ inferni non prævalebunt,’ ejusque peccata intelliguntur. De vestra quid exitiabili structura pronunciatur? ϒ‘ Venerunt flumina, et flaverunt venti, et impegerunt in domum illam, et cecidit, et fuit ruina ejus magna.’ Petro ejusque successoribus dicit Dominus: ‘ Et tibi dabo claves regni cœlorum:’ vobis vero: ‘ Non novi vos, discedite a me operarii iniquitatis,’ ut separati sinistræ partis cum hœdis, eatis

INCIPIT [c] PRÆFATIO NENNII, BRITONUM HISTORIOGRAPHI, IN HISTORIA BRITONUM.

HUMILIS servorum Christi minister et servus Nennius, Dei gratia, S. [d]Elboti discipulus, cunctis veritatis obauditoribus salutem. Vestræ
C sit notum charitati, quod cum rudis eram ingenio, et idiota sermone, hæc pro modulo meo, non propriæ nitens scientiæ, quæ vel nulla vel admodum rara et exilis est, Latinorum auribus idiomatizando tradere præsumpsi; sed partim majorum traditionibus, partim scriptis, partim etiam monimentis veterum Britanniæ incolarum, partim et de annalibus Romanorum; insuper, et de chronicis sanctorum Patrum, Ysidori scilicet, Ieronymi, Prosperi, Eusebii; necnon et de historiis Scotorum Saxonumque, licet inimicorum, non ut volui sed ut potui, meorum obtemperans jussionibus seniorum, unam hanc historiunculam undecunque collectam balbutiendo coacervavi: et remanentes spicas actuum præteritorum, ne penitus calcatæ deperirent, quarum ampla seges quondam extranearum gentium infestis messoribus sparsim prærepta est, posterorum memoriæ pudi-
D bundus mandare curavi. Quippe multis obnoxius, qui vix aliorum dictamina superficie tenus, prout utile esset, intelligere hucusque quiveram, nedum propria incude sufficiens, sed, velut barbarus, aliorum linguam infringens, temere commendavi. Attamen internum vulnus circum præcordia volvens ægre ferebam, si propriæ gentis nomen, quondam famosum et insigne, oblivione corrosum fumatim evanesceret. Sed quoniam utcunque historiographum Britannorum me malo esse quam neminem, quamvis adeo plures inveniantur qui hunc laborem mihi injunctum satius explere poterant, relegentes humili prece posco, quorumcunque aures inconcinnitate verborum offendero, quo veniam majorum voto parenti, facili exauditione ex debito, se noverint præbituros: errat namque multotiens impotentis effectus, quem errare, si posset, non sineret fervens affectus.
E Serviat itaque sufficiens charitas, quibus sufficere non potuerit verborum meorum inconcinna simplicitas; nec vilescat in auribus audientium historiæ veritas,

[a] Nennium Elbodugi episcopi discipulum versus sæculi octavi finem natum, ultra noni medium vitam produxisse constat. Historiam Brittonum, seniorum jussu, An. 858 perfecit. Hanc e codice manuscripto Bibliothecæ Publicæ Cantabrigiensis quo in ea edenda Oxoniæ, An. 1691, usus est Galeus, cum plurimis MSS. Codd., necnon et cum Marco Anachoreta comparatam exhibemus. De Codd. MSS. cum in præfatione jam disseruimus, hic sat erit monere, illos inter variantes lectiones notis A. B., &c., Marcum Anachoretam litteris BB. designari. Quæ amplius diximus de Nennio vel de farragine ejus, in prologo nostro videre possis.

Ego Nennius, [2]S. [3]Elbodi discipulus, aliqua excerpta scribere curavi, quæ hebetudo gentis Britanniæ dejecerat; quia nullam peritiam habuerunt, neque C ullam commemorationem in libris posuerunt doctores illius insulæ Britanniæ. Ego autem coacervavi omne quod inveni, tam de annalibus Romanorum quam de chronicis sanctorum Patrum, [4]et de scriptis Scotorum Anglorumque,' et ex traditione veterum nostrorum. Quod multi doctores atque librarii scribere [5]tentaverint, nescio' quo pacto difficilius [6]reliquerint, an propter mortalitates frequentissimas, vel clades [7]creberrimas bellorum. Rogo ut omnis lector, qui legerit hunc librum, det veniam mihi; quia cujus sum, post tantos hæc tanta scribere, quasi garrula avis, vel quasi quidam invalidus arbiter? Cedo illi qui plus noverit in ista peritia [8]satis quam ego.

Genuit Jupiter Mercurium ex Maia, et Dardanum ex Electra. Mercurius itaque ipse omnium Græcorum est origo. Dardanus vero origo Trojanorum fuit. Fuit autem apud Jovem amor major Maiæ filii. Dardanus namque, ex responso Deorum, locum mutans ab Italia, per Traciam Samo dilatus est, quam Samotraciam nominavit. Ex quo natus est Erictonius, qui quidem iisdem regnavit locis. Ex Erictonio Tros, qui in justitia et pietate laudabilis fuit; isque ut memoriam nominis sui faceret eternam, urbem Trojam suo nomine appellari jussit. Tros duos filios habuit, Ilium et Assaracum, a quo Ilio Ilium dictum est et Troya. Ilii hic Laomedon filius fuit. Ex Laomedonte Priamus natus est qui expugnatus est in Troia. Assaracus vero genuit Capis, Capis Anchisen, Anchises Eneam procreavit, Eneas Aschanium, Aschanius Silvium, Silvius Brutum, a quo Britones dicuntur et originem ducunt. Genealogia utrorumque ita retrorsum revolvitur. Priamus filius Laomedontis, filii Yli, filii Troii, filii Ericthonii, filii Dardani, filii Jovis, filii Saturni, filii Cœlii. Item Brutus filius Silvii, filii Aschanii, filii Æneæ, filii Anchisæ, filii Capis, filii Assaraci, filii Trois, filii Ericthonii, filii Dardani, filii Jovis, filii Saturni, filii Cœlii. R. add. [31]De Romanis vero et Græcis trahunt ethimologiam; id est de matre Lavina filia Latini regis Ytaliæ, et progenie Salvani filiæ Inmachi [Silvani filio Inahi BB.] filii Dardani: idem Dardanus filius Saturni regis Græcorum perrexit ad partes [partem BB.] Asiæ, et illic [ille BB.] ædificavit urbem Troiæ. Dardanus pater Troii, Troius pater [Priami et BB.] Anchisæ, Anchises pater Eneæ, Eneas pater Aschanii et Silvii: Silvius filius Eneæ, et Lavinæ filiæ regis Ytaliæ, et de styrpe filiæ [filii BB.] Eneæ et Lavinæ orti sunt Remus et Romulus, duo filii reginæ sanctimonialis Iliæ Reæ [Reæ, id est Iliæ, scilicet Remus et Romus BB.] qui fecerunt Romam. A cum Ascanio filio suo [1]venit ad Italiam; et superato Turno, accepit Laviniam filiam Latini [2]regis, filii Fauni, filii [3]Pici, filii Saturni, in conjugium; et post mortem Latini, [4]regnum obtinuit Romanorum[5]. [6]Ascanius autem Albam condidit: et postea uxorem [7]duxit; et peperit [8]ei filium nomine Silvium. Silvius autem duxit uxorem, [9]et gravida fuit.′ Et nuntiatum est Æneæ quod nurus sua [10]gravida esset:′ et misit ad Ascanium filium suum, ut mitteret magum suum ad considerandam uxorem[11], et exploraret quid in utero haberet; si masculum vel fœminam. Et [12]venit magus, [13]et consideravit [14]mulierem, et reversus est: [15]dixitque Ascanio Æneæ filio quod masculum haberet uxor ejus in utero, [16]et [17]fatus ejus erit fortis,′ quia occidet, inquit, patrem′′ et matrem suam, et erit exosus omnibus hominibus. [18]Propter hanc vaticinationem occisus est magus ab
B eis. Et′ sic evenit [19]ut in nativitate illius mulier est mortua, et nutritus est filius, vocatumque est nomen ejus Britto. [20]Brito vero fuit filius Silvii, filii Ascanii, filii Æneæ, filii Anchisæ, filii Capen, filii Asaraci, filii Tros, filii Erictonii, filii Dardani, filii Jovis de genere Cam, filii maledicti, videntis et ridentis patrem Noe. Tros vero duos filios habuit, Hilium Asaracumque: Hilius condidit Hilium civitatem, id est, Trojam primo, genuitque Lamidon; ipse est pater Priami: Asaracus autem genuit Capen; ipse est pater Anchisæ; Anchises genuit Æneam: ipse Æneas pater Ascanii.′ [21]Post multum [22]enim intervallum [23]temporis, juxta vaticinationem magi, dum ipse [24]luderet cum [25]aliis, [26]inopino ictu sagittæ occidit patrem suum, non de industria, sed casu. [27]Propter hanc causam′ expulsus est ab Italia, et [28]Ariminis fuit; et venit ad insulas maris
C Tyrreni; et expulsus est a Græcis [29]pro causa occisionis Turni, quem Æneas occiderat; et pervenit usque ad Gallos, et ibi condidit civitatem Turonorum; [30]et vocavit eam a nomine cujusdam militis sui,′ [31]qui vocatur Turnus:′ et postea ad istam [32]venit insulam, quæ a suo nomine accepit nomen, id est Brittanniam, et implevit eam cum [33]gente sua, et [34]habitavit ibi. Ab illo [35]siquidem tempore′ habitata est Britannia usque in hodiernum diem.

CAP. [36]IV. ⁂ [37]Æneas autem regnavit tribus annis apud Latinos, Ascanius [38]annis XXXVII.; [39]post quem′ [40]Silvius Æneæ filius regnavit annis XII.; [41]Posthumus annis XXXIX.,′ a quo Albanorum reges Silvii sunt appellati, [42]cujus frater erat [43]Brito. Cap. [3]XXIII. [c]Septimus imperator regnavit in Britannia [4] dictus [5] Maximus. Ipse perrexit cum omnibus militibus Britonum a Britannia, et occidit Gratianum regem Romanorum, et imperium tenuit totius Europæ; noluitque dimittere milites, qui cum eo perrexerunt [6] a Britannia, neque' ad uxores suas, [7]neque ad filios[8], neque' ad possessiones [9] eorum: sed dedit illis multas regiones, a stagno quod est super verticem [A] montis Jovis, usque ad civitatem quæ vocatur [10]Cantguic.[d] [11]Ipsi sunt' ad cumulum occidentalem, id est [12]Crutochideint.[e] [13]Britones namque Armorici, qui ultra mare sunt, cum Maximo tyranno hinc in expeditionem exeuntes, quoniam redire nequiverant, occidentales partes Galliæ solo tenus vastaverunt, nec mingentes ad parietem vivere reliquerunt: acceptisque eorum uxoribus et filiabus in conjugium, omnes earum linguas amputaverunt, ne eorum successio maternam linguam disceret; unde et nos illos vocamus in nostra lingua Letewicion, id est 'semitacentes,' quoniam confuse loquuntur.' Hi sunt Britones Armorici, et nunquam reversi sunt [14] ad proprium solum' usque in hodiernum diem. [15]Propter hoc' Britannia occupata est ab extraneis gentibus, et cives [16] ejus expulsi sunt, usque dum Dominus auxilium dederit illis. In veteri traditione [17]seniorum nostrorum,' [18]ut legimus,' VII. imperatores fuerunt a Romanis in Britannia: Romani autem dicunt IX. [19] fuisse.

Cap. [22]XXV. Nonus fuit [23]Constantinus [g]: ipse regnavit XVI. annis in Britannia; et [24] XVII. anno imperii sui obiit in Britannia, [25] Eboraci ut ipsi dicunt.' Hucusque regnaverunt Romani apud Britones [h] CCCC. et IX. annis. [26]Britones autem [27]dejecerunt regnum Romanorum, neque censum illis dederunt, neque reges [28]eorum acceperunt ut regnarent super eos; neque Romani ausi sunt ut venirent [29] in Britanniam amplius ad regnandum; quia duces [30] eorum Britones occiderant.

[g] Constantinus, a militibus in imperatorem electus A. 407, et A. 411 occisus, cum Constantio qui apud Eboracum obiit, confunditur. v. C. XXI.

Cap. [18]XXVII. Tribus vicibus occisi sunt duces Romanorum a Brittannis. Britones autem, dum [19]anxiarentur a barbarorum gentibus, id est Scotorum et Pictorum, auxilium flagitabant Romanorum. Et dum legati mittebantur×, cum magno luctu et cum sablonibus super capita sua intrabant, et portabant magna munera secum consulibus[20], pro admisso scelere occisionis ducum: et suscipiebant consules grata dona ab illis. [21]Promittebant [22]ergo Britones cum sacramento′ accipere jugum [23]Romanorum et′ Romanici juris, licet durum fuisset: et Romani venerunt cum exercitu maximo ad auxilium eorum; et posuerunt [24]duces et′ imperatores in Britannia. Et composito imperatore cum ducibus, [25]revertebatur exercitus ad Romam usque: et sic alternatim per [26]cccc. et xlix. annos faciebant. Britones autem propter gravitatem imperii occidebant duces Romanorum; et auxilium postea petebant. Romani autem ad imperium auxiliumque, et ad [27]vindicandum veniebant; et spoliata Britannia auro argentoque, cum ære, et omni preciosa veste, et melle, cum magno triumpho revertebantur. [28]Nunc vero ad gentem Saxonum flectendus articulus.′

De adventu.

Cap. [29]XXVIII. Factum est autem post supradictum bellum, [30]quod fuit inter Britones et Romanos, quando duces illorum occisi sunt, et [31]post occisionem [32]Maximi tyranni, transactoque Romanorum in Britannia imperio, per xl. annos sub metu fuerunt. [33]Gorthigernus regnavit in Britannia; et dum ipse [34]regnabat [35], urgebatur a metu Pictorum Scottorumque, et a Romanico impetu, necnon et a timore Ambrosii. [36]Interea venerunt tres [37]chiulæ a Germania in exilio [38]pulsæ, in quibus erant Hors et [39]Hengist, qui et ipsi fratres erant. [40]Hors et Hengist′ filii [41]Guitgils, filii [42]Gurgta, filii [43]Guecta, filii Vuoden, filii [44]Frealf, filii Fredulf, filii Finn, filii [45]Folepald, filii [46]Geata, qui fuit ut aiunt filius Dei: [47]nunquid ipse est Deus exercituum vel Deus Deorum,′ [48]sed unus est ab idolis eorum [49]quæ ipsi colebant. A lam, quæ [1] lingua eorum vocatur [2] Taneth, Britannico sermone [3] Ruichim, regnante [4] Martiano [a] secundo, quando′ Saxones a Gortigerno suscepti sunt, anno [5] CCCC.XLVII. post Passionem Christi.[6b]

CAP. [7] XXX. In tempore [8] illius venit S. [c] Germanus, [9] Autisiodorensium urbis episcopus,′ ad prædicandum in Britannia: et claruit apud illos in multis virtutibus, et multi per eum salvi facti sunt; [10] increduli perierunt. Aliquanta miracula, quæ per illum [11] Dominus fecit, scribenda decrevi.[12] De adventu S. Germani.

CAP. XXXI. Primum miraculum de miraculis ejus. Erat quidam rex valde iniquus atque tyrannus, cui nomen erat [13] Benli, [14] in regione [*] Ial; et′ [15] ille vir [16] sanctissimus [17] Germanus voluit visitare et properare ad iniquum regem, ut prædicaret illi [18] viam salutis. Et′ cum ipse homo Dei venisset ad [19] ostium B urbis cum comitibus suis, venit portarius et salutavit eos: [20] qui miserunt eum ad regem. Et rex durum responsum dedit illis, et cum juramento dixit: ‘Si fuerint, vel si manserint usque ad [21] caput anni [22] in ostio portæ meæ arcis,′ non venient unquam in medio urbis meæ.’ Dum ipsi [23] expectant janitorem, ut [24] renunciaret illis sermonem tyranni, [25] sol declinabat ad vesperum, et nox adpropinquabat; [26] quo irent nesciebant.′ [27] Interea venit unus de servis regis e medio urbis, et inclinavit se ante virum [28] Domini, et nunciavit illis omnia verba [29] regis; De miraculis ejus, et de Benli tyranno. [a] Imperabat Marcianus ab A. 450 ad A. 457. Quid sibi velit vox ‘secundo’ nisi forte ad annum ejus secundum respiceret, haud patet. Numeri vero iterum sunt corrupti. Pro ‘Passionem,’ legendum ut verisimile est, ‘Incarnationem.’ In codice X. ut videre est, legitur ‘Gratiano Secundo Equantio,’ et in MS. Coll. C.C. Cantabrigiæ N° C.LXXXIII. circa finem sæculi decimi exarato, post regum Saxonum genealogias hæc occurrunt: ‘Quando Gratianus consul fuit secundo, et Æquitius quarto, tunc his consulibus Saxones a Wyrtgeorno in Brittannia suscepti sunt, anno CCC.XLVIIII. a Passione Christi.’ Si forte hæc Gratianum III. cos. cum Æquitio respicerent, tunc sub anno 374 caderet adventus Saxonum.

[b] Ab. A. 447, quo dictum est Saxones Brittaniam advenisse, ad initium regni Eadmundi, scilicet A. 940, anni tantum CCCC.XCIII numerantur: annus ejus quintus in A. 945 incideret. v. C. I. (6) et C. LXV. (12)

[c] Germanus, Autisiodorensis episcopus, A. 418-449, secundum Prosperum primo Britanniam venit A. 429, Galliamque rediit A. 430. Secundo Britanniam missus est circiter A. 448, indeque reversus, brevi postea obiit.

[d] Hæc paulo aliter narrantur apud Hericum de miraculis S. Germani, quæ, quia ad Marcum Anachoretam attinent, hoc loco proferenda duximus: ‘Dum per mediterranea circumvecti loca, singula curiose disquirimus, pœne fuit, ut oceanum, extima mundi mirabiliter cingentem, ab excellentissimi Patris nostri privilegiis exciperemus; quibus cum totus redundet orbis, uberius tamen his Britannia gloriatur, insula inter omnes vel prima, vel maxima; de qua ut fert [] auctoritas ‘finis erat orbis ora Gallici littoris, nisi Britannia insula singulari amplitudine nomen pœne orbis alterius mereretur.’ Hæc beato Germano peculiari devotione submissa, multis se beneficiorum impendiis sanctitati ejus esse testatur obnoxiam; quod scilicet ejus doctrinis illuminata, quod per eum non semel est a sordibus hæresum expurgata, quod denique multiplici miraculorum lampade illustrata. Quæ quoniam doctorum nobilium studio litteris sunt aliquatenus commendata, iteratione non indigent. Fertur unum famosum inter cetera, cujus ad nos notitia per sanctum senem Marcum, ejusdem gentis episcopum decucurrit; qui natione quidem Brito, educatus vero in Hibernia, post longa pontificalis sanctitatis exercitia, ultroneam sibi peregrinationem indixit. Sic traductus in Franciam, piissimique regis Caroli munificentia illectus, apud beatorum Medardi et Sebastiani cœnobium anachoreticam exercet vitam, [] Solinus.

De tyranni

Cap. XXXIII. Iterum de mane surrexerunt ut impetrarent [1] aditum urbis, A juxta portam præstolantes. Et′ ecce vir unus currebat, et sudor illius a vertice
[2] usque ad plantas pedum distillabat, [3] inclinans se ante [4] eos. Et dixit S Germanus : ‘ Credis in [5] sanctam Trinitatem′ ?’ Et respondit [6] ille : ‘ Credo.’ Et [7] baptizatus est ;′ et [8] osculatus est ab eo.′ [9] Cui dixit [10] S. Germanus :′ ‘ Vade in pace : in ista hora morieris ; et angeli Dei te in aera expectant, ut gradiaris cum illis ad [11] Deum cui credidisti.’ Et ipse lætus intravit in arcem. Et præfectus tenuit illum et alligavit : [12] qui ante tyrannum [13] deductus et′ interfectus est.
[14] Mos enim′ erat apud nequissimum tyrannum, nisi quis ante solis ortum [15] venisset ad [16] servitutem in arce, interficiebatur. Et manserunt tota die juxta portam civitatis, [17] nec impetraverunt ut salutarent tyrannum.

Cap. XXXIV. Solito [18] more affuit supradictus servus ; et dixit illi S. Ger- B

reversus est ad arcem, et deduxit filios suos, quorum numerus erat IX., et ipsi ad supradictum hospitium cum [20] domino suo′ reversi sunt. Præcepitque S. Germanus manere eos jejunos : et clausis januis dixit : ‘ Vigilantes estote, et si quid evenerit[21], in arcem′ nolite aspicere, sed orate [22] attentius, et′ indesinenter [23] ad Deum [24] vestrum clamate.’ Et post modicum intervallum noctis, ignis de cœlo cecidit, et combussit arcem et omnes [25] qui cum tyranno erant ; [26] nec ultra apparuerunt, nec arx reædificata est usque in hodiernum diem.′

Hic multis coram sæpius referre solitus erat, Germanum sanctissimum, ut ipsius utar verbis, suæ nationis apostolum, vice quadam, dum Britannias permearet, regis palatium cum suis discipulis introisse. Erat tum hiems horrida, nec hominibus solum, verum etiam ipsis bestiis vehementer infesta. Itaque directo ad regem internuntio, superventuræ nocti hospitium postulavit. Rex abnuit, atque, ut erat et gente et animo barbarus, negotium floccipendit. Interea Germanus cum discipulis sub Divo persistens, cœli inclementiam infractis animis tolerabat.

Jamque die in vesperam coacto, subulcus regis regressus a pascuis, pensum quotidiani salarii acceptum ex palatio ad proprium tugurium referebat. Is ubi Germanum beatissimum conspexit brumali horrore cum discipulis tabescentem, appropinquans cominus, orat humiliter, ut, quis esset, quave ex causa inter algores nimios illic moraretur, ediceret. Cumque nihil certitudinis ex responso percepisset, personæ dignitate permotus ; ‘ oro,’ ait, ‘ quisquis es Domine, ut parcas corpori, servique tui succedere digneris hospitio, ac demum, si qua paupertati meæ suppetunt officia, receptare ; non parum enim interesse video, imminentis noctis angustias quantumlibet vili domicilio temperare.’ Non aspernatus personæ qualitatem, successit hospitio, et quæ sibi a paupere impendebantur, obsequia libens excepit. Erat illi in peculio vacca tantum et vitulus : conversusque ad uxorem ; et non intelligis, ait, quantum susceperis hospitem ; accingere itaque, et unicum, qui nobis est, vitulum mactans, cœnaturis appone. Dicto illa incunctanter paruit, coctumque vitulum in mensa componit. Episcopus solito abstinens, ceteris esum indicit. Cœna explicita, beatus Germanus mulierem evocat, imperatque, ut ossa vituli collecta diligentius super pelliculam ejus ante matrem in præsepio componat. Quo facto, mirum dictu quod est, vitulus absque mora surrexit, matrique coadstans, pabulum carpere cœpit. Tum ad utrosque conversus Antistes, ‘ Salvo,’ inquit, ‘ præmio caritatis, jura hospicii tali interim beneficio compensata recipite.’ Proventum rei mirabilem collato omnes præconio sustulerunt.

In crastinum pontifex palatium repetit, regisque ad publicum præstolatur egressum. Illum ab intimis procedentem Germanus excipit, atque potenti objurgatione verborum, cur sibi pridie hospitium negaverit, severus exquirit. Rex stupore defixus intorpuit, virique constantia attonitus a responso defecit. Tum Germanus auctoritate mirabili ; ‘ Egredere,’ inquit, ‘ et sceptra regni meliori permitte.’ Illo hæsitante, Germanus baculo cunctantem impellens, ‘ Egredieris,’ ait ; ‘ et sicut definitum constat a Domino, nequaquam deinceps in æternum potestate regia abuteris.’ Barbarus auctoritatem cœlestem in præsule reformidans, cum conjuge et liberis indifferenter egreditur, palatii fores retentare nulla posthac ratione conatus. Tum Germanus, uno ex discipulis directo, subulcum cum conjuge evocat, atque universo stupente palatio, in regni culmen componit. Ex eo tempore in hodiernum reges ex subulci genere prodeuntes nationi Britonum dominantur, Deo per beatum Germanum res humanas mirabiliter ordinante. Hæc ita apud Britanniam catholicis literis contineri, prædictus mihi episcopus jurisjurandi interpositione firmabat, cujus probitatem quisque expertus est, verbis illius fidem cedere nullo modo dubitabit. O virum inter mortalium agmina singularem. O hominem ipsius jam divinitatis symbola præferentem. Necdum luteam molem deposuit ; et jam cum Christo de mundo decernit, potestates ordinat, regna disponit. Insanum te palam pronuntio, quisquis Germani merito provehi populos ad regna cœlestia posse desperas, quem terrenos adhuc vehentem artus tanta potuisse consideras.’ Acta Sanctorum, ad diem 31 Julii, p. 272.

Cap. [14]XXXVI. Factum est autem postquam [15]castra metati sunt Saxones in supradicta insula [16]Taneth, promisit rex supradictus dari illis victum et [17]vestimentum absque [18]defectione: et placuit illis, et ipsi promiserunt expug-
B nare inimicos ejus fortiter. At illi barbari cum multiplicati essent numero, non potuerunt Britones cibare illos. Cum postularent cibum et vestimentum, sicut promissum illis erat, dixerunt Britones: ‘Non possumus vobis dare cibum [19]nec vestimentum, quia numerus vester multiplicatus est: sed recedite a nobis, [20]auxilio vestro non indigemus[21].’ [22]Ipsi vero′ consilium fecerunt cum majoribus suis ut pacem disrumperent.

Cap. XXXVII. Hengistus autem, cum esset vir doctus atque astutus et callidus, cum explorasset super regem inertem, et super gentem illius, [23]quod sine armis [24]utebantur, inito consilio dixit ad regem Britannicum: ‘Pauci sumus; si vis, mittemus ad patriam nostram, ut invitemus milites de militibus regionis nostræ, [25]et sit amplior numerus ad certandum pro te et pro gente tua.’ Et

Postquam [34]venissent chiulæ, fecit convivium Hengistus Guorthigirno [35]regi, et militibus suis, et interpreti suo, qui vocabatur [36]Cerdicelmet. [37]Nullo Britone Britonum sciente Saxonicam linguam præter istum Britonem, studet qui legit, quo eventu evenit ipsi viro intelligere sermonem Saxonicum.′ [38]Hengistus itaque′ puellam jussit ministrare illis vinum et siceram; [39]qui inebriati sunt nimis et saturati. Illis [40]bibentibus, intravit Sathanas in corde Guorthigerni ut [41]adamaret puellam; et postulavit eam a patre suo per interpretem suum, et dixit: ‘Omne quod a me postulas
D impetrabis, licet dimidium regni mei.’ Et Hengistus, inito consilio cum suis senioribus qui secum [42]venerant de insula[b] Oghgul, [43]quid peterent regi pro puella; unum consilium [44]illis omnibus fuit, ut peterent regionem quæ in lingua eorum vocatur [45]Canthguaraland, [46]in nostra autem [47]lingua [48]Chent.′ Et dedit [49]illis, [50]Gnoirangono rege′ regnante in Cantia; et inscius erat [51]quod traditum esset regnum ipsius′ paganis, et ipse solus, in potestatem illorum [52]clam dari. Et sic data est puella illi in conjugium; et dormivit cum ea, et [53]adamavit eam valde.

A esset omnis materia, in una nocte [1] omnino ablata est′ : tribusque vicibus jussit congregari, et nusquam comparuit.

Cap. XLII. [2] Tunc magos suos ad se′ accersivit, illosque percunctatus est, quæ esset hæc causa malitiæ, et [3] cur hoc eveniret ? At illi responderunt : ‘ Nisi infantem sine patre [4] inveneris, ut habeas qui occidatur,′ et arx [5] de suo sanguine [6] conspergatur, nunquam ædificabitur in æternum.’ Guorthigerni.

Cap. XLIII. [7] Rex vero concite′ legatos [8] suos ex consilio magorum misit per universam Britanniam, utrum infantem sine patre invenirent. [9] At illi′ lustrando omnes provincias regionesque plurimas, venerunt ad Campum [10] Electi, qui est in regione quæ vocatur [11] Glevising.[a] Et pilæ ludum [12] agebant pueri : [13] et ecce duo inter se litigabant, dixitque alter alteri : ‘ O homo sine patre, B bonum non habebis.’ [14] Et illi de puero [15] diligenter percunctantes ad pueros ejusque′ matrem, [16] sciscitabantur si patrem haberet. [17] At illa negavit, et dixit, ‘ Nescio quomodo in utero meo est conceptus ; sed unum scio, quia virum non cognovi unquam.’ Et juravit [18] illis patrem non habere : [19] timebat enim ne occideretur a rege iniquo, ideo patrem fateri noluit :′ [20] qui legati′ secum eum duxere usque ad Guorthigirnum regem, [21] quem insinuaverunt regi [22] eum puerum sic inveniri.′ De puero sine patre nato.

Cap. XLIV. [23] In crastino conventio facta est, ut puer interficeretur. Et puer dixit [24] regi : [25] ‘ Cur viri tui me ad te detulerunt ?’ Cui rex ait : ‘ Ut interficiaris, et sanguis tuus circa arcem istam aspergatur, ut possit ædificari.’ Respondit puer regi :′ ‘ Quis tibi [26] demonstravit hoc′ ?’ Et [27] rex : ‘ Magi mei C mihi dixerunt.’ [28] Cui dixit puer : ‘ Ad me vocentur.’ Et invitati sunt magi : [29] quibus et′ dixit : ‘ Quis vobis revelavit ut ista arx a sanguine [30] aspergeretur ; et nisi aspergeretur a sanguine meo, [31] nunquam ædificaretur′ ? Sed hoc [32] cognoscam : quis [33] e vobis′ de me palam fecit.’ [34] Et iterum puer dixit : ‘ Modo tibi [35] et enucleabo, rex,′ et in veritate tibi omnia [36] pandam : sed [37] ad magos tuos percunctor, quid in pavimento istius loci est ? [38] Placet enim mihi′ ut tibi ostendant quid sub pavimento habetur.’ At illi dixerunt : ‘ Nescimus [39] nos.’ Et ille dixit : [40] ‘ Ego comperior. Stagnum in medio pavimenti est ; venite et fodite et sic invenietis.’ [41] Foderunt itaque, et sic invenerunt ut puer prædixerat. Iterum′ dixit ad magos : ‘ Proferte mihi quid est in stagno ?’ [42] Magi siluerunt, et non potuerunt revelare illi. [43] At ille dixit illis : ‘ Ego vobis [44] propalabo. D Duo vasa [45] conclusa sunt in eo,′ et sic invenietis.’ Venerunt, et viderunt sic. Et puer ad magos dixit : ‘ Quid in vasis [46] clausum habetur ?’ [47] Et ipsi siluerunt, et non potuerunt revelare [48] puero. At ille [49] asserit : ‘ In medio eorum tentorium est : separate ea [50] et sic invenietis.’ Et rex separari jussit : et′ sic inventum est tentorium complicatum ut dixerat. [51] Iterum puer′ interrogavit magos [52] : ‘ Quid est in medio tentorii ? [53] Jam nunc [54] enarrate.’ Et non potuerunt [55]. Dixitque puer :′ ‘ Duo vermes sunt in eo, unus albus et [56] unus rufus. Tentorium [57] nunc expandite.’ Et extenderunt : duoque vermes [58] in eo′ dormientes inventi sunt. Et dixit puer : ‘ Expectate et considerate quid [59] facturi vermes [60] sunt.’ Evigilantes autem, cœperunt alter alterum expellere, insimulque De pueri prophetia.

rediens ad S. Germanum, ad pedes ejus cecidit veniam postulans, atque pro illata a patre suo et sorore S. Germano calumnia, terram ipsam, in qua prædictus episcopus obprobium tale sustinuit, in æternum suam fieri sanxivit. Unde et in memoriam S. Germani Guarenniaun nomen accepit ; quod Latine sonat, ‘ calumnia juste retorta ;’ quoniam cum episcopum vituperare putaverat, semet ipsum vituperio afficit. Guortemir vero, accepto regno, hostibus viriliter obsistit ; qui tantæ magnitudinis esse et virtutis dicebatur, ut siquando iratus in bello dimicaret, accepta arbore, cum frondibus funditus extirparet, et cum ea solo tenus adversarios prosterneret : cum tali enim arbore Horsam satellitem bellicosum,

[c] Iterum in nodum insolubilem incidimus. Germanus secundo Galliam rediit A. 448, obiitque A. 449. Hengistum ad Britanniam invitaverat Vortigernus regnante Marciano, secundum Bedam, id est A. 449 vel 450: at hic, jam ante recessum Germani mortem obiisse dicitur Vortigernus. Quod ad Patricium attinet, si in hac narratione quid veri sit, necesse est id post primam Germani reversionem in Galliam evenisse, scilicet circiter A. 430: nam, secundum Prosperum, Palladius a papa Celestino Hiberniam missus est A. 431; et huic, A. 432, successisse creditur Patricius. A Quindecim annis in captivitate, in vigesimo quinto anno [1] ab Amatheo′ sancto episcopo subrogatur. Octoginta quinque annorum in Hibernia prædicavit[2]. Res autem exigebat amplius loqui de S. Patricio, sed tamen pro compendio sermonis volui breviare.[a]

Cap. [3] LXIII. In [4] illo tempore′ Saxones invalescebant[5], et crescebant [6] non modice′ in Britannia. Mortuo autem Hengisto, Ochta filius ejus transivit de sinistrali parte Britanniæ ad [7] regem Cantuariorum ;′ et de ipso orti sunt reges [8] illius patriæ.′ [9] Artur pugnabat contra illos in illis diebus, [10] videlicet Saxones,′ cum regibus Britonum: [11] sed ipse dux erat bellorum, [12] et in omnibus bellis victor extitit.′ [13] Artur, Latine translatum, sonat ‘ursum horribilem,’ vel ‘malleum ferreum,’ quo confringuntur molæ leonum : Mab Uter, Britannice, ‘filius horri- B bilis,’ Latine ; quoniam a pueritia sua crudelis fuit.′ De Arturo, et A. 488.

Cap. LXIV. Primum bellum fuit in ostium fluminis quod dicitur [14] Glem.[b] Secundum et tertium et quartum et quintum super aliud flumen quod [15] vocatur Duglas, quod′ est in regione [16] Linuis. Sextum bellum super flumen quod vocatur [17] Bassas. Septimum bellum fuit in silva [18] Calidonis, id est, [19] Cat coit Celidon. Octavum fuit bellum in castello [20] Gunnion ; in quo Arthur portavit imaginem [21] crucis Christi et′ Sanctæ Mariæ [22] semper virginis, super humeros suos : et pagani versi sunt in fugam in illo die ; [23] et multi ceciderunt, plagaque magna super eos venit′ per virtutem Domini nostri Jesu Christi, [24] sanctæque suæ genetricis.′ [25] Nam Arthur Ierosolimam perrexit, et ibi crucem ad quantitatem salutiferæ crucis fecit, et ibi consecrata est ; et per tres continuos dies C jejunavit, vigilavit, et oravit coram Cruce Dominica, ut ei Dominus victoriam daret per hoc signum de paganis ; quod et factum est : atque secum imaginem S. Mariæ detulit, cujus fracturæ adhuc apud Wedale in magna veneratione servantur. We-dale, Anglice ; Vallis-doloris, Latine : Wedale est villa in provincia Lodonesie, nunc vero juris episcopi S. Andreæ Scotiæ, VI. milliaria ab occidentali parte, ab illo quondam nobili et eximio monasterio de Meilros.′ [26] Nonumque bellum gestum est in urbe Legionis[27]. Decimum [28] bellum gestum est′ in littore fluminis quod vocatur [29] Ribroit. Undecimum [30] bellum fuit′ in monte de bellis ejus.

[1′] a Matheo N. [2] Hic ut mihi videtur contradicit sibimet ipsi : sed aliter audivimus et scripta reperimus. Quadragenarius erat quando de captivitate exivit, et per XL. annos didicit et Deo servivit : et XL. prædicavit. In his tribus quadragenariis vero maxime Patricius æquatur Moysi : nam sicut Moyses fuit [in B.] XL. annis in domo Pharaonis velut in captivitate, et XL. in exilio in terra Madian, et XL. in prædicatione et in ducatu populi ; ita Patricius XL. in exilio inter Gallos, et XL. prædicando, et miracula faciendo, atque resistendo Loygere regi et magis ejus, sicut Moyses Pharaoni et suis magis, viriliter et indefesse Deo servivit. Nam bene potest fieri illum fuisse in captivitate per XV. annos, et quadragenarius egressus fuisse. Sed hoc attende : Moyses quadragenarius fuit quando de Egypto exivit et in fugam ; ad Egyptum, propter populos Dei missus, rediit post XL. annos : et ipse Patricius quadragenarius erat quando de Roma in fugam exivit ; et post XL. annos missus ad populum Dei excipiendum de manu Diaboli ad Hiberniam rediit : et uterque per XL. annos in stadio prædicationis manserunt, et simili fine, et jejunio non dissimili. *D. marg. Cap. LXX. Tertium [1] miraculum, stagnum [a] calidum quod est in regione [2] Huiccorum. Et muro ambitur ex latere et lapide facto; et in eo vadunt homines per omne tempus ad lavandum, et unicuique sicut placuerit illi lavacrum, sic fit sibi secundum [3] voluptatem suam: si voluerit [4] esse balneum′ frigidum, [5] erit; si calidum, [6] erit. A

Cap. LXXI. Quartum [7] miraculum est, fontes [8] de salo [b]; a quibus fontibus sal [9] decoquitur, aqua extracta, unde omnia′ cibaria saliuntur; et non sunt prope mari, sed de terra emergunt.[c]

Cap. LXXII. Aliud miraculum est [10] Donrighabren, id est, [d] duo reges Sabrinæ. Quando inundatur mare ad [11] sissam in hostium Sabrinæ, duo cumuli spumarum congregantur separatim, et bellum faciunt inter se [12] in modum arietum: et procedit unusquisque ad alterum, et collidunt se′ ad invicem. Et iterum [13] recedit alter′ ab altero, [14] et iterum′ procedunt [15] ex uno cumulo super omnem faciem maris.′ In unaquaque [16] sissa hoc faciunt ab initio mundi usque in [17] hodiernum diem. B

Cap. LXXIII. Aliud miraculum est [18] stagni Livane,′ [19] quod est Aperlin′ [20] Livan: [e] ostium fluminis illius fluit in Sabrina, et quando inundatur Sabrina ad [21] sissam, [22] et mare similiter, inundatur in ostio supradicti fluminis, et in ostio stagni recipitur in modum voraginis[23], et mare′ non vadit sursum. Et est litus juxta flumen; et [24] quando Sabrina inundatur ad sissam,′ [25] istud litus non tegitur: et quando recedit mare, et Sabrina,′ [26] tunc stagnum′ [27] Liguane eructat omne quod devoravit de mari, et litus istud tegitur: et [28] instar montis in una eructat unda et [29] rumpit. Et si fuerit exercitus totius regionis in qua est [30] istud litus,′ et direxerit faciem [31] suam contra undam, et [32] unda trahit exercitum′ per vim [33] humoris, repletis vestibus, et equi similiter trahuntur. Si [34] supradictus exercitus terga versus fuerit contra [35] eam, non nocet ei unda. Et quando recesserit mare totum, tunc litus quod unda tegit retro [36] denudatur, et mare recedit ab ipso. C

Cap. LXXIV. Est aliud [37] mirabile in regione [38] Cinloipiauc. Est ibi [f] fons nomine [39] Fontaun Guorhelic. Non fluit rivus ex eo neque in eo: [40] et vadunt homines piscari ad fontem. Alii vadunt in [41] fonte ad partem Orientis, et deducunt pisces ex ea parte; alii ad dexteram, alii ad sinistram, [42] ad Occidentemque, [43] et [44] trahuntur pisces ab unaquaque parte:′ et aliud genus piscium trahitur ex omnibus partibus. Magnum mirabile, pisces [45] inveniri in [46] fontem dum non flumen fluit in eo, neque ex eo; et in eo inveniuntur IIII^{or} genera piscium, et non est de magnitudine neque de profunditate. Profunditas [47] illius usque [48] ad genua, xx. pedes [49] in longitudine et latitudine; ripas altas [50] habet [51] in omni parte. D

Cap. LXXV. Juxta flumen quod vocatur [52] Goy [g], poma inveniuntur super [g] fraxinum, in [53] proclivo saltus, qui est prope [54] hostium fluminis.

A Cap. LXXVI. Est aliud mirabile in regione quæ [1] dicitur [a] Guent. Est ibi fovea, [2] a qua ventus flat [3] per omne tempus sine intermissione; et quando non flat ventus in tempore æstatis, de illa fovea incessanter flat, [4] ita ut nemo possit sustinere neque ante [5] foveam, [6] pro frigiditate:′ et [7] vocatur nomen ejus [8]‘ Huit guint’ Brittannico sermone, Latine autem ‘ flatio venti.’ Magnum [9] mirabile est [10] ventum de terra flare.

Cap. LXXVII. Est aliud mirabile in [11] Guhir [A], altare quod est in loco qui dicitur [12] Loin garth [b], quod nutu Dei fulcitur. [13] Fabulam [14] istius altaris melius mihi videtur narrare quam reticere. Factum est autem dum sanctus [15] Eltutus orabat in spelunca [16] sua, quæ est juxta mare quod adluit terram supradicti loci, os [17] hujus speluncæ ad mare est, et ecce navis navigabat ad se de mari, B et duo viri [18] remigantes eam, et corpus [19] cujusdam sancti hominis erat cum illis in [20] nave, et altare [21] supra faciem ejus quod nutu Dei fulciebatur; et processit homo Dei [22] in obviam illorum:′ et corpus sancti hominis [23] de navi duxerunt,′ et altare inseparabiliter supra faciem sancti corporis stabat. Et dixerunt ad sanctum Eltutum: [24]‘ Iste homo Dei [25] præcepit nobis ut deduceremus [26] eum ad te, et sepeliremus [27] eum tecum. Et nomen ejus non reveles ulli homini, ut non jurent per [28] eum homines.’ Et sepelierunt eum. Et post sepulturam illi duo viri reversi sunt ad navim, et navigaverunt. At ille sanctus Eltutus ecclesiam fundavit circa corpus sancti hominis et circa altare; et manet usque in hodiernum diem altare [29] potestate Dei [30] fulcitum. Venit quidam regulus ut probaret, portans virgam in manu sua; [31] curvavit eam circa altare, et C tenuit [32] ambabus manibus virgam ex utraque parte, et traxit [33] ad se:′ et sic veritatem [34] hujus rei probavit. [35] Sed ille postea [36] mensem integrum non vixit. Alter [37] autem sub altare aspexit, et aciem oculorum [38] ejus amisit, et ante mensem integrum [39] vitam finivit.

Cap. LXXVIII. Est autem aliud mirabile in [40] supradicta regione, [41] id est′ Guent. [c] Est ibi fons juxta [42] vallem putei [43] Maurit, et lignum in medio fontis: et lavant homines manus suas cum faciebus suis, et lignum sub pedibus [44] suis habent quando lavant: nam et ego vidi et probavi. Quando mare inundatur ad malinam, extenditur Sabrina super omnem maritimam [45] ripam et tegit, et usque [46] deducitur ad fontem, et impletur fons de [47] sissa Sabrinæ, et trahit lignum secum [48] usque ad mare magnum, et per [49] spacia trium D dierum in mare [50] invenitur, et in quarto die in supradicto fonte invenitur. Factum est autem ut unus de rusticis sepeliret *eum in terra ad probandum; et * in IIII^to^ die inventus est in fonte, et ille rusticus qui eum [51] abscondit et sepelivit [52] statim defunctus est.′

Cap. LXXIX. Est aliud mirabile in regione quæ dicitur [d] Buelt. Est ibi cumulus lapidum, et unus [53] lapis superpositus super congestum cum vestigio canis in eo. Quando venatus est [54] porcus [55] Terit, impressit [56] Cabal, qui erat canis [57] Arturi militis, vestigium in lapide. Et [58] Artur postea [59] congregavit congestum lapidum sub lapide in quo erat vestigium canis sui; et vocatur Carncabal. Et veniunt homines et tollunt lapidem in manibus suis per spatium diei et noctis, et in crastino [1] invenitur super congestum suum. A Cap. LXXX. Est aliud [2] miraculum. In regione [3] Ercing[a] habetur [4] sepulchrum juxta fontem qui [5] vocatur [6] Oculus [7] Amr; et viri nomen qui sepultus est in tumulo sic vocabatur [8] Amr: filius Arturi militis erat, et ipse occidit eum [9] ibidem et sepelivit. Et veniunt homines ad mensurandum tumulum. In longitudine [10] habet aliquando [11] VII. pedes, aliquando XV., aliquando XII., aliquando IX. In qua mensura metieris eum in ista vice, iterum non invenies eum in una mensura: et ego [12] ipse probavi.

[13] DE MIRABILIBUS MONÆ INSULÆ.′ B

Cap. LXXXI. Primum miraculum est [b] litus sine mare.

Cap. LXXXII. Secundum [14] miraculum: est [c] ibi mons qui giratur tribus vicibus in anno.

Cap. LXXXIII. Tertium [15] miraculum est [d] vadum [16] ibi: quando inundatur mare, et ipse inundatur; et quando decrescit mare et ipse minuitur.

Cap. LXXXIV. Quartum [17] est [18] miraculum. Est′ lapis [e] qui ambulat in nocturnis temporibus super vallem [19] Chenin: et [20] projectus est olim in voragine [21] Polkerist, [22] qui est in medio′ pelagi quod vocatur [23] Mœnei, et [24] crastino supra ripam supradictæ vallis sine dubio inventus est.

VENERABILIS BAEDÆ

PRESBYTERI ANGLO-SAXONIS

SEXTA ÆTAS.[c]

ANNO Cæsaris Augusti [d]XLII., a morte vero Cleopatræ et Antonii quando et Ægyptus in provinciam versa est anno XXVII., Olympiadis C.XCIIII. anno A.M. 3952. A.C. 1.

[a] Chronicon de sex ætatibus sæculi libro 'De Ratione Temporum,' An. 725. conscripto, subjecit Baeda. Priora omnia a proposito nostro aliena sunt. Sextam vero ætatem, scilicet ab Incarnatione Christi ad scriptoris ipsius tempora, quoniam nonnulla aliter quam in Historia ejus Ecclesiastica disposita habet, ex editione Smithiana cum duobus codicibus MSS. penes Dom. T. Phillipps Baronettum litterisque A. et B. designatis collatam, hic damus. Plura vero de hac re in præfatione nostra reperies.

'Operum autem Baedæ, quæ jam palam proferimus, agmen ducit Chronicon, seu de sex hujus sæculi ætatibus, Libri de Ratione Temporum pars historica. Quam quidem inter Baedæ Opera Coloniæ Agrippinæ An. 1612 editam, nunc ad Codd. quatuor MSS. emaculatam emitto: quorum duo Oxoniis in Bibliothecis Bodleiana et Magdalenensi, alius in Regia Westmonasterii, quartus in Johannensi Cantabrigiæ servatur. Contulimus etiam libellum hunc olim impressum 'Parisius in Bellovisu A.D. 1507, die 5 Aprilis pro Johanne Petit commorante in vico Divi Jacobi sub Leone argenteo.' Præterea licet codices tam impressi quam MSS. annos mundi juxta Hebræam solummodo veritatem exhibent, adjecimus quoque in margine LXX. interpretum supputationem, et per totam sextam ætatem, quam Christus suo consecravit adventu, annos æræ Christianæ.'

'De Natura Rerum et Ratione Temporum duos quondam stricto sermone libellos discentibus, ut rebar, necessarios composui. Quos cum fratribus quibusdam dare atque exponere cœpissem, dicebant eos brevius multo digestos esse quam vellent, maxime illum de Temporibus, cujus propter rationem Paschæ potius videbatur usus indigere: suadebantque mihi, latius aliqua de temporum statu, cursu, ac fine disserere. Quibus concitus parens, perspectis patrum venerabilium scriptis, prolixiorem de temporibus librum edidi, prout Ipso largiente potui, qui æternus permanens tempora quando voluit constituit, et qui novit temporum fines: imo Ipse labentibus temporum curriculis finem cum voluerit imponet. In quo videlicet opere, ne quem forte offenderet, quod Hebraicam magis veritatem quam LXX. translatorum editionem in sæculi procedentis serie secutus sim; et illam quoque per omnia quoties discrepare videbatur inserui, ut legens quisque simul utrumque conspiciat, et quod amplius sequendum putat eligat. Fixa autem mihi stat sententia, quam a nullo prudentium redarguendam autumo, ut sicut reverendissimus ejusdem Hebraicæ veritatis interpres obtrectatoribus sui operis: 'Non damno, inquit, non reprehendo LXX. sed omnibus his Apostolos præfero:' ita et ego confidenter profitear, quia non reprehendo veteres Chronographos, qui translationem LXX. interpretum modo secuti esse, modo prout libuit probantur habuisse contemptui, sicut etiam in processu hujusce opusculi nostri monstrabitur; sed omnibus his Hebraicæ veritatis integram præfero puritatem, quam præ-eminentissimi doctorum, Hieronymus in libris Hebraicarum quæstionum, Augustinus in libro de Civitate Dei, Eusebius ipse Chronographus in tertio Historiæ Ecclesiasticæ libro ex verbis Josephi historici adversus Appionem Grammaticum scribentis, breviorem temporum seriem quam in LXX. editione vulgo fertur continere comprobant. Neque hanc amplius sequendam, etiam ii qui LXX. magnis divinisque laudibus ad cœlos tollunt, dubitant: quorum quisque dicta perspexerit, credo mox nostro labori calumniam facere desistet, si non hunc tamen lividis, quod absit, contempletur obtutibus. Verum utcunque ferant hæc mea scripta legentes, primo editum pro captu meo libellum tibi, dilectissime [1]Abbas [A] Huetbercte, percurrendum atque examinandum offero, multum deprecans, ut si quid in eo tu vituperabile deprehenderis, statim mihi corrigendum insinues: at ubi ordinate ac rationabiliter actum videris, mecum Deo qui donavit et sine quo nihil possumus facere, devotus gratias agas. Si quem sane vel illud offendit, cur aliquid de hujusmodi negotio tentare præsumpserim, quare de his quæ sparsim in veterum scriptis inveniri poterant, ipse novum opus condere studuerim, audiat, dicente S. Augustino: 'Quia ideo necesse est plures a pluribus fieri libros diverso stilo, non diversa fide, etiam de quæstionibus eisdem, ut ad plurimos res ipsa perveniat, ad alios sic, ad alios autem sic.' Audiat et me pro me simpliciter respondentem: Cui displicet, vel superfluum videtur, quod hæc rogatu fratrum undecunque collegi, uniusque libelli tenore conclusi, dimittat ea legenda, si qui velint, et ipse de communibus patrum fontibus, quæ sibi suisque sufficere arbitretur hauriens, mecum nihilominus debitæ fraternitatis intemerata jura custodiat.'

[d] Hos annos Beda supputat a cæde Cæsaris,

A.M. A.C. tertio, ab urbe autem condita anno [a]DCC.LII., id est, eo anno, quo compressis A cunctarum per orbem terræ gentium motibus, firmissimam verissimamque pacem ordinatione Dei Cæsar composuit, Jesus Christus filius Dei sextam mundi ætatem suo consecravit adventu. Anno imperii Augusti XLVII. Herodes morbo intercutis aquæ, et scatentibus toto corpore vermibus miserabiliter et digne moritur; pro quo substitutus ab Augusto filius ejus Archelaus, regnavit annis IX., id est, usque ad ipsius Augusti finem. Tunc enim non ferentibus ultra, sed accusantibus apud Augustum ferocitatem ejus Judæis, in Viennam urbem Galliæ relegatur, et ad minuendam Judaici regni potentiam, insolentiamque domandam, quatuor fratres ejus pro eo sunt tetrarchæ creati, Herodes, Antipater, Lysias et Philippus; quorum Philippus, et Herodes, qui Antipas prius nuncupabatur, etiam vivente Archelao tetrarchæ fuerant ordinati.[b] B

3993. 42. Gajus cognomento Caligula, regnavit annos [2]III. et menses X., dies VIII. Hic Herodem Agrippam amicum suum vinculis liberatum, regem Judææ facit, qui D permanet in regno annis VII., id est, usque ad quartum Claudii annum: quo ab angelo percusso, successit in regnum filius ejus Agrippa, et usque ad exterminium Judæorum XXVI. annis perseverat. unde Nativitas Christi incidit in annum periodi Julianæ 4712, duos annos ante vulgarem æram Dionysianam, atque in hoc anno consentiunt reliquæ æræ, quas Beda hic memorat. Sola restat quæstio, an hic annus in computo includendus sit. Scaligeri editio Chronicorum Eusebii hunc annum excludens, æram Christi a 43 Augusti orditur; sed Henrici Stephani editio ipsum annum 42 includit, quod faciunt etiam reliqui fere chronologi mediarum ætatum. Adeo incertum est apud nuperos eruditos hujus æræ Christianæ initium, ut liberum cuique sit, utrum horum annorum, currentem an integrum, velit eligere. Ego currentis anni computo accedo, non solum quod Bedæ numeris in hoc Chronico melius conveniat, sed etiam quod cum anno periodi Julianæ, quo æra Evangelica et vera ponitur, coincidat. Smithius.

[a] Quod supra notatum est ad A. M. 3468, sc. Bedam regibus Romanorum 241 annos tantum tribuisse, suum hic usum aperit. Nam si anni regum Romanorum fuerint 243, annus nati Christi non fuerit urbis conditæ 752, sed 754. Quare probabile est numerum 243 errorem esse in codd. Bedæ. S.

Hermes scripsit librum qui dicitur Pastor, in quo præceptum angeli continet, ut Pascha die Dominico celebraretur. Polycarpus Romam veniens multos ab hæretica labe castigavit, qui Valentini et Cerdonis fuerant nuper doctrina corrupti.

Hi primum æquo jure imperium administraverunt, cum usque ad hoc tempus singuli Augusti fuerint: bellum deinde contra Parthos admirabili virtute et felicitate gesserunt. Persecutione orta in Asia Polycarpus et Pionius fecere martyrium: in Gallia quoque plurimi gloriose pro Christo sanguinem fudere. Nec multo post vindex scelerum lues multas late provincias, Italiam E maxime Romamque vastavit. Defuncto Commodo fratre, Antoninus Commodum filium suum consortem regni facit. A rex, missa ad Eleutherum Romæ episcopum epistola, ut Christianus efficiatur impetrat. Apollinaris Asianus Hierapoli, et Dionysius Corinthi, clari habentur episcopi. A.M. 4144. A.C. 193.

L. Antoninus Commodus post mortem patris regnavit annos XIII. Hic adversum Germanos bellum feliciter gessit, cæterum ipse per omnia luxuriæ et obscœnitati mancipatus nihil paternæ virtutis et pietatis simile gessit. Irenæus episcopus Lugdunensis insignis habetur. Commodus Imperator, colossi capite sublato, suæ imaginis caput ei jussit imponi. 4144. 193.

Ælius Pertinax menses VI. Hic Juliani jurisperiti scelere occiditur in palatio, quem mense septimo postquam cœperat imperare, Severus apud pontem Milvium bello [1]victum interfecit. Victor decimus tertius Romæ episcopus datis B late libellis constituit Pascha die Dominico celebrari, sicut et prædecessor ejus Eleutherus a quinta decima luna primi mensis usque in vicesimam primam. Cujus decretis favens Theophilus Cæsareæ Palæstinæ episcopus, scripsit adversus eos qui quarta decima luna cum Judæis Pascha [2]celebrant, cum cæteris qui in eodem concilio aderant episcopis, synodicam et valde utilem epistolam. 4145. 194.

Severus [a]Pertinax annos [3]XVIII. Clemens Alexandrinæ ecclesiæ presbyter, et Pantænus Stoicus philosophus, in disputatione dogmatis nostri disertissimi habentur. Narcissus Hierosolymorum episcopus, et Theophilus Cæsareensis, Polycarpus quoque et Bachylus, Asianæ provinciæ episcopi insignes habentur. Persecutione in Christianos facta, plurimi per diversas provincias, inter quos et Leonides pater Origenis, martyrio coronati sunt. Clodio Albino, qui se in C Gallia Cæsarem fecerat, apud Lugdunum interfecto, [4]Severus in Britannias bellum transfert, ubi ut receptas provincias ab incursione barbarica faceret securiores, magnam fossam, firmissimumque vallum crebris insuper turribus communitum per [b]C.XXXII. millia passuum a mari usque ad mare duxit, et Eburaci obiit. Ibi ergo Verus et Commodus incipiunt simul regnare A. 156, et longe alia temporum ratio instituitur. Vereor ne frustra fuerit qui hos calculos conciliare nitatur. Ordo narrationis de Lucio in hac periodo Chronici videtur favere opinioni quæ Commodum filium loco Commodi fratris ponit. Quo concesso, secundum hujus loci calculum, nihil obstat quo minus Lucius ad Eleutherum in principio pontificatus sui literas mittere potuerit: Verba autem narrationis in Hist. Eccles. fratrem Commodum volunt, sicut et calculus ibidem Lucium ad Eleutherum scribere in fratris tempore admittit. Sed de hac re v. plura ad Hist. Eccl. I. 4. Nota interim, quod hanc de Lucio historiam Beda putatur sumsisse e 'Libro Pontificali,' de quo libro præter Labbeum in Conc. t. i. et de Script. Eccl. t. i. vide Lambecium in Comment. ad Biblioth. Vindob. lib. II. p. 924, &c. Undecunque desumpta sit, consentiunt omnes Bedam primum illam Chronicis inseruisse, post eum Ado, Hermannus Contractus, &c. suis illam ediderunt. S.

Hic adversus ecclesiarum sacerdotes et clericos, id est doctores, persecutionem exercet, maxime propter Christianam Alexandri cui successerat, et Mammeæ matris ejus familiam, vel præcipue propter Origenem presbyterum. Pontianus et Antherus Romanæ urbis episcopi martyrio coronati, et in cœmeterio Calixti sunt sepulti.

Lucianus presbyter, cui revelavit Deus [a]septimo Honorii principis anno locum sepulchri et reliquiarum beati protomartyris Stephani et Gamalielis ac Nicodemi, qui in Evangelio et in Actibus Apostolorum leguntur, scripsit ipsam revelationem [b]Græco sermone ad omnium ecclesiarum personam. Quam revelationem Avitus presbyter, homo Hispanus genere, in Latinum vertit eloquium, et adjecta epistola sua per Orosium presbyterum Occidentalibus dedit. Nam mox ut discessere Romani, advectus navibus prior hostis, quasi maturam segetem, obvia quæque sibi cædit, calcat, devorat. Iterum petiti auxilia Romani advolant, et cæsum hostem trans maria fugant, conjunctisque sibi Brittanis murum, non terra ut ante, pulvereum, sed saxo solidum, inter civitates quæ ibidem ob metum hostium fuerant factæ, a mari usque ad mare collocant. Sed et in litore meridiano maris, quia et inde hostis timebatur, turres per intervalla ad prospectum maris statuunt; sic valedicunt sociis tanquam ultra non reversuri. [a] Baronius hanc revelationem figit ad annum Honorii vigesimum primum, et mendum dicit irrepsisse in hunc locum Bedæ, quod septimo illam Honorii ponat; sed cave, ne putes differentiam esse tot annorum; Beda enim in hac periodo non numerat annos Honorii ab initio imperii, sed ab eo tantum tempore quo cum Theodosio regnavit; 'Honorius,' inquit, 'cum Theodosio minore,' &c. Quo modo et Baronius ipse ad 21 annum Honorii jungit hic octavum Theodosii; annos sc. quibus Honorius et Theodosius simul imperium tenuerunt, Beda ponit sub Honorii nomine, Baronius sub Theodosii. Quod restat differentiæ, unius tantum est anni, non lapsu aliquo, sed varietate calculi. Atque hoc eo dignius est notatu, quod in annis imperatoriis horum temporum non Baronius solum, sed alii etiam viri docti humanum passi sunt. S.

Et post hæc missus ab imperatore Theodorus Exarchus, tulit Martinum papam de ecclesia Constantiniana, perduxitque Constantinopolim; qui post hæc relegatus [a] Chersonam ibidem vitam finivit, multis in eodem loco virtutum signis usque hodie refulgens. Facta est autem synodus præfata anno nono imperii Constantini, mense Octobri, Indictione octava. Constantinus princeps Vitaliano papa nuper ordinato, misit beato Petro apostolo evangelia aurea gemmis albis miræ magnitudinis in circuitu ornata; ipse post aliquot annos, id est, per Indictionem sextam veniens Romam, obtulit super altare ipsius pallium auro textile, toto exercitu cum cereis ecclesiam intrante. Sequente anno facta est eclipsis [^] solis quam nostra ætas meminit, quasi decima hora diei, quinto Nonas Maias. [×] Theodorus archiepiscopus et Hadrianus abbas, vir æque doctissimus, a Vitaliano missi Brittaniam, plurimas ecclesias Anglorum doctrinæ ecclesiasticæ fruge fœcundaverunt. Constantinus post plurimas et inauditas deprædationes provinciis factas occisus in balneo periit Indictione duodecima. Nec longo post tempore etiam Vitalianus papa cœlestia regna petiit. B C

4639. 688. Constantinus filius Constantini superioris regis annis XVII. Saraceni Siciliam invadunt, et præda nimia secum ablata mox Alexandriam redeunt. Agatho papa ex rogatu Constantini, Heraclii, et Tyberii principum piissimorum, misit in regiam urbem legatos suos, in quibus erat Joannes Romanæ ecclesiæ tunc diaconus, non longe post episcopus, pro adunatione facienda sanctarum Dei ecclesiarum. Qui benignissime suscepti a reverentissimo fidei catholicæ defensore Constantino, jussi sunt remissis disputationibus philosophicis pacifico colloquio de fide vera perquirere, datis eis de bibliotheca Constantinopolitana cunctis antiquorum patrum quos petebant libellis. Adfuerunt autem et episcopi CL. præsidente Georgio patriarcha regiæ urbis, et Antiochiæ Macario. Et convicti sunt qui unam voluntatem et operationem astruebant in Christo falsasse patrum catholicorum dicta perplurima. Finito autem conflictu Georgius correctus est, Macarius vero cum suis sequacibus, simul et prædecessoribus Cyro, Sergio, Honorio, Pyrrho, Paulo et Petro anathematizatus, et in locum ejus Theophanius abbas de Sicilia Antiochiæ episcopus factus. Tantaque gratia legatos catholicæ pacis comitata est, ut Joannes Portuensis episcopus qui erat unus ex ipsis, dominica octavarum Paschæ missas publicas in ecclesia S. Sophiæ coram principe et patriarcha Latine celebraret. Hæc est sexta synodus universalis Constantinopoli [b] celebrata et Græco sermone conscripta temporibus papæ D E

A Agathonis, exequente ac residente piissimo principe Constantino intra palatium suum, simulque legatis apostolicæ sedis et episcopis C.L. residentibus. Prima enim universalis synodus in Nicæa congregata est contra Arium, CCC.XVIII. patrum, temporibus Julii papæ, sub Constantino principe. Secunda in Constantinopoli C.L. patrum, contra Macedonium et Eudoxium, temporibus Damasi papæ et Gratiani principis, quando Nectarius eidem urbi est ordinatus episcopus. Tertia in Epheso CC. patrum, contra Nestorium Augustæ urbis episcopum, sub Theodosio magno principe et papa Cœlestino. Quarta in Chalcedone, patrum DC.XXX. sub Leone papa, temporibus Martiani principis, contra Eutychem nefandissimorum præsulem monachorum. Quinta item in Constantinopoli, temporibus Vigilii papæ, sub Justiniano principe, contra Theodorum et omnes hæreB ticos. Sexta hæc de qua in præsenti diximus. [x] Sancta et perpetua virgo Christi Ædilthryda, filia Annæ regis Anglorum, et primo alteri viro permagnifico, et post Ecfrido regi conjunx data, postquam XII. annos thorum incorrupta servavit maritalem, post reginam sumpto velamine sacro virgo sanctimonialis efficitur: nec mora etiam virginum mater et nutrix pia sanctarum, accepto in construendum monasterium loco quem Elge vocant; cujus merita vivacia testatur etiam mortua caro, quæ post XVI. annos sepulturæ cum veste qua involuta est incorrupta reperitur. Justinianus minor filius Constantini annos X. Hic constituit pacem cum Saracenis decennio terra marique. Sed et provincia Africa subjugata est Romano imperio, quæ fuerat tenta a Saracenis, ipsa quoque Carthagine ab eis capta et C destructa. Hic beatæ memoriæ pontificem Romanæ ecclesiæ Sergium, quia [a] erraticæ suæ synodo, quam Constantinopoli fecerat, favere et subscribere noluisset, misso et Zacharia protospatario suo jussit Constantinopolim deportari. Sed prævenit militia Ravennatis urbis vicinarumque partium jussa principis nefanda, et eundem Zachariam contumeliis et injuriis ab urbe Roma repulit. 4649. 698.

Idem papa Sergius ordinavit venerabilem virum [x] Uilbrordum cognomine Clementem, Fresonum genti episcopum, in qua usque hodie pro æterna patria peregrinus, est enim de Brittania gentis Anglorum, innumera quotidie diabolo detrimenta et Christianæ fidei facit augmenta. captivitate vastavit, cumque non esset qui ejus impetui resisteret, apostolicus papa Joannes qui Sergio successerat, missis ad eum sacerdotibus ac donariis perplurimis, universos redemit captivos, atque hostes domum redire fecit. Cui successit alius Joannes, qui inter multa operum illustrium, fecit oratorium Sanctæ Dei [1]genitrici opere pulcherrimo intra ecclesiam B. Petri apostoli. Hereberctus rex Longobardorum multas [2]cortes et patrimonia Alpium Cottiarum, quæ quondam ad jus pertinebant apostolicæ sedis sed a Longobardis multo tempore fuerant ablata, restituit juri ejusdem sedis, et hanc donationem aureis scriptam literis Romam direxit. 4665. 714. Justinianus secundo cum Tiberio filio annos [a]VI. Hic auxilio Terbelli regis Vulgarorum regnum recipiens, occidit eos qui se expulerant patritios, et Leonem qui locum ejus usurpaverat, necnon et successorem ejus Tiberium, qui eum de regno ejectum, toto quo ipse regnabat tempore, in eadem civitate in custodia tenuerat. Callinicum vero patriarcham erutis oculis misit Romam, et dedit episcopatum Cyro qui erat abbas in Ponto, eumque alebat exulem. Hic Constantinum papam ad se venire jubens honorifice suscepit ac remisit, ita ut eum die Dominica missas sibi facere jubens communionem de manu ejus acceperit: quem prostratus in terra pro suis peccatis intercedere rogans, cuncta ecclesiæ privilegia renovavit. Qui cum exercitum mitteret in Pontum, multum prohibente papa apostolico, ad comprehendendum Philippicum quem ibi relegaverat, conversus omnis exercitus ad partem Philippici fecit eum ibidem imperatorem, reversusque cum eo Constantinopolim pugnavit contra Justinianum ad duodecimum ab urbe milliarium, et victo atque occiso Justiniano regnum suscepit Philippicus. 4667. 716. Philippicus[b] anno I., mensibus VI. Hic ejecit Cyrum de pontificatu, eumque ad gubernandum abbatis jure monasterium suum, Pontum redire præcepit. Idem Constantino papæ misit literas pravi dogmatis, quas ille cum apostolicæ sedis concilio respuit; et hujus rei causa fecit picturas in porticu S. Petri quæ acta VI. sanctarum synodorum universalium continerent, nam et hujusmodi picturas cum haberentur in urbe regia Philippicus jusserat auferri; statuitque populus Romanus ne hæretici imperatoris nomen [3]in chartas aut figuram solidi susciperent; unde nec ejus effigies in ecclesiam introducta est, nec nomen ad missarum solennia prolatum.

4670. 719. Anastasius[c] annis III. Hic Philippicum captum oculis privavit, nec occidit. Idem literas Constantino papæ Romam per Scholasticum patritium et exarchum Italiæ direxit, quibus se fautorem catholicæ fidei, et sancti sexti concilii prædicatorem esse docuit. Liuthbrandus rex Longobardorum donationem patrimonii Alpium Cottiarum quam Hereberechtus rex fecerat et ille repetierat, admonitione venerabilis papæ Gregorii confirmavit. A alveum suum egressus multa Romanæ fecit exitia civitati: ita ut in Via lata ad unam et semis staturam excresceret, atque a porta S. Petri usque ad pontem [1]Milvium aquæ se descendentes conjungerent. Mansit autem diebus VII., donec agentibus letanias crebras civibus, octavo demum die revertit. His temporibus multi Anglorum gentis, nobiles et ignobiles, viri et fœminæ, duces et privati, divini amoris instinctu de Brittania Romam venire consueverant: inter quos etiam reverentissimus abbas meus Ceolfridus annos natus LXXIV., cum esset presbyter annis XLVII., abbas autem XXXV., ubi Lingonas pervenit, ibi defunctus atque in ecclesia beatorum Geminorum martyrum sepultus est: qui inter alia donaria quæ adferre disposuerat, misit ecclesiæ S. Petri pandectem a B. Hieronymo in Latinum ex Hebræo vel Græco fonte translatum. A.M. A.C.

B Leo [a]annis IX. Saraceni cum immenso exercitu Constantinopolim venientes triennio civitatem obsident, donec civibus multa instantia ad Deum clamantibus, plurimi eorum fame, frigore, pestilentia perirent, ac sic pertæsi obsidionis abscederent: qui inde regressi Vulgarorum gentem quæ est super Danubium bello aggrediuntur; et ab hac quoque victi refugiunt ac naves repetunt suas. Quibus cum altum peterent ingruente subita tempestate, plurimi etiam [2]mersi sive confractis per littora navibus sunt necati. Liuthbrandus audiens quod Saraceni depopulata Sardinia etiam loca fœdarent illa ubi ossa S. Augustini episcopi propter vastationem Barbarorum olim translata et honorifice fuerant condita, misit et dato magno precio accepit, et transtulit ea in Ticinis, ibique cum debito tanto patri honore recondidit. 4680. 729.

Quod si qui laborem hunc nostrum culpaverint esse superfluum, accipiant hi quicunque sunt justum salva charitate responsum, quod præfatus Hieronymus priscæ cosmographiæ calumniatoribus reddit: ‘ut si displicet non legant.’ Cæterum cunctis in commune suademus, ut sive quis ex Hebraica veritate quæ ad nos per memoratum interpretem pura quæris, ubi hæc putanda vel credenda legerint? Mox stomachantes, quia aliud A quid respondere non habent, Annon legisti, inquiunt, in Genesi quia sex diebus mundum fecerit Deus? unde merito credi debet eum plus minus sex millibus annorum esse staturum. Et quod est gravius, fuere qui propter septimum diem in quo requievit Deus ab operibus suis, sperarent post sex annorum millia sanctorum laboris in hac vita mortali, septimo mille annorum curriculo eos post resurrectionem in hac ipsa vita immortales in deliciis et multa beatitudine regnaturos esse cum Christo. Verum his quia hæretica sunt et frivola funditus omissis, intelligamus sincere et catholice sex illos dies in quibus mundi hujus ornatum perfecit Deus et septimum in quo ab omni opere suo requievit, quem ob id perpetuæ quietis benedictione sanctificavit, non sex annorum millia sæculi laborantis et septimum regni beatorum in terra cum Christo, sed sex potius B ætates significare mundi labentis, in quibus sancti laborant in hac vita pro Christo, et septimam perpetuæ quietis in alia vita, quam solutæ a corporibus percipiunt animæ sanctæ cum Christo. Quod animarum sabbatum tunc inchoasse recte creditur, cum primus Christi martyr carne occisus a fratre, mox anima est æternam translatus in requiem; tunc autem perficietur cum in die resurrectionis animæ etiam corpora incorrupta receperint. Et quia nulla ætatum quinque præteritarum mille annis acta reperitur, sed aliæ plures annos, aliæ pauciores habuere, neque ulla alteri similem habuit summam annorum, restat ut pari modo hæc quoque, quæ nunc agitur, incertum mortalibus habeat suæ longitudinis statum, soli autem Illi cognitum qui servos suos accinctis lumbis lucernisque ardentibus vigilare præcepit, similes hominibus expectantibus dominum C suum quando revertatur a nuptiis.

[a] Venerabilis Baeda monachus et presbyter, natus A. 673, apud Girvum, hodie Jarrow, A. 735 diem obiit. Historiæ Ecclesiasticæ Gentis Anglorum manum ultimam apposuit A. 731. Hanc ex editione Cantabrigiensi An. 1722, cum codice MS. quo usus est Smithius denuo collatam exhibemus, additis et nota M. signatis ejus codicis varietatibus quas ipse prætermittendas censuit: annotationes vero editoris plerumque asservavimus, litteraque S. distingui curavimus. De Baeda autem et de opere ejus vide quæ in præfatione nostra plenius dicta sunt.

'LECTORI S. Hanc nostram Historicorum Baedæ Operum editionem jamdiu ab erudito orbe expetitam, et ea qua potui diligentia ad fidem MSS. codicum vetustissimorum elimatam, in lucem tandem prodiisse, nequeo non tam mihi, Lector, quam tibi vehementissime gratulari: tibi quidem, quod sit id in manibus, quod longo jam tempore summa in expectatione fuit; mihi vero, quod hoc gravi opere perfunctus, infinito fere me labore, maximoque onere solutum atque expeditum sentio, animosque doctissimorum virorum, qui hoc opus cum desiderio summo flagitarunt, me tandem esse expleturum spero. Esset sane Baeda noster aliquot abhinc annis foras prolatus atque in aspectu hominum collocatus, nisi immaturo Patris mei interitu gravissimam calamitatem accepisset. Dum enim vir optimus, singulari ac divino ingenio præditus, omnigena doctrina instructissimus, in laboribus illis, quibus literarum studia promoveret, perferendis acerrimus ac diligentissimus, in imprimendo hoc opere plus, quam vires et ætas ferre poterant, omnes industriæ suæ nervos intenderet, nimia contentione animi plane fractus, fatali tandem atque insanabili stomachi vitio laboravit, et quartodecimo die est defunctus incredibile sui desiderium eruditis, bonis, omnibus relinquens. O luctuosam illam diem! cujus acerba sane recordatio veterem animi curam doloremque renovat; quæ me orbavit charissimo atque amantissimo Patre, ecclesiam, Dunelmensem præcipue, ornamento et lumine, rempublicam literariam viro in ecclesiastica doctrina versatissimo, antiquitatum, Anglicarum præsertim, peritissimo, septentrionalis literaturæ cognitione præclaro, omni denique scientia atque eruditione perfecta præcellenti. Tanto igitur viro, cum quarta pars ingentis operis nondum prælo exiisset, extincto sic et intercepto, nemo fuit, qui onus istud sustineret, præter me, viginti duos solum annos natum, quique vixdum ex pueris excesseram, mediocris tantum ingenii adolescens, atque eruditionis istius, quæ ab illa ætate infirma ac tenera expectari solet. Ipsius igitur rei gravitas, et imbecillitatis meæ conscientia a tam operoso et difficili, tamque referto varia ac multiplici doctrina negotio adeo me deterruit, ut nisi erga Patrem pietas, amicorum postulatio, et ipsa operis jam incepti ad institutum finem perducendi necessitas suasisset et quasi coegisset, pudori certe cessissem, opusque hoc omnino infectum reliquisse melius tutiusque duxissem, quam munus, quod supra ætatem et vires meas esse videbatur, suscepisse. Quanquam vero Patri cognitione et judicio dispar ad subeundum hoc onus accesserim, cum tamen, eo superstite, in literatura Saxonica non hospes fuerim, omniumque fere Baedæ operum, quæ publici juris facimus, multos MSS. Codices ipse contulerim, et cuncta quæ Pater ceperit, consilia editionis hujus exornandæ penitus noverim; non me prorsus ineptum judicavi, qui et paternis institutis, et doctissimorum studiis satisfacerem. Hinc jam factus audacior, editionem hanc tam infelici augurio inchoatam, melioribus avibus absolvere sum aggressus, non judicio meo, aut quod ita libuerit, sed quod fato quodam, et quasi hæreditario jure delatum ad me pervenerit. Ut vero ad hanc provinciam instructior ac paratior venirem, tum omnia quæ Pater immensa industria collegerat, tum cunctos historicos tam antiquos quam recentiores, qui de his temporibus aliquid tradiderint, diligenter perlegi; ingentem aliorum quoque librorum copiam necesse habui evolvere, ut vel auctorem nostrum ornatiorem rederem, vel dissertationes aliquot bene longas, quas in [x] Appendice reperies, accuratius instituerem. Et hæc quidem ratio fuit, cur editionem nostram hucusque distulerim: ratio certe honesta satis, quaque

'Post Chronicon damus en, Lector, tibi Historiam Ecclesiasticam jam olim sæpissime variis in locis procusam. [a] Antiquissima atque prima omnium impressio facta est in 'inclyta civitate Argentinensi' anno millesimo quingentesimo. Hoc vero opus tunc non prodiit solum, sed una cum Scholastica Historia Petri Trecensis, alias Comestoris, et Ecclesiastica Historia Eusebii per Rufinum cum additione Rufini. Editionem istam Patri meo suppeditavit vir clarissimus Johannes Batteley Archidiaconus Cantuariensis. Erroribus typographicis scatet, crassis vero eis, adeoque nullius periculi; de cætero a codice satis antiquo facta esse videtur. Convenit enim cum optimis MSS. in propriis nominibus, capitulis, multisque variis lectionibus. Secundo prodiit una cum supradictis Historiis in 'Imperiali oppido Hagenaw' anno millesimo quingentesimo sexto, accurante Henrico Gran inibi incola: qui tamen priorem editionem auctoritate alicujus MSS^ti codicis emendasse aut castigasse non videtur, sed solummodo istam verbatim de novo procudisse. Hujus impressionis mihi copiam fecit ex Bibliotheca Collegii Christi Cantabrigiæ vir celeberrimus atque antiquitatum omne genus peritissimus Thomas Bakerus, S.T.B., quem ob præcipuam ejus erga me benevolentiam atque honoris causa nomino. Postea hæc ipsa Baedæ historia typis mandata est anno 1550 Antverpiæ, Lovanii 1566, Heidelbergæ et Lugduni 1587, Coloniæ 1601; inter cætera etiam ejusdem Auctoris opera Parisiis per Jametium anno 1544, ibidem quoque anno 1554, Basileæ item per Joannem Hervagium 1563, denique Coloniæ per Antonium Hierat 1612. Iis vero omnibus castigatior Editio opera et studio Abrahami Wheloci Cantabrigiæ anno 1644 Latine et Saxonice prodiit. Latinum autem textum vir doctissimus ad fidem trium codicum MSS. edidit, et commentationibus longioribus tam Historicis quam Ecclesiasticis illustravit. Opus sane omni laude dignum, sed nec omnibus numeris absolutum, imo nec paucis nec levibus vitiis laborans. Prodiit tandem Latine anno 1681 Parisiis auctor noster emendatior studio Petri Francisci Chiffletii Societatis Jesu Presbyteri, imo, si ipsi eruditissimo editori credas, emendatissima, ope manuscriptorum aliquot codicum, inter quos principem locum obtinet Codex S. Maximini Trevirensis, optimæ notæ et vetustissimus, ut evidentissime probat Chiffletius ex scribendi ratione perantiqua, quam codex ille retinuit. Nec tamen hæc impressio penitus illimis, ut abunde constabit alicui ad imam nostræ editionis paginam oculum vertenti, ubi Chiffletii sphalmata præcipue notantur.

'Itaque viris doctrina conspicuis visum est non utilem modo, sed et ferme necessariam esse novam Baedæ editionem. Id ergo oneris sibi primum imposuit Vir Cl. Thomas Galæus, S. T. P., non ita pridem Decanus Eboracensis, qui quamplurimos alios historicos tum Brittanicos tum Anglicanos publici juris faciendo de patria sua olim fuerat optime meritus. Postquam vero multos MSS. codices contulisset, nonnullasque notas atque commentationes collegisset, aliis, credo, negotiis implicitus, onus detrectavit, idque suscipere meo patri persuasit, quocum vir idem celeberrimus pro singulari sua humanitate varias lectiones et doctissimas observationes communicavit. Tandem igitur Pater id laboris subiit, et ut editionem suam priorum mendis ac vitiis expurgaret, in MSS. codicibus exquirendis et comparandis multum desudavit, et vel sua vel amicorum industria omnes, quos in Brittanicis Bibliothecis invenire potuit, accurate contulit. Hinc infinita Variarum Lectionum mole obrutus, necessarium duxit, ut rationem aliquam excogitaret, qua tam gravi onere se levare posset. Et quidem observans multos codices esse inferioris et ætatis et notæ, et quo nuperiores fuerint, eo et lectionum et errorum pleniores; recognoscens quoque hos ex antiquioribus fuisse descriptos: Lectiones illico recentiorum codicum prorsus nihili habuit, et in conferendos aliquot antiquissimos maxime incubuit.

'Codex MS. omnium vetustissimus non ita pridem erat penes egregium illum literarum fautorem Joannem Morum Episcopum nuper Eliensem, hodieque in Bibliotheca Regia Cantabrigiæ asservatur, antiquioribus literis Anglo-Saxonicis exaratus circa annum [b] 737; post nostri Auctoris obitum secundum, ut patet ex quibusdam notulis Chronologicis ad calcem libri positis, quæ in hunc annum concurrunt. His autem verbis scribuntur.

'Anno D.XLVII. Ida regnare cœpit a quo Regalis Nordanhymbrorum prosapia originem tenet et XII. annos in regno permansit. Hisce pene omnibus in annum 737, concurrentibus, Cl. Uuanleio [c] in MSS. Anglo-Saxonicis versatissimo verisimile videtur hunc ipsum Codicem eodem anno, Ceoluulfo adhuc regnante, seu saltem ante Eadbercti inaugurationem, duobus quoque annis post Baedæ obitum, in Uuiremuthensi Monasterio fuisse scriptum. Adde quod manus hujusce Codicis bene convenit cum exemplari Pastoralis Gregorii Magni Papæ, quod Uuillibaldus Diaconus scripsit, hoc est, inter an. 731, quo diaconatum suscepit, et an. 740, in quo creatus fuit presbyter. Convenit quoque cum aliis indubitatæ vetustatis et libris et diplomatibus, præcipue cum illa Ualdharii Lundoniensis Antistitis epistola ad Berctualdum Archiepiscopum, quam in Appendice Num. XXIV. excudimus. Probabile est Codicem post paucos ab ejus scriptione annos in Galliam fuisse asportatum: Crebræ enim habentur distinctiones, emendationes, &c. ab homine Gallo exaratæ, qui ægre manum Anglo-Saxonicam legebat: et hæ quidem adnotationes in manu Gallica passim occurrentes circa initium libri nongentis fere abhinc annis scriptæ videntur. Denique ad calcem quoque hoc scribitur: 'Item ex Decretis Papæ Gregorii Junioris qui nunc Romanam Catholicam regit matrem ecclesiam.' Hic autem Gregorius videtur intelligi tertius, qui Gregorio secundo in pontificatu successit anno 731, et mortuus est anno 741. In Gallia conservatus fuit hic Codex satis diligenter usque ad conclusionem fœderis initi inter Gulielmum Magnæ Britanniæ Regem et Ludovicum Regem Christianissimum apud Ryswickum; cum vir quidam doctissimus eum cum multis aliis Codicibus rarissimis tam Græcis quam Latinis publica auctione emerit, et eos omnes admodum Reverendo Domino Possessori vendiderit. Hoc autem χειμήλιον antiquitate veneranda, auctoritate maxima, fide optima atque certissima, ex ipso Baedæ autographo, in ipso Monasterio ubi Baeda Historiam composuit, ut videtur, descriptum, Patri meo Episcopus ille Philobiblus utendum præbuit. Quod quidem bis summa cura cum Chiffletiana Editione collatum ad verbum a nobis imprimitur. Patri enim religio fuit de Codicis tam admirandæ vetustatis fide, nisi ubi librarium falso scripsisse aperte deprehenditur, vel aliquantulum decedere. Neque immerito; duobus enim codicibus, qui Saxonicis literis exarantur, et in [a] Cottoniana Bibliotheca asservantur, et tertio quoque in Bibliotheca Regia [b] ante Normannicam Conquisitionem, ut videtur, scripto, cum eo una comparatis; in propriis nominibus, antiqua voces compositas scribendi methodo, et in omnibus fere adeo conveniunt; et in lectionibus adeo nugatoriis, iisque paucis, differunt: ut nulla ratio omnino esset, cur textus ex Moriano codice optime constitutus vel tantillum mutaretur.

'Hanc Baedæ Historiam Ecclesiasticam Aluredus Rex pientissimus in linguam Saxonicam eleganter transtulit. Quam quidem versionem Vir Cl. supradictus Abrahamus Whelocus doctissimus linguarum Arabicæ simul et Saxonicæ in Academia Cantabrigiensi Professor in sua ornatissima editione typis mandavit, tribus, ut ipse ait, codicibus Saxonicis diligenter collatis; altero, quem omnino præcipue sequebatur, Bibliothecæ Publicæ Cantabrigiensis; altero Collegii Corporis Christi in eadem Academia; tertio denique Bibliothecæ Cottonianæ. Fatendum est quidem industrium illum virum codicem Bibliothecæ Publicæ fide optima atque accuratissime edidisse; huic tamen in locis bene multis scribæ incuria laboranti nullam opem tulit, neque manum medicam admovit; quod certe facili negotio potuisset, si codices MSS. quibus usus est, paulo attentius consuluisset. De novo igitur ad illa tria exemplaria editionem Whelocianam attentissime exegimus, et quas sane innumeras invenimus, lectiones varias notavimus: et duos præterea alios codices, optimæ notæ, licet mutilos, qui usque adhuc delituerant, contulimus; quorum alterum Collegium Corporis Christi Oxoniis nobis suppeditavit, alterum vir eruditissimus ac de literatura monastica optime meritus Thomas Tannerus Cancellarius Norvicensis cum Patre meo quam humanissime communicavit. Ad horum codicum, Tanneriani præsertim, fidem comparatum versionis Saxonicæ textum pluribus in locis restituimus, et lacunas supplevimus, ut cuivis inspicienti facile patebit. Uncis enim inclusa docent locum in priore editione vitio laborasse, in nostra vero MSS[ti] alicujus fide emendari. Denique omnes varias lectiones, quæ a textu verbis differunt, ad inferiorem marginem apposuimus, rejectis quidem fere infinitis, quæ literis tantum, vocalibus præcipue, sunt diversæ.[c]

'Baedæ libellum [f] de Locis Sanctis, quem ex Arcuulphi dictatibus et Adamnani scriptis composuit, cum cæteris istius operibus Coloniæ editum, cum duobus MSS. antiquis et bonæ notæ, altero in Bibliotheca Bodleiana, altero in Collegio Corporis Christi Oxoniis contulimus, et ex iis textum restituimus. Quod ad B. Felicis Vitam attinet, cum nusquam exemplar ejus MS. invenire potuimus, eam ex Coloniensi et Bollandiano codicibus impressis accurate collatis ea qua potui diligentia et fide edi curavimus.[f]

'Martyrologium, quod jam exhibuimus, ex Actorum Sanctorum Martii Tomo secundo dedimus[g]...

'Baedæ textu ubique sic a mendis purgato, alterum quod pro officii ratione agendum nobis hac in editione duximus, auctoris illustrationem spectat. Ut autem satis huic rei faceremus, notas tum historicas tum chronologicas, quam brevissime potuimus, textui subjecimus: et ad calcem operis in Appendice adjici curavimus vel chartas antiquas, vel longiores notas sive potius diatribas, vel aliquas res ejusmodi, quæ auctorem nostrum aut explicatiorem aut ornatiorem reddant.[h]...

'In Appendice quoque apposui Tabulam Geographicam, in qua omnes regiones, populi, loci Britannici a Baeda in his operibus memorati notantur. Vitam quoque Baedæ a Mabillonio [i] editam, et elogium historicum ab eodem diligenter conscriptum; et aliam quoque auctoris [i] Vitam ab Anonymo scriptore, sed vetusto, compositam ad fidem trium MSS. Dunelmensis, Pembrochiani Cantabrigiæ, et Bodleiani Fairfax 6. quoniam nusquam antehac procusa est, adjeci. Quam sequitur Index locupletissimus, Whelociano certe longe perfectior.

'Hæc sunt quæ de hac nostra editione præfari visum est. Exposita jam totius consilii et Patris et mei ratione, deinceps te, Lector non morabor, nisi ut gratias agam Viro Cl. et de bonis literis et literatis viris optime merito Thomæ Rawlinson, Armigero, qui me certum fecit ex Constitutione Johannis Alcock Eliensis episcopi pro festis Sanctorum aliquot in Diœcesi sua celebrandis, ad calcem ejusdem episcopi 'Galli cantus' a Richardo Pynson typographo regis Henrici septimi anno 1498 impressa; quod iste præsul voluerit, Bedæ festivitas, etsi obiit 'septimo Kalendas Junii,' quia tamen eo die convenienter observari non potuit, ut celebraretur in sua diœcesi 'secundo Idus Martii' ad instar festum S. Hieronymi: Et ut corrigam errorem in quem de tempore Baedæ obitus incidi, cum notam ad epistolam ad Ecgberctum scripserim; in qua affirmavi Baedam anno 734 esse defunctum, cum tamen eum proximo anno obiisse sit quam certissimum. GLORIOSISSIMO REGI [a] CEOLUULPHO BAEDA FAMULUS CHRISTI, ET PRESBYTER.

HISTORIAM Gentis Anglorum Ecclesiasticam quam nuper edideram, libentissime tibi desideranti, Rex, et prius ad legendum ac probandum transmisi, et nunc ad transscribendum ac plenius ex tempore meditandum retransmitto: satisque studium tuæ sinceritatis amplector, quo non solum audiendis Scripturæ [1] sanctæ verbis aurem sedulus accommodas, verum etiam noscendis priorum gestis sive dictis et maxime nostræ gentis virorum illustrium, curam vigilanter impendis. Sive enim historia de bonis bona referat, ad imitan- B dum bonum auditor sollicitus instigatur; seu mala commemoret de pravis, nihilominus religiosus ac pius auditor sive lector devitando quod noxium est ac perversum, ipse sollertius ad exsequenda ea quæ bona ac Deo digna esse cognoverit, accenditur. Quod ipsum tu quoque vigilantissime deprehendens, historiam memoratam in notitiam tibi simulque eis quibus te regendis divina præfecit auctoritas, ob generalis curam salutis latius [2] propalari desideras. Ut autem in his quæ scripsi, vel tibi [3] vel cæteris auditoribus sive lectoribus hujus historiæ occasionem dubitandi subtraham, quibus hæc maxime auctoribus didicerim breviter intimare curabo.

Adjutores.

Auctor ante omnes atque adjutor opusculi hujus [b] Albinus [4] abba reverentissimus vir per omnia doctissimus extitit; qui in ecclesia Cantuariorum a beatæ C memoriæ Theodoro archiepiscopo et Hadriano abbate viris venerabilibus atque eruditissimis [5] institutus, diligenter omnia quæ in ipsa Cantuariorum provincia vel etiam in contiguis [6] eidem regionibus a discipulis beati papæ Gregorii gesta fuere, vel monimentis literarum vel seniorum traditione cognoverat: [7] et ea mihi de his quæ memoria digna videbantur, per religiosum Lundoniensis ecclesiæ presbyterum [c] Nothelmum, sive literis mandata sive ipsius Nothelmi viva voce referenda, transmisit. Qui videlicet Nothelmus postea Romam veniens, nonnullas ibi B. [d] Gregorii papæ simul et aliorum pontificum epistolas, perscrutato ejusdem sanctæ ecclesiæ Romanæ scrinio, permissu ejus qui nunc ipsi ecclesiæ præest Gregorii pontificis, invenit, reversusque nobis nostræ historiæ inserendas, cum concilio præfati Albini reverentissimi patris adtulit. [b] Albinus, natione Anglus, Hadriano in regimine monasterii SS. Petri et Pauli Cantuariæ successit A. 710, diemque obiit A. 732. Ad eum Beda de auxilii accepti beneficio hanc direxit epistolam.

[c] Desideratissimo et reverentissimo patri ALBINO, BEDA Christi famulus salutem. Gratantissime suscepi munuscula tuæ dilectionis, quæ per venerabilem fratrem nostrum Nothelmum presbyterum mittere dignatus es, et maxime litteras quibus me jam secunda vice in Ecclesiastica gentis nostræ Historia, ad quam me scribendam jamdudum instigaveras, creber adjuvare atque instituere curasti. Propter quod et ipse tibi rectissime eandem historiam, mox ut consummare potui, ad transscribendum remisi. Sed et aliud, quod te partim desiderare comperi, volumen tibi vice remunerationis æque ad transscribendum destinavi, videlicet illud quod de structura templi Salomonis atque allegorica ejus interpretatione nuper edidi. Teque amantissime pater supplex obsecro, ut pro mea fragilitate cum his qui tecum sunt famulis Christi apud pium Judicem sedulus intercedere memineris, sed et eos ad quos eadem nostra opuscula pervenire feceris, hoc idem facere monueris. [c] Nothelmus postea, scil. A. 735, Cantuariensis archiepiscopus factus est.

LIBER PRIMUS.

Cap. I. De situ [a] Brittaniæ vel Hiberniæ, et priscis earum incolis.

Insulæ situs.

BRITTANIA oceani insula, cui quondam Albion nomen fuit, inter Septentrionem et Occidentem locata est, Germaniæ, Galliæ, Hispaniæ, maximis Europæ partibus multo intervallo adversa. Quæ per milia passuum octingenta in Boream longa, latitudinis habet milia ducenta, exceptis dumtaxat prolixioribus B diversorum promontoriorum tractibus, quibus efficitur ut circuitus ejus [b] quadragies octies septuaginta quinque milia compleat. Habet a Meridie Galliam Belgicam, cujus proximum litus transmeantibus aperit civitas quæ dicitur [c] Rutubi portus, a gente Anglorum nunc corrupte ‘ Reptacaestir’ vocata, interposito mari a [d] Gessoriaco [e] Morinorum gentis litore proximo, trajectu milium quinquaginta, sive, ut [f] quidam scripsere, [g] stadiorum quadringentorum quinquaginta. A tergo autem, unde oceano infinito patet, Orcadas insulas habet.

Fertilitas.

[1] Opima frugibus atque arboribus insula, et alendis apta pecoribus ac jumentis; vineas etiam quibusdam in locis germinans; sed et avium ferax terra marique generis diversi. Fluviis quoque multum piscosis, ac fontibus præclara copiosis, et quidem præcipue issicio abundat et anguilla. Capiuntur autem sæpissime et C vituli marini, et delphines, necnon et ballenæ: exceptis variorum generibus conchyliorum; in quibus sunt et musculæ, quibus inclusam sæpe margaritam, omnis quidem coloris optimam inveniunt, id est, et rubicundi, et purpurei, et jacintini et prasini, sed maxime candidi. Sunt et cochleæ satis superque abundantes, quibus tinctura coccinei coloris conficitur, cujus rubor pulcherrimus nullo unquam solis ardore, nulla valet pluviarum injuria pallescere; sed quo vetustior est, eo solet esse venustior. Habet fontes salinarum, habet et fontes calidos, et ex eis fluvios balnearum calidarum, omni ætati et sexui per distincta loca, juxta suum cuique modum accommodos. Aqua enim, ut [h] S. Basilius dicit, fervidam qualitatem recipit, quum per certa quædam metalla transcurrit, et fit non solum calida, sed et ardens. Quæ etiam venis metallorum, æris, ferri, et plumbi et D argenti fœcunda, gignit et lapidem gagatem plurimum optimumque: est autem nigrogemmeus et ardens igni admotus, incensus serpentes fugat, adtritu calefactus adplicita detinet æque ut succinum. Erat et [1] civitatibus quondam viginti et octo nobilissimis insignita, præter castella innumera, quæ et ipsa muris, turribus, portis, ac seris erant instructa firmissimis.

Dies.

Et quia prope sub ipso Septentrionali vertice mundi jacet, lucidas æstate noctes habet; ita ut medio sæpe tempore noctis in quæstionem veniat intuentibus, utrum crepusculum adhuc permaneat vespertinum, an jam advenerit matutinum, utpote nocturno sole non longe sub terris ad Orientem Boreales per plagas redeunte: unde etiam plurimæ longitudinis habet dies æstate, sicut et noctes contra in bruma, sole nimirum tunc Lybicas in partes secedente, id E est, horarum decem et octo: plurimæ item brevitatis noctes æstate et dies habet in bruma, hoc est, sex solummodo æquinoctialium horarum: cum in Armenia,

Hæc in præsenti, juxta numerum librorum quibus lex divina scripta est, quinque gentium linguis, unam eamdemque summæ veritatis et veræ sublimitatis scientiam scrutatur et confitetur, Anglorum videlicet, Brittonum, Scottorum, Pictorum et Latinorum, quæ meditatione scripturarum cæteris omnibus est facta communis. In primis autem hæc insula Brittones solum a quibus nomen accepit, incolas habuit, qui de [a]tractu Armoricano, ut fertur, Brittaniam advecti, Australes sibi partes illius vindicarunt. Linguæ. Incolæ.

Et cum plurimam insulæ partem, incipientes ab Austro, possedissent, contigit gentem Pictorum de [b]Scythia, ut perhibent, longis navibus non multis B oceanum ingressam, circumagente flatu ventorum, extra fines omnes Brittaniæ Hiberniam pervenisse, ejusque Septentrionales oras intrasse, atque inventa ibi gente Scottorum, sibi quoque in partibus illius sedes petisse, nec inpetrare potuisse. Est autem Hibernia insula omnium post Brittaniam maxima, ad Occidentem quidem Brittaniæ sita; sed sicut contra Aquilonem ea brevior, ita in Meridiem se trans illius fines plurimum protendens, usque contra Hispaniæ Septentrionalia, quamvis magno æquore interjacente pervenit. Ad hanc ergo usque pervenientes navigio Picti ut diximus, petierunt in ea sibi quoque sedes et habitationem donari. Respondebant Scotti, quia non ambos eos caperet insula: ‘Sed possumus,’ inquiunt, ‘salubre vobis dare consilium quid agere valeatis. Novimus insulam aliam esse non procul a nostra, contra ortum solis, C quam sæpe lucidioribus diebus de longe aspicere solemus. Hanc adire si vultis, habitabilem vobis facere valetis: vel si qui restiterit, nobis auxiliariis utimini.’ Itaque petentes Brittaniam Picti, habitare per Septentrionales insulæ partes cœperunt; nam [1]Austrina Brittones [2]occupaverant. Cumque uxores Picti non habentes peterent a Scottis, ea solum conditione dare consenserunt, ut ubi res perveniret in dubium, magis de feminea regum prosapia, quam de masculina regem sibi eligerent: quod usque hodie apud Pictos constat esse servatum. Picti. Hibernia.

Procedente autem [c]tempore, Brittania [3]post Brittones et Pictos, tertiam Scottorum nationem in Pictorum parte recepit, qui duce Reuda de Hibernia progressi, vel amicitia vel ferro sibimet inter eos sedes quas hactenus habent, vindicarunt: a quo videlicet duce usque hodie [d]Dalreudini vocantur, nam lingua D eorum ‘daal’ partem significat. Hibernia autem et latitudine sui status, et salubritate, ac serenitate aerum multum Brittaniæ præstat, ita ut raro ibi nix plusquam triduana remaneat: nemo propter hiemem aut fœna secet æstate, aut stabula fabricet jumentis: nullum ibi reptile videri soleat, nullus vivere serpens valeat: nam sæpe illo de Brittania adlati serpentes, mox ut proximante terris navigio, odore aeris illius adtacti fuerint, intereunt: quin potius omnia pene quæ de eadem insula sunt contra venenum valent. Denique vidimus, quibusdam a serpente percussis, rasa folia codicum qui de Hibernia fuerant, et ipsam rasuram aquæ immissam ac potui datam, talibus protinus totam vim veneni grassantis, totum inflati corporis absumsisse ac sedasse tumorem. Dives lactis ac mellis insula, nec vinearum expers, piscium volucrumque, sed et cervorum E caprearumque venatu insignis. Hæc autem proprie patria Scottorum est:[4] ab hac egressi, ut diximus, tertiam in Brittania Brittonibus et Pictis gentem Scotti. Hibernia.

A CAP. III.[a] UT EAMDEM SECUNDUS ROMANORUM CLAUDIUS ADIENS, ORCADAS ETIAM INSULAS ROMANO ADJECERIT IMPERIO. SED ET VESPASIANUS AB EO MISSUS, VECTAM QUOQUE INSULAM ROMANIS SUBDIDERIT.

Anno autem ab Urbe condita septingentesimo nonagesimo [1]octavo[b] Claudius imperator, ab Augusto quartus, cupiens utilem [2]reipublicæ ostentare principem, bellum ubique, et victoriam undecumque quæsivit. Itaque expeditionem in Brittaniam movit, quæ excitata in tumultum propter non [3]redhibitos [c]transfugas videbatur. Transvectus in insulam est, quam neque ante Julium Cæsarem, neque post eum [d]quisquam adire ausus fuerat, ibique sine ullo prælio ac sanguine intra paucissimos dies plurimam insulæ partem in deditionem recepit. Orcadas etiam[e] insulas ultra Brittaniam in oceano positas Romano adjecit im- B perio, ac sexto quam profectus erat mense Romam rediit, filioque suo Brittanici nomen imposuit. Hoc autem bellum quarto imperii sui anno complevit, qui est annus ab Incarnatione Domini quadragesimus sextus: quo etiam anno [f]fames gravissima per Syriam facta est, quæ in Actibus Apostolorum [†]per prophetam Agabum prædicta esse memoratur. Ab eodem Claudio Vespasianus, qui post Neronem imperavit, in Brittaniam missus, etiam Vectam Insulam Brittaniæ proximam a Meridie, Romanorum ditioni subjugavit; quæ habet ab Oriente in Occasum [g]triginta circiter milia passuum, ab Austro in Boream duodecim, in Orientalibus suis partibus mari sex milium, in Occidentalibus trium a Meridiano Brittaniæ litore distans. Succedens autem Claudio in imperium Nero, nihil omnino in re militari ausus est. Unde inter alia Romani regni detrimenta C innumera Brittaniam pene amisit: nam duo sub eo nobilissima [h]oppida illic capta atque subversa sunt.

[i] Usque ad hæc verba Beda sumit exordium hujus capitis ex Orosio; non tamen Orosio imputatam velim difficultatem quæ videtur esse in annis Marci et Commodi impp. et Eleutheri pontificis. Annus enim U. C. 911, quem Orosius assignat juncto fratrum imperio, respondet anno Christi 161, in quo nihil est difficultatis in epistola Luci regis ad Eleutherum, imo ipse est annus in quo Eusebius et Beda in Chronicis de fratrum initio consentiunt, sicut notavi ad locum. Sed Beda hic in historia, explicans Orosii æram urbis per æram Incarnationis, ad A. 911 affigit A. 156, et tamen epistolam Lucii in eadem tempora admitti postulat. Quibus rationibus id fecerit incertum est, nec est quod in eis explicandis nimium hæreamus. Sufficiat observare quod sicut Beda hic communem, imo et suam ipsius chronologiam in annis Marci et Commodi anticipat, ita et eandem in annis Eleutheri anticipare intelligendus est: sicut Marci et Commodi initium ponit in A. 156, et eorum finem in A. 167, sic etiam Eleutheri pontificatum in annis parallelis statutum voluit, ita ut ultimus fratrum annus cum primo pontificis semper conveniat. Hoc quidem Bedam voluisse patet ex recapitulatione in hujus historiæ fine, ubi Eleutherum præsulem factum dicit A. 167. Quamcunque igitur rationem admittamus eadem erit Bedæ in utroque libro intentio, nempe finem impp. cum initio pontificis componere. Cui nihil necesse est Commodum filium hic introducere, sicut multi fecerunt, satis enim est temporis in fratrum imperio quo possit, ut quidem debuit peragi hoc regis cum Eleuthero commercium. Quod ad Lucii regnum, gesta, obitum, quorum Beda non meminit, ea iis relinquo qui tradita de Lucio collegerunt. S.

Quod murum sive vallum construxerat aut Hadrianus aut Antoninus ignorabat ut videtur Beda; ideoque cum apud Gildam in mentionem et muri cespititii et muri 'solito more' constructi inciderat, primum credebat eum qui revera Antonino, alium qui itidem Severo debebatur. Hæc ergo, ut verisimile est, Orosio addidit, ut Hadriani vallum Severo tribueret, et situm haberet quo murus Gildæ lapideus locaretur.

CAP. VII. PASSIO S. ALBANI ET SOCIORUM EJUS, QUI [4]EODEM TEMPORE PRO DOMINO
B SANGUINEM FUDERUNT.

Siquidem [b]in ea passus est S. Albanus, de quo presbyter Fortunatus in Laude Virginum,[A] cum beatorum martyrum qui de toto orbe ad Dominum [5]venirent mentionem faceret, ait: 'Albanum egregium fecunda Britania profert.' Qui videlicet [c]Albanus paganus adhuc, cum perfidorum principum mandata adversum Christianos sævirent, clericum quendam persecutores fugientem hospitio recepit: quem dum orationibus continuis ac vigiliis [6]die noctuque studere conspiceret, subito divina gratia respectus, exemplum fidei ac pietatis illius cœpit æmulari, ac salutaribus ejus exhortationibus paulatim edoctus, relictis idolatriæ tenebris Christianus integro ex corde factus est. Cumque præfatus clericus aliquot diebus apud eum hospitaretur, pervenit ad aures
C nefandi principis confessorem Christi, cui necdum fuerat locus martyrii deputatus, penes Albanum latere. Unde statim jussit milites eum diligentius inquirere. Qui cum ad tugurium martyris pervenissent, mox se S. Albanus pro hospite ac magistro suo, ipsius habitu, id est [d]caracalla qua vestiebatur indutus, militibus exhibuit, atque ad judicem vinctus perductus est. Passionis A. 305. [A] viii. 4. occasio.

Contigit autem judicem ea hora qua ad eum Albanus adducebatur, aris adsistere ac dæmonibus hostias offerre. Cumque vidisset Albanum, mox ira succensus nimia quod se ille ultro pro hospite quem susceperat militibus offerre ac discrimini dare præsumpsisset, ad simulacra dæmonum quibus adsistebat eum jussit pertrahi: 'Quia rebellem,' inquiens, 'ac sacrilegum celare quam militibus reddere maluisti, ut contemptor Divum meritam blasphemiæ suæ
D pœnam lueret, quæcumque illi debebantur supplicia tu solvere habes, si a cultu nostræ religionis discedere tentas.' At S. Albanus qui se ultro persecutoribus fidei Christianum esse prodiderat, nequaquam minas principis metuit; sed accinctus armis militiæ spiritalis, palam se jussis illius parere nolle pronunciabat. Tum judex: 'Cujus,' inquit, 'familiæ vel generis es?' Albanus respondit: 'Quid ad te [7]pertinet qua sim stirpe genitus? sed si veritatem religionis audire desideras, Christianum jam me esse, Christianisque officiis vacare cognosce.' Ait judex: 'Nomen tuum quæro, quod sine mora mihi insinua.' Et ille: 'Albanus,' inquit, 'a parentibus vocor, et Deum verum ac vivum qui universa creavit adoro semper et colo.' Tum judex repletus ira- Tribunal.

Quinimmo quicumque his sacrificia simulacris obtulerit, æternas inferni pœnas pro mercede recipiet.’ His auditis judex nimio furore commotus, cædi sanctum Dei confessorem a tortoribus præcepit, autumans se verberibus, quam verbis non poterat, cordis ejus [1]emollire constantiam. Denique cunctis pene egressis, judex sine obsequio in civitate substiterat. Igitur S. Albanus cui ardens inerat devotio mentis ad martyrium ocius pervenire, accessit ad torrentem, et dirigens ad cælum oculos, illico siccato alveo, vidit undam suis cessisse ac viam dedisse vestigiis. Quod cum inter alios etiam ipse carnifex qui eum percussurus erat, vidisset, festinavit ei ubi ad [a]locum destinatum morti venerat occurrere: divino nimirum admonitus instinctu, projectoque ense quem strictum tenuerat, pedibus ejus advolvitur, multum desiderans ut cum martyre vel pro martyre quem percutere jubebatur, C

In hujus ergo vertice S. Albanus dari sibi a Deo aquam rogavit, statimque incluso meatu ante pedes ejus fons perennis exortus est, ut omnes agnoscerent etiam torrentem martyri obsequium detulisse: neque enim fieri poterat ut in arduo montis D

Qui videlicet fluvius ministerio persoluto, devotione completa officii testimonium relinquens, reversus est ad naturam. Decollatus itaque martyr fortissimus ibidem accepit coronam vitæ quam repromisit Deus diligentibus se. [b] De hoc capite, exceptis descriptionibus sinuum et muri a Beda insertis, vide Gildam a sectione XI. ad XVII. S.

De chronologia eorum quæ e Gilda excerpsit Beda pauca hoc loco observanda sunt: Series rerum a Gilda Capp. XI.-XXVI. memoratarum, apud Bedæ Historiam sub imperiis Honorii, Theodosii minoris, et Marciani, id est inter Ann. 407 et 456, vel per decursum 49 annorum exhibetur: at in Chronico hæc sub imperiis Theodosii, Honorii, Theodosii minoris, et, omisso Marciano, Zenonis, vel inter Ann. 387 et 490, id est per curriculum 103 annorum distribuitur.

Quod autem hæc tam temporum quam imperatorum discrepantia, minime ex accuratiore rerum investigatione, dum tempus inter Chronicon perfectum Historiamque componendam elaberetur, proveniret, e sequentibus patebit. Quæ narrat Gildas Capp. XIV. XV., in Bedæ Chronico sub duobus imperiis disposita sunt; ultima scilicet Romanorum discessio sub Honorio, angustiæ vero quæ a denegatione reditus eorum exortæ sunt, sub Theodosio describuntur. Si Bedæ in animo fuerit excerpta e diversis scriptoribus ordine chronologico strictim concatenare, tunc inter hos eventus undecim annorum intervallum ad minus esset: nam S. Hieronymi obitus, A. 420, et Palladii missio, A. 431, hoc loco eis interponuntur. Ad hæc: Quæ apud Gildam, XI.-XVI., adusque Britonum angustias quæ epistolæ ad Aetium causam dedere pertendunt, in Historia I. 12, sub imperio Honorii locum obtinent, quum epistola ipsa sub anno vigesimo tertio Theodosii, An. scilicet 446, inveniatur; qua rerum collocatione, quæ causam consequentiamque ejus proximam apud Gildam exhibent, a Beda intercapedine ad minus annorum viginti trium dimota sunt. E diverso igitur ordine quo diversis in locis eadem collocantur, liquet Bedam in iis disponendis quæ e variis scriptoribus excerpserat, omnia ad libitum commiscuisse, nec animum nec facultatem ut chronologice distribuerentur habuisse.

Legatio prima. A. 414.

Ob harum ergo infestationem gentium, Brittones [a] legatos Romam cum epistolis mittentes, lacrymosis precibus auxilia flagitabant, [1] subjectionemque continuam dummodo hostis imminens longius arceretur, promittebant. Quibus mox legio destinatur armata, quæ ubi [2] in insulam advecta et congressa est cum hostibus, magnam eorum multitudinem sternens, cæteros sociorum finibus expulit: eosque interim a dirissima depressione liberatos hortata est instruere inter duo maria trans insulam murum, qui arcendis hostibus posset esse præsidio: sicque domum cum triumpho magno reversa est. At insulani murum quem jussi fuerant, non tam lapidibus quam cespitibus construentes, utpote nullum tanti operis artificem habentes, ad nihil utilem statuunt. Fecerunt autem eum inter duo freta vel sinus de quibus diximus maris, per millia passuum plurima: ut ubi aquarum munitio deerat, ibi præsidio valli fines suos ab hostium inruptione defenderent: cujus operis ibidem facti, id est, valli latissimi et altissimi, usque hodie certissima vestigia cernere licet. Incipit autem duorum ferme milium spatio a monasterio [b] Aebercurnig ad Occidentem, in loco qui sermone Pictorum [c] Peanfahel, lingua autem Anglorum Penneltun appellatur; et tendens contra Occidentem terminatur juxta urbem Alcluith.

Legatio secunda. A. 416.

Verum priores inimici, ut Romanum militem abisse conspexerant, mox advecti navibus inrumpunt terminos, cæduntque omnia, [3] et quasi maturam segetem obvia quæque metunt, calcant, transeunt: unde rursum mittuntur Romam legati, flebili voce auxilium implorantes, ne penitus misera patria deleretur, ne nomen Romanæ provinciæ quod apud eos tam diu claruerat, exterarum gentium improbitate obrutum vilesceret. Rursum mittitur legio, quæ inopinata tempore [d] autumni adveniens magnas hostium strages dedit, eosque qui evadere poterant omnes trans maria fugavit, qui prius anniversarias prædas trans maria [4] nullo obsistente cogere solebant. Tum Romani denunciavere Brittonibus, non se ultra ob eorum defensionem tam laboriosis expeditionibus posse fatigari: ipsos potius monent arma corripere et certandi cum hostibus studium subire, qui non aliam ob causam quam si ipsi inertia solverentur eis possent esse fortiores. Quin etiam, quod et hoc sociis quos derelinquere cogebantur aliquid commodi adlaturum putabant, murum a mari ad mare recto tramite inter urbes quæ ibidem ob metum hostium factæ fuerant, ubi et Severus quondam vallum fecerat, firmo de lapide conlocarunt: quem [5] videlicet murum hactenus famosum atque conspicuum, sumptu publico privatoque, adjuncta secum [6] Brittanorum manu construebant, octo pedes latum et duodecim altum, recta ab Oriente in Occasum linea, ut usque hodie intuentibus clarum est: quo mox condito dant fortia segni populo monita, præbent [7] instituendorum exemplaria armorum. Sed et in litore Oceani ad Meridiem quo naves eorum habebantur, quia et inde barbarorum inruptio timebatur, turres per intervalla ad prospectum maris collocant, et valedicunt sociis tanquam ultra non reversuri. Quibus ad sua remeantibus, cognita Scotti Pictique reditus denegatione, redeunt confestim ipsi, et solito confidentiores facti, omnem [8] Aquilonalem extremamque insulæ partem pro indigenis ad murum usque capessunt. A stupida [1]die noctuque marcebat. At contra non cessant uncinata hostium tela: ignavi propugnatores miserrime de muris tracti solo adlidebantur. CAP. XIII. UT REGNANTE THEODOSIO MINORE, CUJUS TEMPORE PALLADIUS AD SCOTTOS IN CHRISTUM CREDENTES MISSUS EST, BRITTONES AB AETIO CONSULE AUXILIUM FLAGITANTES NON IMPETRAVERINT.

B Anno Dominicæ Incarnationis quadringentesimo vigesimo tertio, Theodosius junior post Honorium quadragesimus quintus ab Augusto regnum suscipiens viginti et sex annos tenuit; cujus anno imperii [a]octavo Palladius ad Scottos in Christum [b]credentes a pontifice Romanæ ecclesiæ Cælestino primus mittitur episcopus. Anno autem regni ejus vigesimo tertio, [3]Aetius vir inlustris qui et patricius fuit, tertio cum Symmacho gessit consulatum. Ad hunc pauperculæ Brittonum reliquiæ mittunt epistolam, cujus hoc principium est: 'Aetio ter Consuli gemitus Brittanorum:' et in [c]processu epistolæ, ita suas calamitates explicant: 'Repellunt Barbari ad mare, repellit mare ad Barbaros; inter hæc oriuntur duo genera funerum, aut jugulamur, aut mergimur.' Neque hæc C tamen agentes quicquam ab illo auxilii impetrare quiverunt, utpote qui gravissimis eo tempore bellis cum [4]Blaedla et Attila regibus Hunnorum erat occupatus. Et quamvis anno ante hunc proximo Bledla Attilæ fratris sui sit interemptus insidiis, Attila tamen ipse adeo intolerabilis reipublicæ remansit hostis, ut totam pene Europam excisis invasisque civitatibus atque castellis conroderet. Quin et iisdem temporibus [d]fames Constantinopolim invasit: nec mora pestis secuta est; sed et plurimi ejusdem urbis muri cum quinquaginta septem turribus corruerunt; multis quoque civitatibus conlapsis fames et aerum pestifer odor [5]plura hominum milia jumentorumque delevit.

Cessante autem vastatione hostili, tantis frugum copiis insula [1]quantas nulla retro ætas meminit, affluere cœpit: cum quibus et luxuria crescere, et hanc continuo omnium lues scelerum comitari adceleravit, crudelitas præcipue, et odium veritatis amorque mendacii, ita ut siquis eorum mitior, et veritati aliquatenus propior videretur, in hunc quasi Brittaniæ subversorem, omnium odia telaque sine respectu contorquerentur. Initum namque est consilium quid agendum, ubi quærendum esset præsidium ad evitandas vel repellendas tam feras tamque creberrimas gentium [2]Aquilonalium inruptiones: placuitque omnibus cum suo rege Vurtigerno ut Saxonum gentem de transmarinis partibus in auxilium vocarent: quod Domini nutu dispositum esse constat, ut veniret contra inprobos malum, sicut evidentius rerum exitus probavit.

[a] De anno quo Britanniam advenerint Saxones, aut Bedam in incerto aut numeros in Codd. omnibus MSS. corruptos fuisse fatendum erit. De ea re hæc occurrunt. In Chronico A. 452, 'Marcianus et Valentinianus An. VII. Gens Anglorum... Britanniam...advenerunt.' In Historia, I. 15. 'An. 449...Marcianus cum Valentiniano...regnum adeptus VII. an. tenuit. Tunc Anglorum...gens invitata ...Britanniam...advehitur.' v. 24. 'An. 449. Marcianus cum Valentiniano imperium suscipiens septem annis tenuit: quorum tempore Angli a Britonibus accersiti Britanniam adierunt.' Ex his, adventus Saxonum sub imperio Marciani et Valentiniani laxe poni videretur. In Historia, I. 23, annus 596, 'An. 150 circiter adventus Anglorum,' et, v. 23, An. 731, 'adventus Anglorum circiter 285,' dicuntur. Hi numeri An. 447, vel, si anni pleni numerentur 446 pro eorum adventu darent. Ad hæc: In Historia, II. 14, An. 627, 'ab adventu Anglorum circiter 180,' et, v. 24, An. 597, 'adventus Anglorum 150,' vocantur. Hi vero Annum 448, vel si ut supra plenos numeremus, 447 postularent. Ex dictis ergo videretur adventui Saxonum tres epochas assignari posse.

Pagius, Critica in Baronium, An. 447, N° IX., annorum 449 et 447 repugnantiæ obviare nititur; asserens Bedam aliud tempus invitationi aliud adventui Saxonum assignasse; hoc cum anno 449, illud cum An. 447 ligasse: sed quoad invitationem, loquendi forma usum fuisse quæ revera non nisi ad adventum eorum respiceret. At etiam si huic enodationi, quamvis versutæ, consentiendum fuerit, quid de tertia epocha dicamus? nam hanc vel non animadvertit vel omnino tacuit Pagius.

A pace et salute contra adversarios militarent, illi militantibus debita stipendia conferrent. Advenerant autem de tribus Germaniæ populis fortioribus, id est, Saxonibus, Anglis, [1]Jutis. De [2]Jutarum[a] origine sunt Cantuarii et [3]Victuarii, hoc est, ea gens quæ Vectam tenet insulam, et ea quæ usque hodie in provincia Occidentalium Saxonum Jutarum natio nominatur, posita contra ipsam insulam Vectam. De Saxonibus, id est, ea regione quæ nunc [b]antiquorum Saxonum cognominatur, venere Orientales Saxones, Meridiani Saxones, Occidui Saxones. Porro de Anglis, hoc est, de illa patria quæ [c]Angulus dicitur et ab eo tempore usque hodie manere desertus inter provincias Jutarum et Saxonum perhibetur, Orientales Angli, [4]Mediterranei Angli,′ Merci, tota Nordanhymbrorum progenies, id est, illarum gentium quæ ad Boream Humbri fluminis inhabitant, Patria.

B cæterique Anglorum populi sunt orti. Duces fuisse perhibentur eorum primi duo fratres [5]Hengist et Horsa; e quibus Horsa postea occisus in bello a Brittonibus, hactenus in Orientalibus Cantiæ partibus [d]monumentum habet suo nomine insigne. Erant autem filii Victgilsi, [6]cujus pater Vitta,′ cujus pater Vecta, cujus pater Voden, de cujus stirpe multarum provinciarum regium genus originem duxit. Non mora ergo confluentibus certatim in insulam gentium memoratarum catervis, grandescere populus cœpit advenarum, ita ut [7]ipsis quoque qui eos advocaverant indigenis essent terrori. Tum subito inito ad tempus fœdere cum Pictis quos longius jam bellando pepulerant, in socios arma vertere incipiunt. Et primum quidem annonas sibi eos affluentius ministrare cogunt, quærentesque occasionem divortii, protestantur, nisi profusior sibi Duces. Eventus.

C alimentorum copia daretur, se cuncta insulæ loca rupto fœdere vastaturos. Neque [8]aliquanto segnius minas effectibus prosequuntur: siquidem, ut breviter dicam, accensus manibus paganorum ignis, justas de sceleribus populi, Dei ultiones expetiit, non illius inpar qui quondam a Chaldæis succensus Hierosolymorum mœnia immo [9]ædificia cuncta consumpsit. Sic enim et hic agente impio victore, immo disponente justo Judice, proximas quasque civitates agrosque depopulans, ab Orientali mari usque ad Occidentale, nullo prohibente suum continuavit incendium, totamque prope insulæ pereuntis superficiem obtexit. Ruebant ædificia publica simul et privata, passim sacerdotes inter altaria trucidabantur, præsules cum populis, sine ullo respectu honoris ferro pariter et flammis absumebantur, nec erat qui crudeliter interemptos sepulturæ traderet.

D Itaque nonnulli de miserandis reliquiis, in montibus comprehensi [10]acervatim jugulabantur: alii fame confecti procedentes manus hostibus dabant, pro accipiendis alimentorum subsidiis æternum subituri servitium, si tamen non continuo trucidarentur: alii transmarinas regiones dolentes petebant: alii perstantes in patria trepidi pauperem vitam in montibus, silvis, vel rupibus arduis suspecta semper mente agebant.

Verum Brittani cum neque suscipere dogma perversum, gratiam Christi blasphemando, ullatenus vellent, neque versutiam nefariæ persuasionis refutare verbis certando [h]sufficerent; inveniunt salubre consilium, ut a Gallicanis antistitibus auxilium belli spiritalis inquirant. [] I. 19. Constantius.[] [a] Eodem tempore ex Britanniis directa legatio Gallicanis episcopis nuntiavit Pelagianam perversitatem in locis suis late populos occupasse; et quam primum fidei Catholicæ debere succurri. Ob quam causam synodus numerosa collecta est, omniumque judicio duo præclara religionis lumina universorum precibus ambiuntur, Germanus ac Lupus apostolici sacerdotes, terram corporibus, cælum meritis possidentes. Et quanto laboriosior necessitas apparebat tanto eam promptius heroes devotissimi susceperunt, celeritatem negotii, fidei stimulis maturantes. [†] Hi itaque oceanum mare, Christo duce et auctore, conscendunt, qui famulos suos inter discrimina et tutos reddidit, et probatos. Ac primum de sinu Gallico flabris lenibus navis in altum provecta deducitur, donec ad æquor medium perveniret, ubi porrectis in longum visibus, nihil aliud quam cælum videretur et maria. Nec multo post occurrit in pelago legionis inimica vis dæmonum, qui tantos ac tales viros pertendere ad recipiendam populorum salutem lividis iniquitatibus inviderent. Opponunt pericula, procellas concitant, cælum diemque nubium nocte subducunt, tenebrarum caliginem maris atque aeris horrore congeminant. Ventorum furorem vela non sustinent, et oceani moles fragilis cymba vix tolerat.

[f] Quot annos ante adventum Saxonum S. Germanus in Brittaniam venerit Beda non dicit. Prosper adventum ejus ponit ad A. 429, eique alterum consectaneum addit ad A. 432, nempe adventum Palladii in Scotiam. Utrumque Beda in Historia notat, Palladii ad A. 430 vel 431, ipsissimis Prosperi verbis Cap. xiii., Germani in hoc loco, verbis etiam Prosperi quoad occasionem adventus, in reliquis Constantii, utpote auctoris coævi, summæque famæ, et Sancti Vitam exprofesso scribentis. Sed tanta est differentia hujus calculi Prosperiani a temporibus quæ Constantius assignat, et in quibus Beda eum sequitur ut difficile sit resolutu cui adhæreamus. ‘Ante paucos annos’ indefinitum est, et posset extendi ad Prosperi numeros in S. S. Germani missio prima cum Lupo.

A [a]magna synodo quærebatur in commune, qui [1]illic ad succurrendum fidei mitti deberent; atque omnium judicio [2]electi sunt apostolici sacerdotes Germanus [b]Autissiodorensis, et [c]Lupus [3]Trecasenæ civitatis episcopi, qui ad confirmandam fidem gratiæ cælestis [4]Brittanias venirent. Qui cum prompta devotione preces et jussa sanctæ ecclesiæ suscepissent, intrant oceanum, et usque ad medium itineris quo a Gallico sinu Brittanias usque tenditur, secundis flatibus navis tuta volabat. ministeria revertuntur, decursisque brevi spatiis pelagi,′ optati littoris quiete A potiuntur[a]. Ibi′ conveniens ex diversis partibus multitudo excepit sacerdotes, quos venturos etiam vaticinatio adversa prædixerat. Nunciabant enim sinistri spiritus quod timebant, qui imperio sacerdotum dum ab obsessis corporibus detruduntur, et tempestatis ordinem et pericula quæ intulerant fatebantur, victosque se eorum meritis et imperio non negabant.

Successus.

Interea Brittaniarum insulam [b]apostolici sacerdotes raptim opinione, prædicatione, virtutibus impleverunt; [c]divinusque [1]per eos sermo, quotidie′ non solum in ecclesiis, verum etiam per trivia, per rura [d]prædicabatur; ita′ ut passim et fideles catholici firmarentur, et depravati viam correctionis agnoscerent. Erat [e]illis apostolorum instar, et gloria et auctoritas per conscientiam, doctrina per litteras, virtutes ex meritis. [f]Itaque regionis universitas in eorum sententiam B prompta transfierat. Latebant abditi sinistræ persuasionis auctores, et more maligni spiritus, gemebant perire sibi populos evadentes, ad extremum diuturna meditatione concepta præsumunt inire conflictum. Procedunt conspicui divitiis, veste fulgentes, circumdati adsentatione multorum: [g]discrimenque certaminis subire′ maluerunt, quam in populo quem subverterant pudorem taciturnitatis incurrere, ne viderentur se ipsi silentio damnavisse. [a]Illic plane [h]inmensa multitudo;′ etiam cum conjugibus ac liberis [2]excita convenerat, aderat populus [3i]expectator, et futurus judex,′ adstabant partes dispari conditione dissimiles; hinc divina [k]fides, inde humana præsumptio; hinc [l]pietas, inde [m]superbia; inde Pelagius auctor, hinc Christus. Primo in loco beatissimi sacerdotes [4]præbuerunt adversariis copiam disputandi, quæ sola nuditate verborum, diu inaniter et aures C occupavit et tempora: deinde antistites venerandi, torrentes eloquii sui cum apostolicis et evangelicis [n]imbribus [b]profuderunt: miscebatur sermo proprius cum divino, et adsertiones [5]molestissimas lectionum testimonia sequebantur: convincitur vanitas, perfidia confutatur; ita ut ad singulas verborum objectiones [o]errare se, dum respondere [p]nequiit, fateretur:′ populus arbiter vix manus continet, judicium tamen clamore testatur.

Interea [a]Saxones, Pictique bellum adversum Brittones junctis viribus susceperunt, quos eadem necessitas in castra contraxerat: et cum trepidi partes suas pene inpares judicarent, sanctorum antistitum auxilium petierunt: qui promissum maturantes adventum, tantum [c]paventibus fiduciæ contulerunt, ut accessisse maximus crederetur exercitus. Aderant etiam Quadragesimæ venerabiles dies, quos religiosiores reddebat præsentia sacerdotum, in tantum ut cotidianis prædicationibus instituti certatim [d]populi, ad gratiam baptismatis convolarent. Nam maxima exercitus multitudo undam lavacri salutaris expetiit, [e]et ecclesia ad diem Resurrectionis Dominicæ frondibus contexta componitur, [f]atque in expeditione campestri instar civitatis aptatur. [a] Clausula quæ in variis lectionibus sequitur nullam habet veterum MSS. auctoritatem; docet tamen quis fuerit sensus illius temporis cum hæc verba addebantur, id est quod in primo S. Germani adventu Saxones in Brittania remanebant pro imperio decertantes. S.

Temporum indicia quæ apud Constantium inter primum secundumque Germani ad Britanniam adventum obveniunt, sunt duo: iter sc. ejus causa Hilarium visendi, et Auxiliaris in Gallia præfectura. Iter nobis haud multum proderit; nempe quia Hilarius ab A. 430 ad A. 448, Arelati sedebat: quoad Auxiliarem, credendum est eum ante A. 439 præfectura cessisse; quod autem ante A. 435 hoc munus susceperit perprobabile est. v. Bouquet, I. 135. 613. Si ergo, quod tamen minime liquet, concedendum fuerit, annum 429 a Prospero Germani primo adventui attributum in dubium vocari posse, attamen voces 'interea' apud Constantium et 'nec multo interposito tempore' apud Bedam, multum temporis comprehendisse necesse erit; quippe consentiunt omnes adventum Germani secundum paulo ante obitum ejus contigisse, qui quidem A. 448 vel 449 evenit. Quoad 'nec multo interposito tempore' apud Bedam, nihil aliud est quam vox 'interea' apud Constantium, et velut 'ante paucos annos.' I. 17, nulla de tempore ratione habita, narrationis connectendæ causa assumitur. In subsequente nota Smithiana primus Germani reditus cum secundo confunditur; quem in errorem ut videtur incidit vir doctus, quia ad Sirmondum potius quam ad Constantium sese contulerit.

Siquidem anno ab Incarnatione Domini quingentesimo octogesimo secundo, Mauricius ab Augusto quinquagesimus quartus imperium suscipiens, viginti et uno annis tenuit. Cujus anno regni decimo Gregorius, vir doctrina et actione præcipuus, pontificatum Romanæ et apostolicæ sedis sortitus rexit annos tredecim menses sex, et dies decem; qui divino admonitus instinctu anno decimo quarto ejusdem principis, adventus vero Anglorum in Brittaniam anno circiter
C centesimo quinquagesimo, misit servum Dei Augustinum, et alios [a]plures cum eo monachos timentes Dominum, prædicare verbum Dei genti Anglorum. Qui cum jussis pontificalibus obtemperantes, memoratum opus adgredi cœpissent, jamque [4]aliquantulum [a]itineris confecissent, perculsi timore inerti, redire domum potius, quam barbaram, feram, incredulamque gentem, cujus ne linguam quidem nossent, adire cogitabant, et hoc esse tutius communi consilio decernebant. Nec mora, Augustinum, quem eis episcopum ordinandum si ab Anglis susciperentur disposuerat, domum remittunt, qui a B. Gregorio humili supplicatu obtineret ne tam periculosam, tam laboriosam, tam incertam peregrinationem adire deberent. Quibus ille exhortatorias mittens [b]literas, in opus eos verbi, divino confisos auxilio, proficisci suadet. Quarum videlicet litterarum

Sed nec tamen id fecisse Bedam crediderim quod historicus esset Saxonicus, ut quidam volunt, nam historicus Brittonum Gildas genti suæ in eo non pepercit. Facile Brittones excusatos velim quod Saxonibus inimicis Evangelium non prædicarent, sed eum neglectum non Beda solus notavit, Gregorius papa id queritur, non solum de Brittonibus, sed etiam de Gallis. Liber Gildæ est de 'Excidio Brittaniæ,' satis hodie notus. Gildas auctor fere ignoratur, nimia scilicet distinctione obrutus. Roboratus ergo confirmatione beati patris Gregorii Augustinus cum famulis Christi qui erant cum eo, rediit in opus verbi, pervenitque Brittaniam. Erat eo tempore rex †Ædilberct in Cantia potentissimus, qui ad confinium usque [5]Humbræ fluminis maximi, quo Meridiani et Septentrionales Anglorum populi dirimuntur, fines imperii tetenderat. Est autem ad Orientalem Cantiæ plagam Tanatos insula non modica, id est, magnitudinis juxta consuetudinem æstimationis Anglorum, [c]familiarum sexcentarum, quam a continenti terra secernit fluvius Vantsumu, qui est latitudinis circiter trium stadiorum, et duobus tantum in locis est transmeabilis: utrumque enim caput protendit in mare. Primo enim epistola quæ in Beda est ad Etherium Arelatensem, non invenitur eo titulo in Gregorii registro. Deinde habetur in registro alia epistola ad Virgilium Arelatensem, ejusdem quidem tenoris, sed alterius formæ. Exinde colligo, erratum potius esse in epistola, quam in nomine. Augustino abeunte Gregorius plures epistolas scripsit eodem die, earum originales in scrinio Apostolico simul jacentes Nothelmus transcripsit, et quidni potuit unam pro alia sumere, et illam quæ ad Etherium Lugdunensem scripta fuit, loco ejus quæ ad Virgilium Arelatensem, nominibus et titulis lapsu transpositis ad Bedam adferre? S.

A ferme quadraginta. Acceperant autem, præcipiente beato papa Gregorio, de gente Francorum interpretes; et mittens ad Ædilberctum, mandavit se venisse de Roma, ac nuncium ferre optimum, qui sibi obtemperantibus, æterna in cælis gaudia, et regnum sine fine cum Deo vivo et vero futurum, sine ulla [1]dubietate promitteret. Qui hæc audiens, manere illos in ea quam adierant insula, et eis necessaria ministrari donec videret quid eis faceret, jussit. Nam et antea fama ad eum Christianæ religionis pervenerat, utpote qui et uxorem habebat Christianam de gente Francorum regia, [2]vocabulo [a]Bercta;' quam ea conditione a parentibus acceperat, ut ritum fidei ac religionis suæ cum episcopo quem ei adjutorem fidei dederant, nomine [b]Liudhardo, [3]inviolatum servare licentiam haberet.

B cum sociis ad suum ibidem advenire colloquium. Caverat enim ne in aliquam domum ad se introirent, vetere usus augurio, ne superventu suo, si quid maleficæ artis habuissent, eum superando deciperent. At illi non [5]dæmonica, sed divina virtute præditi veniebant, crucem pro vexillo ferentes argenteam, et imaginem Domini Salvatoris in tabula depictam, lætaniasque canentes, pro sua simul et eorum propter quos et ad quos venerant salute æterna, Domino supplicabant. Cumque ad jussionem regis residentes, verbum ei vitæ, una cum omnibus qui aderant ejus comitibus prædicarent; respondit ille dicens: 'Pulchra sunt quidem verba et promissa quæ adfertis; sed quia nova sunt, et incerta, non his possum adsensum tribuere, relictis eis quæ tanto tempore cum omni Anglorum gente servavi. Verum quia de longe huc peregrini
C venistis, et ut ego mihi videor perspexisse, ea quæ vos vera et optima credebatis, nobis quoque communicare desiderastis, nolumus molesti esse vobis: quin potius benigno vos hospitio recipere, et quæ victui sunt vestro necessaria, ministrare curamus: nec prohibemus quin omnes quos potestis fidei vestræ religionis prædicando societis.' Dedit ergo eis [c]mansionem in civitate Doruvernensi, quæ imperii sui totius erat metropolis, eisque, ut promiserat, cum administratione victus temporalis, licentiam quoque prædicandi non abstulit. Fertur autem quia adpropinquantes civitati, more suo cum cruce sancta, et imagine magni Regis Domini nostri Jesu Christi, hanc lætaniam consona voce modularentur: 'Deprecamur te, Domine, in omni misericordia tua, ut auferatur furor tuus et ira tua a civitate ista, et de domo sancta tua quoniam pec-

Cap. XXVII. Ut idem episcopus factus, Gregorio papæ, quæ sint Brittaniæ gesta mandarit, et simul de necessariis ejus responsa petens acceperit.

Augustini ordinatio. A. 597.

Notificatoriæ ad papam. A. 598.

I. De episcoporum conversatione et oblationum portionibus.

I. Interrogatio [2]B. Augustini episcopi Cantuariorum ecclesiæ. 'De episcopis, qualiter cum suis clericis conversentur, vel de his quæ fidelium oblationibus accedunt [3]altario; quantæ debeant fieri portiones, et qualiter episcopus agere in ecclesia debeat.'

[c] Possessiones ab Ædilbercto donatas, vide Monast. Angl. I. De Mon. Cantuar. Ubi nota etiam obiter, quod in quibusdam harum donationum chartis errores nonnulli in typos irrepserunt, quos e MS. Aul. Trin. Cantab. qui Thomæ Elmham tribuitur, corrigere liceat. S.

A ribus; quarta ecclesiis reparandis. [a]Sed quia tua fraternitas monasterii regulis erudita, seorsum [1]fieri non debet a clericis suis, in ecclesia Anglorum, quæ auctore Deo nuper adhuc ad fidem adducta est, hanc debet conversationem instituere, quæ initio nascentis ecclesiæ fuit patribus nostris; in quibus nullus eorum ex his quæ possidebant, aliquid suum esse dicebat, sed erant eis omnia communia.

[b]Si [c]qui vero sunt clerici extra sacros ordines constituti, qui se continere non possunt, sortiri uxores debent, et stipendia sua exterius accipere. Quia et de hisdem [2]patribus de quibus præfati sumus, novimus [†]scriptum, quod dividebatur singulis prout cuique opus erat. [×] Luc. xi. 41.

II. Interrogatio Augustini. 'Cum una sit fides, [3]sunt ecclesiarum diversæ consuetudines, et altera consuetudo missarum in sancta Romana ecclesia, atque altera in Galliarum tenetur?'

II. De ecclesiarum consuetudinibus.

Respondit Gregorius papa. [d]'Novit fraternitas tua Romanæ ecclesiæ consuetudinem, in qua se meminit nutritam. Sed mihi placet, [4]sive in Romana, sive in Galliarum, seu in qualibet ecclesia, aliquid invenisti quod plus omnipo-

C tenti Deo possit placere, sollicite eligas, et in Anglorum ecclesia, quæ adhuc ad fidem nova est, institutione præcipua, quæ de multis ecclesiis colligere potuisti, infundas. Non enim pro locis res, sed pro bonis rebus loca amanda sunt. Ex singulis ergo quibusque ecclesiis, quæ pia, quæ religiosa, quæ recta sunt elige, et hæc quasi in fasciculum collecta, apud Anglorum mentes in consuetudinem depone.'

III. Interrogatio Augustini. 'Obsecro quid pati debeat, si quis aliquid de ecclesia [5]furtu abstulerit?'

III. De pœnis sacrilegii.

Respondit Gregorius. 'Hoc [e]tua fraternitas ex persona furis pensare potest, qualiter valeat corrigi. Sunt enim quidam qui habentes subsidia furtum perpetrant; et sunt alii qui hac in re ex inopia delinquunt: unde necesse est ut

D quidam damnis, quidam vero verberibus; et quidam [6]districtius, quidam autem levius corrigantur. Et cum paulo districtius agitur, ex caritate agendum est, et non ex furore: quia ipsi hoc præstatur qui corrigitur, ne gehennæ ignibus tradatur. Sic enim nos fidelibus tenere disciplinam debemus, sicut boni patres carnalibus filiis solent, quos et pro culpis verberibus feriunt, et tamen ipsos quos doloribus adfligunt habere heredes quærunt; et quæ possident ipsis servant quos irati insequi videntur. Hæc ergo caritas in mente tenenda est, et ipsa modum correptionis [7]dictat, ita ut mens extra rationis regulam omnino nihil faciat. [8]Addes etiam, quomodo ea quæ furtu de ecclesiis abstulerint reddere debeant. Sed absit ut ecclesia cum augmento recipiat quod de terrenis rebus videtur amittere, et lucra de vanis quærere.'[9]

E IV. Interrogatio Augustini. 'Si debeant duo germani fratres singulas sorores accipere, quæ sunt ab illis longa progenie generatæ?'

IV. De conjugio fratrum et sororum.

Respondit Gregorius. 'Hoc fieri modis omnibus licet: nequaquam enim in sacris eloquiis invenitur quod huic capitulo contradicere videatur.'

V. Ad quotam generationem.

V. Interrogatio Augustini. ‘Usque ad quotam generationem fideles debeant cum propinquis sibi conjugio copulari? et [a]novercis et cognatis si liceat copulari conjugio?’ A

Respondit Gregorius. [b]‘Quædam terrena lex in Romana republica permittit, ut sive frater et soror, seu duorum fratrum germanorum vel duarum sororum filius et filia misceantur. Sed experimento didicimus, ex tali conjugio sobolem non posse succrescere: et sacra lex prohibet cognationis turpitudinem revelare. Unde necesse est ut jam [c]tertia vel quarta generatio fidelium licenter sibi jungi debeat: nam secunda quam prædiximus, a se omni modo debet abstinere. Cum noverca autem [1]miscere grave est facinus, quia et in lege scriptum est: ⁂ Levit. xviii. 7. ⁂‘Turpitudinem patris tui non revelabis.’ Neque enim patris turpitudinem filius revelare potest. Sed quia scriptum est: × Gen. ii. 24. ×‘Erunt duo in carne una;’ qui B turpitudinem novercæ quæ una caro cum patre fuit revelare præsumpserit, profecto patris turpitudinem revelavit. Cum cognata quoque miscere prohibitum est, quia per conjunctionem priorem caro fratris fuerat facta. Pro qua re etiam Johannes Baptista capite truncatus est, et sancto martyrio consummatus, cui non est dictum ut Christum negaret, et [2]pro Christi confessione occisus est; sed quia isdem Dominus noster Jesus Christus dixerat: ϒ Joh. xiv. 6. ϒEgo sum veritas; quia pro veritate Johannes occisus est, videlicet et pro Christo sanguinem fudit. [d]Quia vero sunt multi in Anglorum gente, qui dum adhuc in infidelitate essent, huic nefando conjugio dicuntur admixti, ad fidem venientes admonendi sunt ut se abstineant, et grave hoc esse peccatum cognoscant. Tremendum Dei judicium timeant, ne pro carnali [3]dilectione tormenta æterni cruciatus incurrant. C Non tamen pro hac re, sacri corporis ac sanguinis Domini communione privandi sunt, ne in eis illa ulcisci videantur, in quibus se per ignorantiam ante lavacrum baptismatis adstrinxerunt. In hoc enim tempore sancta ecclesia quædam per fervorem corrigit, quædam per mansuetudinem tolerat, quædam per considerationem dissimulat, atque ita portat et dissimulat, ut sæpe malum quod adversatur portando et dissimulando compescat. Omnes autem qui ad fidem veniunt, admonendi sunt, ne tale aliquid audeant perpetrare. Si qui autem perpetraverint, corporis et sanguinis Domini communione privandi sunt: quia sicut in his qui per ignorantiam fecerunt, culpa aliquatenus toleranda est, ita in his fortiter insequenda, qui non metuunt sciendo peccare.’

VI. De ordinatione episcoporum.

VI. Interrogatio Augustini. ‘Si longinquitas itineris magna interjacet, D ut episcopi non facile valeant convenire, an debeat sine aliorum episcoporum præsentia episcopus ordinari?’

Respondit Gregorius. ‘Et quidem in Anglorum ecclesia, in qua adhuc [e]solus tu episcopus inveniris, ordinare episcopum non aliter nisi sine episcopis potes. Nam quando de Gallis episcopi [4]veniunt, qui in ordinatione episcopi testes adsistant? Sed [f]fraternitatem tuam ita volumus episcopos ordinare, ut ipsi sibi episcopi longo intervallo minime disjungantur; quatenus nulla sit necessitas, ut in ordinatione episcopi, pastores quoque alii quorum præsentia valde est utilis, facile debeant convenire. Cum igitur auctore Deo ita fuerint episcopi in propinquis sibi locis ordinati, per omnia episcoporum ordinatio sine adgregatis tribus vel quatuor episcopis fieri non debet. Nam in ipsis rebus spiritalibus ut E sapienter et mature disponantur, exemplum trahere a rebus etiam carnalibus possumus. Certe enim dum conjugia in mundo celebrantur, conjugati quique convocantur, ut qui in via jam conjugii præcesserunt, in subsequentis quoque copulæ gaudio misceantur. Cur non ergo et in hac spiritali ordinatione, qua per sacrum ministerium homo Deo conjungitur, tales conveniant, qui vel in [1]provectu ordinati episcopi gaudeant, vel pro ejus custodia omnipotenti Deo preces pariter fundant.'

VII. Interrogatio Augustini. 'Qualiter debemus cum Galliarum Brittaniarumque episcopis agere?' VII. Qualiter cum Gall. et Britt. episcopis.

Respondit Gregorius. [a]'In Galliarum [2]episcopis nullam tibi auctoritatem tribuimus: quia ab antiquis prædecessorum meorum temporibus pallium Arelatensis episcopus accepit, quem nos privare auctoritate percepta minime debemus. Si igitur contingat ut fraternitas tua ad Galliarum provinciam transeat, cum eodem Arelatense episcopo debet agere, qualiter, si qua sunt in episcopis vitia, corrigantur. Qui si forte in disciplinæ vigore tepidus existat, tuæ fraternitatis zelo accendendus est. Cui etiam [b]epistolas fecimus, ut cum tuæ sanctitatis præsentia in Galliis, et ipse tota mente subveniat, et quæ sunt Creatoris nostri jussioni contraria, ab episcoporum moribus compescat. Ipse autem [3]extra auctoritatem propriam' episcopos Galliarum judicare non poteris; sed suadendo, blandiendo, bona quoque opera eorum imitationi monstrando, pravorum mentes ad sanctitatis studia reforma: quia [c]scriptum est in lege: [A]'Per alienam messem transiens, falcem mittere non debet, sed manu spicas conterere et manducare.' Falcem enim judicii mittere non potes in ea segete, quæ alteri videtur esse commissa; sed per [4]affectum boni operis, frumenta dominica vitiorum suorum paleis exspolia, et in ecclesiæ corpore monendo et persuadendo quasi mandendo converte. Quicquid vero ex auctoritate agendum est, cum prædicto Arelatense episcopo agatur, ne prætermitti possit hoc, quod antiqua patrum institutio invenit. Brittaniarum vero omnes episcopos tuæ fraternitati committimus, ut indocti doceantur, infirmi persuasione roborentur, perversi auctoritate corrigantur.'[d]

VIII. Interrogatio Augustini. 'Si prægnans mulier debeat baptizari? aut postquam genuerit, post quantum tempus possit ecclesiam intrare? aut etiam ne morte præoccupetur quod genuerit, post quot dies hoc liceat sacri baptismatis sacramenta percipere? aut post quantum temporis huic vir suus possit in carnis copulatione conjungi? aut si menstrua consuetudine tenetur, an ecclesiam intrare ei liceat, aut sacræ communionis sacramenta percipere? aut vir suæ conjugi permixtus, priusquam lavetur aqua, si ecclesiam possit intrare? vel etiam ad mysterium communionis sacræ accedere? Quæ omnia rudi Anglorum genti oportet [5]haberi comperta.' VIII. De puerperis, nutricibus, menstruantibus, et copula.

Respondit Gregorius. 'Hoc non ambigo fraternitatem tuam esse requisitam, cui jam et responsum reddidisse me arbitror. Sed hoc quod ipse dicere et sentire potuisti, credo quia mea apud te volueris responsione firmari. Mulier etenim prægnans cur non debeat baptizari, cum non sit ante omnipotentis Dei Puerperæ.

'Fecimus quod petisti, quatenus populus qui in loco quondam S. Sixti martyris corpus dixerunt venerari, quod tuæ fraternitati nec verum nec veraciter sanctum videtur, certa sanctissimi et probatissimi martyris beneficia suscipiens, colere incerta non debeat. Mihi tamen videtur, quia si corpus quod a populo cujusdam martyris esse creditur, nullis illis miraculis coruscat, et neque aliqui de antiquioribus existunt, qui se a parentibus passionis ejus ordinem audisse fateantur, ita reliquiæ quas petisti, seorsum condendæ sunt, ut locus in quo præfatum corpus jacet, modis omnibus obstruatur, nec permittatur populus certum deserere, et incertum venerari.' Occasio hujus obsecrationis fuisse dicitur, quod Augustinus invenisset in Cantio traditionem de Sixto quodam cujus reliquiæ a Brittanis olim colebantur. Hanc ille falsam merito suspicatus, veras, quas putavit, reliquias petiit. Sed de hac obsecratione vel responsione Beda nihil habet. oculos culpa aliqua fœcunditas carnis? Nam cum primi parentes nostri in A paradiso deliquissent, inmortalitatem quam acceperant, recto Dei judicio perdiderunt. Quia itaque isdem omnipotens Deus humanum genus pro culpa sua funditus exstinguere noluit, et immortalitatem homini pro peccato suo abstulit; et tamen pro benignitate suæ pietatis, fœcunditatem ei sobolis reservavit. Quod ergo naturæ humanæ ex omnipotentis Dei dono servatum est, qua ratione poterit a sacri baptismatis gratia prohibere? In illo quippe mysterio, in quo omnis culpa funditus exstinguitur, valde stultum est, si donum gratiæ contradicere posse videatur. [a] Cum vero enixa fuerit mulier, post quot dies debeat ecclesiam
erit, actura gratias intrat ecclesiam, nullo peccati pondere gravatur: voluptas etenim carnis, non dolor in culpa est. In carnis autem commixtione voluptas est: nam in prolis prolatione gemitus. Unde et ipsi primæ matri omnium, × Gen. iii. 6. dicitur× '[2]in doloribus paries.' Si itaque enixam mulierem prohibemus ecclesiam intrare, ipsam ei pœnam suam in culpam deputamus. Baptizare autem vel enixam mulierem, vel hoc quod genuerit, si mortis periculo urgetur, vel [3]ipsam hora eadem qua [4]gignit, vel hoc quod gignitur, eadem qua natum est, nullo modo prohibetur: quia sancti mysterii gratia sicut viventibus atque discernentibus, cum magna discretione providenda est; ita his quibus mors inminet, sine ulla dilatione proferenda; ne dum adhuc tempus ad præbendum redemptionis mysterium quæritur, interveniente paululum mora inveniri non C

Nutrices. Ad ejus [5]vero concubitum vir suus accedere non debet, quoadusque qui gignitur, ablactatur. Prava autem in conjugatorum moribus consuetudo surrexit, ut mulieres, filios quos gignunt, [6]nutrire contemnant, eosque aliis mulieribus ad nutriendum tradant, quod videlicet ex sola causa incontinentiæ videtur inventum: quia dum se continere nolunt, despiciunt lactare quos gignunt. Hæ itaque quæ filios suos ex prava consuetudine aliis ad nutriendum tradunt, nisi purgationis tempus transierit, viris suis non debent admisceri: quippe quia et sine partus causa, [7]cum in suetis menstruis detinentur, viris suis misceri prohibentur; ita ut morte lex sacra feriat, si quis vir ad menstruatam mulierem

Novimus namque quod +mulier quæ fluxum patiebatur sanguinis, post tergum Domini humiliter veniens, vestimenti ejus fimbriam tetigit, atque ab ea statim sua infirmitas recessit. Si ergo in fluxu sanguinis posita, laudabiliter potuit Domini vestimentum tangere: cur quæ menstruam sanguinis patitur, ei non liceat Domini ecclesiam intrare? Sed dicis: Illam infirmitas compulit; has vero de quibus loquimur, consuetudo constringit. Perpende autem, frater carissime, quia omne quod in hac mortali carne patimur ex infirmitate naturæ, est digno Dei judicio post culpam ordinatum. A explorare? Feminæ itaque et menstruus sui sanguinis fluxus egritudo est. Si igitur bene præsumsit quæ vestimentum Domini in languore posita tetigit, quod uni personæ infirmanti conceditur, cur non concedatur cunctis mulieribus, quæ naturæ suæ vitio infirmantur? Sanctæ autem communionis mysterium in eisdem diebus percipere non debet prohiberi. Si autem ex veneratione magna percipere non præsumit, laudanda est; sed si perceperit, non judicanda. Bonarum quippe mentium est, et ibi aliquo modo culpas suas agnoscere, ubi culpa non est; quia sæpe sine culpa agitur quod venit ex culpa: unde etiam cum esurimus, sine culpa comedimus, [1]quibus ex culpa primi hominis factum est ut esuriamus. Menstrua enim consuetudo mulieribus non aliqua culpa est, videlicet [2]quæ naturaliter [3]accedit. Sed tamen quod natura ipsa ita vitiata est, ut
B etiam sine voluntatis studio videatur esse polluta, ex culpa venit vitium, in quo se ipsa, qualis per judicium facta sit, humana natura cognoscat. Et homo qui culpam sponte perpetravit, reatum culpæ portet invitus. Atque ideo feminæ cum semetipsis considerent, et si in menstrua consuetudine ad sacramentum Dominici corporis et sanguinis accedere non præsumant, de sua recta consideratione laudandæ sunt; dum vero [4]percipiendo ex religiosæ vitæ consuetudine, ejusdem mysterii amore rapiuntur, reprimendæ, sicut prædiximus, non sunt. Sicut enim in Testamento veteri exteriora opera observantur, ita in Testamento novo, non tam quod exterius agitur, quam id quod interius cogitatur, sollicita intentione adtenditur, ut subtili sententia puniatur. Nam cum multa lex velut inmunda manducare prohibeat; in evangelio tamen Dominus dicit:
C [א]'Non quod intrat in os, coinquinat hominem; sed quæ exeunt de ore, illa sunt quæ coinquinant hominem.' Atque paulo post subjecit exponens: [א]'Ex corde exeunt cogitationes malæ.' Ubi ubertim indicatum est, quia illud ab omnipotente Deo pollutum esse in opere ostenditur, quod ex pollutæ cogitationis radice generatur. Unde Paulus quoque apostolus dicit: [ר]'Omnia munda mundis, coinquinatis autem et infidelibus nihil est mundum.' Atque mox ejusdem causam coinquinationis adnuntians subjungit: 'Coinquinata sunt enim et mens eorum et conscientia.' Si ergo ei cibus immundus non est cui mens immunda non fuerit: cur quod munda mente mulier ex natura patitur, et in immunditiam reputetur?

D non debet; sed neque lotus intrare statim debet. Lex autem veteri populo præcepit, ut mixtus vir mulieri, et lavari aqua debeat, et ante solis occasum ecclesiam non intrare: quod tamen intellegi spiritaliter potest. Quia mulieri vir miscetur, quando inlicitæ concupiscentiæ animus in cogitatione per delectationem conjungitur; quia nisi prius ignis concupiscentiæ a mente deferveat, dignum se congregationi fratrum æstimare non debet, qui se gravari per nequitiam pravæ voluntatis videt. Quamvis de hac re diversæ hominum nationes diversa sentiant, atque alia custodire videantur; Romanorum tamen semper ab antiquioribus usus fuit, post admixtionem propriæ conjugis, et lavacri purificationem quærere, et ab ingressu ecclesiæ paululum reverenter abstinere. Nec hæc dicentes, culpam deputamus esse conjugium; sed quia [5]ipsa licita admixtio
E conjugis sine [6]voluntate carnis fieri non potest, a sacri loci ingressu abstinendum est; quia voluntas ipsa esse sine culpa nullatenus potest. Non enim de adulterio, sive fornicatione, sed de legitimo conjugio natus fuerat qui dicebat: [+]'Ecce enim in iniquitatibus conceptus sum, et in peccatis concepit me mater mea.' Qui enim in iniquitatibus conceptum se noverat, a delicto se natum gemebat: quia portat [7]in ramo humorem vitii, quem traxit ex radice. In quibus tamen [8]verbis non admixtionem conjugum iniquitatem nominat, sed ipsam videlicet voluptatem admixtionis. Sunt etenim multa quæ licita [1]probantur esse′ ac legitima, et tamen in eorum actu aliquatenus fœdamur; sicut sæpe irascendo culpas insequimur, et tranquillitatem in nobis animi perturbamus: et cum rectum sit quod agitur, non est tamen adprobabile quod in eo animus perturbatur. Contra vitia quippe delinquentium iratus fuerat qui dicebat: ⁂ ‘Turbatus est [2]præ ira′ oculus meus.’ Quia enim non valet nisi tranquilla mens in contemplationis se lucem suspendere, in ira suum oculum turbatum dolebat: quia dum male acta deorsum insequitur, confundi atque turbari a summorum contemplatione cogebatur. Et laudabilis ergo est ira contra vitium, et tamen molesta, [3]qua turbatum se aliquem reatum incurrisse [4]æstimabat. Oportet itaque [5]legitimam carnis copulam′, ut causa prolis sit, non voluptatis; et carnis commixtio, creandorum liberorum sit gratia, non satisfactio vitiorum. Si quis vero [6]suam conjugem′ non cupidine voluptatis raptus, sed solummodo creandorum liberorum gratia utitur, iste profecto sive de ingressu ecclesiæ, [7]seu de sumendo Dominici corporis sanguinisque mysterio, suo est judicio relinquendus; quia a nobis prohiberi non debet accipere, qui in igne positus nescit ardere. Cum vero non amor [8]ortandi sobolis, sed voluntas dominatur in opere commixtionis: habent conjuges etiam de sua commixtione quod defleant. Hoc enim eis concedit sancta prædicatio; et tamen de ipsa concessione metu animum concutit. Nam cum Paulus apostolus [9]diceret: ⁂ ‘Qui se continere non potest, habeat uxorem suam;’ statim subjungere curavit: ‘Hoc autem dico secundum indulgentiam, non secundum imperium.’ Non enim indulgetur quod licet, quia justum est. Quod igitur indulgere dixit, culpam esse demonstravit. Vigilanti vero mente pensandum est, quod in Sina monte Dominus ad populum locuturus, prius eundem populum abstinere a mulieribus præcepit. Et si illuc ubi Dominus per creaturam subditam hominibus loquebatur, tanta provisione est munditia corporis requisita, ut qui verba Dei perciperent mulieribus mixti non essent; quanto magis mulieres, quæ corpus Domini omnipotentis accipiunt, custodire in se munditiam carnis debent, ne ipsa inæstimabilis mysterii magnitudine graventur? Hinc [10]etiam ad David de pueris suis per sacerdotem dicitur, ut si a mulieribus mundi essent, panes propositionis acciperent, quos omnino non acciperent, nisi prius mundos eos David a mulieribus fateretur? Tunc autem vir qui post admixtionem conjugis lotus aqua fuerit, etiam sacræ communionis mysterium valet accipere, cum ei juxta præfinitam sententiam, etiam ecclesiam licuerit intrare.’

IX. De illusione somnii.

Interrogatio Augustini. ‘Si post inlusionem quæ per somnium solet accidere, vel corpus Domini quilibet accipere valeat; vel, si sacerdos sit, sacra mysteria celebrare?’

Respondit Gregorius. ‘Hunc quidem [a]Testamentum veteris legis, sicut in superiori capitulo jam diximus, pollutum dicit, et nisi lotum aqua, usque ad vesperam intrare ecclesiam non concedit. Quod tamen aliter populus spiritalis intellegens, sub eodem intellectu accipiet quo præfati sumus: quia quasi per somnium inluditur qui tentatur immunditia, veris imaginibus in cogitatione inquinatur; sed lavandus est aqua, ut culpas cogitationis lacrymis abluat: et nisi prius ignis tentationis recesserit, reum se quasi usque ad vesperum cognoscat. Sed est in eadem inlusione valde necessaria discretio, quæ subtiliter pensari debeat, ex qua re accidat menti dormientis: aliquando enim ex crapula, aliquando ex naturæ superfluitate et infirmitate, aliquando ex cogitatione contingit ita. Et quidem cum ex naturæ superfluitate vel infirmitate evenerit, omnimodo hæc inlusio non est timenda; quia hanc [11]animum nescientem per-

A tulisse magis [1]dolendum est, quam fecisse. Cum vero ultra modum appetitus gulæ in sumendis alimentis rapitur, atque idcirco humorum receptacula gravantur, habet exinde animus aliquem reatum, non tamen usque ad prohibitionem percipiendi sancti mysterii, vel missarum sollemnia celebrandi: cum fortasse aut festus dies exigit, aut exhiberi mysterium, pro eo quod sacerdos alius in loco deest, ipsa necessitas compellit. Nam si adsunt alii qui implere [2]ministerium valeant, inlusio pro crapula facta, a perceptione sacri mysterii prohibere non debet; sed ab immolatione sacri mysterii abstinere, ut arbitror, humiliter debet: si tamen dormientis mentem turpi [3]imaginatione non concusserit. Nam sunt quibus ita plerumque inlusio nascitur, ut eorum animus, etiam in somno corporis positus, turpibus imaginationibus non fœdetur. Qua in re unum ibi
B ostenditur, ipsa mens rea, non tamen vel suo judicio libera, cum se, etsi dormienti corpore, nihil meminit vidisse, tamen in vigiliis corporis, meminit in ingluviem cecidisse. Sin vero ex turpi cogitatione vigilantis oritur inlusio dormientis, patet animo reatus suus: videt enim a qua radice inquinatio illa processerit, quia quod cogitavit sciens, hoc pertulit nesciens. Sed pensandum est, ipsa cogitatio utrum suggestione, an delectatione, vel, quod majus est, peccati consensu acciderit. Tribus enim modis impletur omne peccatum; videlicet suggestione, delectatione, consensu. Suggestio quippe fit per diabolum, delectatio per carnem, consensus per spiritum: quia et primam culpam serpens suggessit, Eva velut caro delectata est, Adam vero velut spiritus consensit: et necessaria est magna discretio, ut inter suggestionem atque delectationem,
C inter delectationem et consensum, judex sui animus præsideat. Cum enim malignus spiritus peccatum suggerit in mente, si nulla peccati delectatio sequatur, peccatum omnimodo perpetratum non est; cum vero [4]delectari caro cœperit, tunc peccatum incipit nasci: si autem etiam ex deliberatione consentit, tunc peccatum cognoscitur perfici. In suggestione igitur peccati [5]initium est, in delectatione fit nutrimentum, in consensu perfectio. Et sæpe contingit ut hoc quod malignus spiritus seminat in cogitatione, caro in delectationem trahat; nec tamen anima eidem delectationi consentiat. Et cum caro [6]delectare sine animo nequeat, ipse tamen animus carnis voluptatibus reluctans, in delectatione carnali aliquo modo ligatur invitus, ut ei ex ratione contradicat, [7]ne consentiat; et tamen delectatione ligatus sit, sed ligatum se [8]vehementer ingemiscat. Unde
D et ille cælestis exercitus præcipuus miles gemebat dicens: [a]'Video aliam legem in membris meis repugnantem legi mentis meæ, et captivum me ducentem in lege peccati, quæ est in membris meis.' Si autem captivus erat, minime pugnabat; sed et [9]pugnabat: [10a]quapropter et captivus erat, [11]et pugnabat' igitur legi mentis, cui lex quæ in membris est, repugnabat. Si autem pugnabat, captivus non erat. Ecce itaque homo est, ut ita dixerim, captivus et liber; liber ex justitia quam diligit, captivus ex delectatione quam portat [b]invitus.'

CAP. XXVIII. UT PAPA GREGORIUS EPISTOLAM ARELATENSI EPISCOPO, PRO ADJUVANDO IN OPERE DEI AUGUSTINO, MISERIT. A

Gregorii epistola ad Virgilium. A. 601.

Hucusque responsiones beati papæ Gregorii ad consulta reverentissimi antistitis Augustini. Epistolam vero quam se Arelatensi episcopo fecisse [a]commemorat, ad Virgilium [b]Etherii successorem dederat: cujus hæc forma est.

'Reverentissimo et sanctissimo fratri VIRGILIO coepiscopo, GREGORIUS servus servorum Dei. Quantus sit affectus venientibus sponte fratribus impendendus, ex eo quod plerumque solent caritatis causa invitari, cognoscitur. CAP. XXIX. UT IDEM AUGUSTINO PALLIUM, ET EPISTOLAM, ET PLURES VERBI MINISTROS MISERIT. C Gregorii epistola ad Augustinum cum pallio, &c. A. 601.

Præterea idem papa Gregorius Augustino episcopo, quia suggesserat ei multam quidem ibi esse messem, sed operarios paucos, misit cum præfatis legatariis suis plures cooperatores, ac verbi ministros: in quibus primi et præcipui erant Mellitus, Justus, Paulinus, Rufinianus; et per eos generaliter universa quæ [c]ad cultum erant ac ministerium ecclesiæ necessaria, vasa videlicet sacra, et vestimenta altarium, ornamenta quoque ecclesiarum, et sacerdotalia vel [3]clericalia indumenta, Sanctorum etiam apostolorum ac martyrum reliquias, nec non et codices plurimos. Misit etiam literas in quibus significat se ei pallium direxisse, simul et insinuat qualiter episcopos in Brittania constituere debuisset; quarum litterarum iste est textus.

'Reverentissimo et sanctissimo fratri AUGUSTINO coepiscopo GREGORIUS servus D servorum Dei. Cum certum sit pro omnipotente Deo laborantibus ineffabilia æterni regni præmia reservari; nobis tamen eis necesse est honorum beneficia tribuere, ut in spiritalis operis studio ex remuneratione valeant multiplicius insudare. Et quia nova Anglorum ecclesia ad omnipotentis Dei gratiam eodem Domino largiente, et te laborante perducta est, usum tibi pallii in ea ad sola missarum sollemnia agenda concedimus: ita ut per loca singula duodecim episcopos ordines, qui tuæ subjaceant ditioni, quatenus Lundoniensis civitatis episcopus semper in posterum a synodo propria debeat consecrari, atque honoris pallium ab hac sancta et apostolica, cui Deo auctore deservio, sede percipiat.

CAP. XXX. EXEMPLAR EPISTOLÆ QUAM MELLITO ABBATI BRITTANIAM PERGENTI MISIT.

C Abeuntibus autem præfatis legatariis, [4]misit post eos beatus pater Gregorius litteras memoratu dignas, in quibus aperte, quam studiose erga salvationem nostræ gentis invigilaverit, ostendit, ita scribens: Gregorii epistola ad Mellitum de fanis. A. 601.

'Dilectissimo filio MELLITO abbati GREGORIUS servus servorum Dei. Post dicessum congregationis nostræ quæ tecum est, valde sumus suspensi redditi, quia nihil de prosperitate vestri itineris audisse nos contigit. Cum ergo Deus omnipotens vos ad reverentissimum [5]virum fratrem nostrum Augustinum episcopum perduxerit, dicite ei, quid diu mecum de causa Anglorum [b]cogitans tractavi: videlicet quia fana idolorum destrui in eadem gente minime debeant; sed ipsa quæ in eis sunt idola destruantur; aqua benedicta fiat, in eisdem fanis aspergatur, altaria construantur, reliquiæ ponantur: quia si fana eadem bene conD structa sunt necesse est ut a cultu dæmonum in [6]obsequio veri Dei debeant commutari; ut dum gens ipsa eadem fana sua non videt destrui, de corde errorem deponat, et Deum verum cognoscens ac adorans, ad loca quæ consuevit, familiarius concurrat. Et quia boves solent in sacrificio dæmonum multos occidere, debet eis etiam hac de re aliqua sollemnitas immutari: ut die dedicationis, vel [7]natalitii sanctorum martyrum, quorum illic reliquiæ ponuntur, tabernacula sibi circa easdem ecclesias quæ ex fanis commutatæ sunt, de ramis arborum faciant, et religiosis conviviis sollemnitatem celebrent; nec diabolo jam animalia immolent, [8]et ad laudem Dei in esu suo animalia occidant, et donatori omnium de satietate sua gratias referant: ut dum eis aliqua exterius gaudia reservantur, ad interiora gaudia consentire facilius valeant. Nam duris mentibus simul E omnia [9]abscidere impossibile esse non dubium est, quia et is qui summum locum ascendere nititur, gradibus vel passibus non autem saltibus elevatur. Sic Israelitico populo in Ægypto Dominus se quidem innotuit; sed tamen eis

Quo in tempore misit etiam Augustino epistolam super miraculis quæ per eum facta esse cognoverat, in qua eum, ne per illorum copiam periculum elationis incurreret, his verbis hortatur:

[a]' Scio, frater carissime, quia omnipotens Deus per dilectionem tuam in [1]gentem quam eligi voluit, magna miracula ostendit: unde necesse est ut de eodem dono cælesti et timendo gaudeas, et gaudendo pertimescas. Gaudeas videlicet, quia Anglorum animæ per exteriora miracula ad interiorem gratiam pertrahuntur: pertimescas vero, ne inter signa quæ fiunt, infirmus animus in sui præsumptione se elevet, et unde [2]foras in honorem tollitur, inde per inanem gloriam intus cadat. Meminisse etenim debemus quia discipuli cum gaudio a C prædicatione redeuntes, dum cælesti Magistro dicerent: [y]' Domine, in nomine tuo etiam dæmonia nobis subjecta sunt;' protinus audierunt: [x]' Nolite gaudere super hoc, sed potius gaudete quia nomina vestra scripta sunt in cælo.' In privata enim et temporali lætitia mentem posuerant qui de miraculis gaudebant; sed de privato ad communem, de temporali ad æternam lætitiam revocantur quibus dicitur: ' In hoc gaudete quia nomina vestra scripta sunt in cælo.' Non enim omnes electi miracula faciunt; sed tamen eorum nomina omnium in cælo tenentur adscripta. Veritatis etenim discipulis esse gaudium non debet, nisi de eo bono quod commune cum omnibus habent, et in quo fidem lætitiæ non habent. Restat itaque, frater carissime, ut inter ea quæ operante Domino exterius facis, semper te interius subtiliter judices, ac subtiliter intelligas, et D temetipsum quis sis, et quanta sit in eadem gente gratia, pro cujus conversione etiam faciendorum signorum dona percepisti. Et siquando te Creatori nostro seu per linguam, sive per opera reminisceris deliquisse, semper hæc ad memoriam revoces, ut surgentem cordis gloriam memoria reatus premat. Et quidquid de faciendis signis acceperis vel accepisti, hæc non tibi sed [3]illis deputes donata, pro quorum tibi salute [4]collata sunt.'

Quod in Anglorum gente factum cognovimus: cui vestra gloria idcirco est præposita, ut per bona quæ vobis concessa sunt, etiam subjectæ vobis genti superna beneficia præstarentur. Et ideo, gloriose fili, eam quam accepisti divinitus gratiam, solicita mente custodi, Christianam fidem in populis tibi subditis extendere [a]festina, zelum rectitudinis tuæ in eorum conversione multiplica, idolorum cultus insequere, fanorum ædificia everte, subditorum mores [1]et magna vitæ munditia, exhortando, terrendo, blandiendo, corrigendo, et boni operis exempla monstrando ædifica: ut Illum retributorem invenias in cælo, cujus nomen atque cognitionem dilataveris in terra. Ipse enim vestræ quoque gloriæ nomen etiam posteris gloriosius reddet, cujus vos honorem quæritis et servatis in

Exemplum Constantini.

'Sic etenim Constantinus quondam piissimus imperator, Romanam rempublicam a perversis idolorum cultibus revocans, omnipotenti Deo Domino nostro Jesu Christo secum subdidit, seque cum subjectis populis tota ad [2]eum mente convertit. Unde factum est ut antiquorum principum nomen suis vir ille laudibus vinceret, et tanto in opinione præcessores suos, quanto et in bono opere superaret. Et nunc itaque vestra gloria cognitionem unius Dei, Patris, et Filii, et Spiritus Sancti, regibus ac populis sibimet subjectis festinet infundere, et antiquos gentis suæ reges laudibus ac meritis transeat, et quanto in subjectis suis etiam aliena peccata deterserit, tanto etiam de peccatis propriis ante omnipotentis Dei terribile examen securior fiat.

C 'Reverentissimus frater noster Augustinus episcopus, in monasterii regula [3]edoctus, sacræ scripturæ scientia repletus, bonis auctore Deo operibus præditus, quæque vos ammonet, audite, devote peragite, studiose in memoria reservate: quia si vos eum in eo quod pro omnipotente Domino loquitur, auditis, isdem omnipotens Deus hunc pro vobis exorantem celerius [4]exaudit. Si enim, quod absit, verba ejus postponitis, [5]quando eum omnipotens Deus poterit audire pro vobis, quem vos negligitis audire pro Deo? Tota igitur mente cum eo vos in fervore fidei stringite, atque [6]adnisum illius virtute quam vobis Divinitas tribuit, [7]adjuvate, ut regni sui vos Ipse faciat esse participes, cujus vos fidem in regno vestro recipi [8]faciatis et custodiri.

'Præterea scire vestram gloriam volumus, quia sicut in scriptura sacra ex
D verbis Domini omnipotentis agnoscimus, præsentis mundi jam [b]terminus juxta est, et Sanctorum regnum venturum est, quod nullo unquam poterit fine terminari. Adpropinquante autem eodem mundi termino, multa imminent quæ antea non fuerunt: videlicet immutationes aeris, terroresque de cælo, et contra [9]ordinationem temporum tempestates, bella, fames, pestilentiæ, terræ motus per loca; quæ tamen non omnia nostris diebus ventura sunt, sed post nostros dies omnia subsequentur. Vos itaque, si qua ex his evenire in terra vestra cognoscitis, nullo modo vestrum animum perturbetis; quia idcirco hæc signa de fine sæculi præmittuntur, ut de animabus nostris debeamus esse soliciti, de mortis hora suspecti, et venturo Judici in bonis actibus inveniamur esse præparati. Hæc nunc, gloriose fili, paucis locutus sum, ut cum Christiana fides in regno
E vestro excreverit, nostra quoque apud vos locutio latior excrescat, et tanto plus loqui libeat, quanto se in mente nostra gaudia de gentis vestræ perfecta conversione multiplicant.

Cap. XXXIII. Ut Augustinus ecclesiam Salvatoris instauraverit, et monasterium B. Petri Apostoli fecerit; et de primo ejus abbate Petro.

Ecclesia S. Salvatoris. A. 598.

At Augustinus, ubi in regia civitate sedem episcopalem, ut prædiximus, accepit, recuperavit in ea, regio fultus adminiculo, ecclesiam quam inibi [1]antiquo Romanorum fidelium opere factam fuisse didicerat, et eam in [a]nomine S. Salvatoris Dei et Domini nostri Jesu Christi sacravit, atque ibidem sibi habitationem statuit, et cunctis successoribus suis. B

Monasterium Petri et Pauli.

Fecit autem et [b]monasterium non longe ab ipsa civitate ad Orientem, in quo, ejus hortatu, Ædilberct ecclesiam beatorum apostolorum [c]Petri et Pauli a fundamentis construxit, ac diversis donis [2]ditavit[d], in qua et ipsius Augustini, et omnium episcoporum Doruvernensium, simul et regum Cantiæ [e]poni corpora possent. Quam tamen ecclesiam non ipse Augustinus, sed [f]successor ejus Laurentius consecravit.

Petrus Abbas. Ambleteuse.

Primus autem ejusdem monasterii [g]abbas Petrus presbyter fuit, qui legatus Galliam missus, [h]demersus est in sinu maris qui vocatur Amfleat, et ab incolis loci ignobili traditus sepulturæ: sed omnipotens Deus ut qualis meriti vir fuerit demonstraret, omni nocte supra sepulchrum ejus lux cælestis apparuit, donec animadvertentes [i]vicini, qui videbant sanctum fuisse virum qui ibi esset sepultus, et investigantes unde vel quis esset, abstulerunt corpus, et in Bononia civitate juxta honorem tanto viro congruum in ecclesia posuerunt. Cap. XXXIV. Ut Ædilfrid rex Nordanhymbrorum, Scottorum gentes prælio conterens, ab Anglorum finibus expulerit.

Pugna de Degsastan.

His temporibus regno Nordanhymbrorum præfuit rex fortissimus et gloriæ cupidissimus Ædilfrid, qui plus omnibus Anglorum primatibus gentem vastavit Brittonum; ita ut Sauli quondam regi Israeliticæ gentis comparandus videretur, excepto dumtaxat hoc, quod divinæ erat religionis ignarus. Nemo enim in tribunis, nemo in regibus plures eorum terras, exterminatis vel subjugatis indigenis, aut tributarias genti Anglorum, aut habitabiles fecit. D

Cui merito poterat illud quod benedicens filium patriarcha in [3]personam Saulis dicebat aptari: × 'Benjamin lupus rapax, mane comedet prædam, et vespere dividet spolia.'

LIBER SECUNDUS.

Cap. I. De Obitu beati Papæ Gregorii.

HIS temporibus, id est, anno Dominicæ Incarnationis sexcentesimo [b] quinto, beatus papa Gregorius, postquam sedem Romanæ et apostolicæ ecclesiæ C tredecim annos, menses sex, et dies [c] decem gloriosissime rexit, defunctus est, atque ad æternam regni cælestis sedem translatus. De quo nos convenit, quia nostram, id est, Anglorum gentem de potestate Satanæ ad fidem Christi sua industria convertit, latiorem in nostra Historia Ecclesiastica facere sermonem, quem recte nostrum appellare possumus et debemus apostolum. Quia cum primum in toto orbe pontificatum gereret, et conversis jamdudum ad fidem veritatis esset prælatus ecclesiis, nostram gentem eatenus idolis mancipatam, Christi fecit ecclesiam, ita ut apostolicum illum de eo liceat nobis proferre sermonem: quia etsi aliis non est apostolus, sed tamen nobis est; nam signaculum apostolatus ejus nos sumus in Domino. Erat autem natione Romanus, a patre Gordiano, genus a proavis non solum nobile, sed et religiosum ducens. [3] Deni- D que Felix [d] ejusdem apostolicæ sedis quondam episcopus, vir magnæ gloriæ in Christo et ecclesia, ejus fuit [e] atavus. S. Gregorii episcopatus. A. 605.

Sed et ipse [f] nobilitatem religionis non minore quam parentes et cognati virtute devotionis exercuit. Nobilitatem vero illam quam ad sæculum videbatur habere, totam ad nanciscendam supernæ gloriam dignitatis divina gratia largiente convertit. Nam mutato repente habitu sæculari, monasterium petiit, in quo tanta perfectionis gratia cœpit conversari, ut, sicut [g] ipse postea flendo solebat adtestari, animo illius labentia cuncta subteressent, ut rebus omnibus quæ volvuntur, emineret, ut nulla nisi cælestia cogitare soleret, ut etiam reten- Monasterium.

quæ pene cunctis pœna est, videlicet ut ingressum vitæ et laboris sui præmium, amaret. [1]Hoc autem ipse de se, non profectum jactando virtutum, sed deflendo potius defectum quem sibi per curam pastoralem incurrisse videbatur, referre consueverat. Denique tempore quodam secreto, cum diacono suo Petro conloquens, enumeratis animi sui virtutibus priscis, mox dolendo subjunxit:
'At nunc [2]ex occasione curæ pastoralis sæcularium hominum negotia patitur, et post tam pulcram quietis suæ speciem, terreni actus pulvere fœdatur. Cumque se pro [3]descensione multorum ad exteriora sparserit, etiam cum interiora appetit, ad hæc procul dubio minor redit. Perpendo itaque quid tolero, perpendo quid amisi: dumque intueor illud quod perdidi, fit hoc gravius quod porto.' Hæc quidem sanctus vir ex [4]magnæ humilitatis intentione dicebat: B sed nos credere decet, nihil eum monachicæ perfectionis perdidisse occasione curæ pastoralis, immo potiorem tunc sumpsisse profectum de labore conversionis multorum, quam de [5]propriæ quondam quiete conversationis habuerat:
maxime quia et pontificali functus officio [a]domum suam monasterium facere non tamen in terreno conversatus palatio propositum vitæ cælestis intermisit.

Nam quosdam fratrum ex monasterio suo, qui eum gratia germanæ caritatis ad regiam urbem secuti sunt, in tutamentum cœpit observantiæ regularis habere; videlicet ut eorum semper exemplo, sicut ipse scribit, ad orationis placidum litus, quasi anchoræ fune restringeretur, cum incessabili causarum sæcularium C impulsu fluctuaret, concussamque sæculi actibus mentem inter eos quotidie per studiosæ lectionis roboraret alloquium. Horum ergo consortio non solum a terrenis est munitus incursibus, verum etiam ad cælestis vitæ exercitia magis magisque succensus.

A luce patefecit, quales ad ecclesiæ regimen adsumi, qualiter ipsi rectores vivere, qua discretione singulas quasque audientium instruere personas, et quanta consideratione propriam quotidie debeant fragilitatem pensare. Sed et [1]Omelias Evangelii numero quadraginta composuit, quas in duobus codicibus æqua sorte distinxit. Libros etiam Dialogorum quatuor fecit, in quibus rogatu Petri diaconi sui, virtutes sanctorum quos in Italia clariores nosse vel audire poterat, ad exemplum vivendi posteris collegit: ut sicut in libris Expositionum suarum quibus sit virtutibus insudandum, edocuit, ita etiam descriptis Sanctorum miraculis, quæ virtutum earumdem sit claritas ostenderet. Primam quoque et ultimam Ezechielis Prophetæ partem, quæ videbantur obscuriores, per homilias viginti et duas, quantum lucis intus habeant demonstravit. Excepto libello

Augustini primi Anglorum gentis episcopi scripsit, ut et supra docuimus, totum ipsum libellum his inserentes historiis; [a]libello quoque Synodico, quem [2]cum episcopis Italiæ de necessariis ecclesiæ causis utillimum composuit, et familiaribus ad quosdam literis. Quod eo magis mirum est, tot eum ac tanta condere volumina potuisse, quod omni pene juventutis suæ tempore, ut verbis ipsius loquar, crebris viscerum doloribus cruciabatur, horis momentisque omnibus fracta stomachi virtute lassescebat, lentis [3]quidem, sed tamen continuis febribus anhelabat. Verum inter hæc, dum sollicitus pensaret quia Scriptura teste: [א]'Omnis filius qui recipitur, flagellatur;' quo malis præsentibus durius deprimebatur, eo de æterna certius præsumptione respirabat.

C Hæc quidem de immortali ejus sint dicta ingenio, quod nec tanto corporis potuit dolore [4]restingui. Nam alii quidem pontifices construendis ornandisque auro vel argento ecclesiis operam dabant: hic autem totus erga animarum lucra vacabat.

Et paulo post: [ח]'Si negavi,' inquit, 'quod volebant pauperibus, et oculos viduæ exspectare feci. Si comedi buccellam meam solus, et non comedit pupillus ex ea. Quia ab infantia mea crevit mecum miseratio, et de utero matris meæ egressa est mecum.'

Ad cujus pietatis et justitiæ opus pertinet etiam hoc, quod nostram gentem per prædicatores quos huc direxit, de dentibus antiqui hostis eripiens, æternæ libertatis fecit esse participem: cujus fidei et saluti congaudens, quamque digna laude commendans, ipse dixit in expositione beati Job: [ט]'Ecce lingua Brittaniæ, quæ nil aliud noverat quam barbarum frendere, jamdudum in divinis

Accedensque ad [b]pontificem Romanæ et apostolicæ sedis, nondum enim erat ipse pontifex factus, rogavit ut genti Anglorum in Brittaniam aliquos verbi ministros, per quos ad Christum converteretur, mitteret; seipsum paratum esse in hoc opus Domino cooperante perficiendum, si tamen apostolico papæ hoc ut fieret, placeret. Quod dum perficere non posset, B quia etsi pontifex concedere illi quod petierat voluit, non tamen cives Romani, ut tam longe ab urbe [4]recederet potuere permittere; mox ut ipse pontificatus officio functus est, perfecit opus diu desideratum: alios quidem prædicatores mittens, sed ipse prædicationem ut fructificaret, suis exhortationibus ac [c]precibus adjuvans. Rogatio Gregorii ad pontificem.

Cap. II. Ut Augustinus Brittonum episcopos pro pace catholica, etiam miraculo cælesti coram eis facto, monuerit; quæve illos spernentes ultio secuta sit.

Interea [d]Augustinus adjutorio usus Ædilbercti regis, convocavit ad suum colloquium [1]episcopos sive doctores proximæ Brittonum provinciæ, in loco qui C usque hodie lingua Anglorum [e]'Augustinaes âc,' id est, robur Augustini, in confinio [6]Huicciorum et Occidentalium Saxonum, appellatur: cœpitque eis fraterna admonitione suadere, ut pace catholica secum habita, communem evangelizandi gentibus pro Domino laborem susciperent. Non enim Paschæ Dominicum diem suo tempore, sed [7]a quarta decima usque ad vicesimam Lunam observabant: quæ computatio octoginta quatuor annorum circulo continetur. Sed et alia plurima unitati [8]ecclesiasticæ contraria faciebant. Qui cum, longa disputatione habita, neque precibus, neque hortamentis, neque increpationibus Augustini ac sociorum ejus assensum præbere voluissent, sed suas potius traditiones universis, quæ per orbem sibi in Christo concordant, ecclesiis præferrent, sanctus pater Augustinus hunc laboriosi atque longi certaminis finem fecit, ut D diceret: 'Obsecremus Deum, qui habitare [9]facit unanimes in domo Patris sui, ut Ipse nobis insinuare cælestibus signis dignetur, quæ sequenda traditio, quibus sit viis ad ingressum regni illius properandum. Adducatur aliquis æger, et per cujus preces fuerit curatus, hujus fides et operatio Deo devota atque omnibus sequenda credatur.' Quod cum adversarii inviti licet concederent, allatus est quidam de genere Anglorum, oculorum luce privatus: qui cum oblatus Brittonum sacerdotibus, nil curationis vel sanationis horum ministerio perciperet; tandem Augustinus justa necessitate compulsus, flectit genua sua ad Patrem Domini nostri Jesu Christi, deprecans ut visum cæco, quem amiserat, restitueret, et per illuminationem unius hominis corporalem, in plurimorum

Hujus sedis episcopus non adfuisse dicitur synodo Augustinianæ, cavens scilicet juri suo metropolitico, et justa quidem ratio illa absentiæ esset, sed justa etiam præsentiæ. Cumque bellum acturus videret sacerdotes eorum, qui ad exorandum Deum pro milite bellum agente convenerant, seorsum in tutiore loco consistere, sciscitabatur qui essent hi, quidve acturi illo convenissent. Erant autem plurimi eorum de monasterio Bancor, in quo tantus fertur fuisse [b]numerus monachorum, ut cum in septem portiones esset cum præpositis sibi rectoribus monasterium divisum, nulla harum portio minus quam trecentos homines haberet, qui omnes de labore manuum suarum vivere solebant. Horum ergo plurimi ad memoratam aciem, peracto jejunio triduano, cum aliis orandi causa convenerant, habentes defensorem nomine Brocmailum, qui eos intentos precibus a barbarorum gladiis protegeret. Quorum causam adventus cum intel-
B lexisset rex Aedilfrid, ait: 'Ergo si adversum nos ad Deum suum clamant, profecto et ipsi quamvis arma non ferant, contra nos pugnant qui adversis nos inprecationibus persequuntur. Itaque in hos primum arma verti jubet, et sic ceteras nefandæ militiæ copias non sine magno exercitus sui damno delevit. Exstinctos in ea pugna ferunt, de his qui ad orandum venerant, viros circiter mille ducentos, et solum quinquaginta fuga esse lapsos. Brocmail ad primum hostium adventum cum suis terga vertens, eos quos defendere debuerat, inermes ac nudos ferientibus gladiis reliquit. Sicque completum est præsagium sancti pontificis Augustini, [c]quamvis ipso jam multo ante tempore ad cælestia regna sublato, ut etiam temporalis interitus [1]ultione sentirent perfidi, quod oblata sibi perpetuæ salutis consilia spreverant.

Cap. III. Ut idem Mellitum ac Justum episcopos fecerit; et de obitu ejus.

Anno Dominicæ Incarnationis sexcentesimo quarto Augustinus Brittaniarum archiepiscopus, ordinavit duos episcopos, Mellitum videlicet et Justum: Mellitum quidem ad prædicandum provinciæ Orientalium Saxonum, qui Tamense fluvio dirimuntur a [2]Cantia, et ipsi Orientali mari contigui, quorum metropolis Lundonia civitas est, super ripam præfati fluminis posita, et ipsa multorum [3]emporium populorum terra marique venientium: in qua videlicet gente tunc temporis Saberct nepos Aedilbercti ex sorore Ricula regnabat, quamvis sub potestate positus ejusdem Aedilbercti, qui omnibus, ut supra dictum est, usque ad terminum [4]Humbræ fluminis, Anglorum gentibus imperabat. Ubi vero et
D hæc provincia verbum veritatis prædicante Mellito accepit, fecit rex Aedilberct in civitate Lundonia ecclesiam S. Pauli apostoli, in qua locum sedis episcopalis et ipse et successores ejus haberent. Justum vero in ipsa Cantia Augustinus episcopum ordinavit in civitate [5]Dorubrevi, quam gens Anglorum a primario quondam illius qui dicebatur [d]Hrof, Hrofaescaestrae cognominat. Distat autem

[b] Annum Augustini emortualem Beda non notat. Inde orta est varietas opinionum, quas omnes recensere non opus est, cum Beda eas in angustum reduxerit. Nam A. 604 Augustinus ordinavit Mellitum et Justum episcopos, II. 3. An. octavo Phocatis Indictione 13, qui est A. 610, Mellitus detulit literas Roma a papa Bonifacio ad archiepiscopum Laurentium. Intra hunc igitur terminum necesse est fuisse annum quo Augustinus vivus et mortuus est. Mabillonius, e Tabella Cantuar. Mon. Ang. I. p. 24. calculat ad A. 607. Addens Legendam Eliensem, qua illa ecclesia ab Augustino fundata traditur A. 607. Sed hoc adeo fabulosum apparet, ut etiam Cantuarensi traditioni injuriam faciat. Chronologia vero cœnobii S. Augustini, quæ apud X. Scriptores subjicitur Chronico W. Thorn sine nomine auctoris, sed quæ ex collatione apparet habuisse auctorem T. Helmham, si modo ejus fuerit MS. A.T.C.: illa inquam chronologia exhibet obitum Gregorii et Augustini eodem anno, illius quidem 4 Idus Martii feria sexta, hujus vero 7 Kal. Junii feria quarta, annus autem est 605. Whartonus duos characteres profert pro A. 604., sed unus, nempe ille de Gregorio, quem Whartonus certissimum vult, est directe contra Bedam qui Gregorii mortem ponit A. 605; alter est ex errore calculi in Chronico W. Thorni, X. Script. col. 1765, ubi Augustini obitum ponit feria tertia, licet Chronologia supradicta e qua Thorn compotum suum habuit, clare exhibet feriam quartam, tam in editione X. Scriptorum col. 2229, quam in MS. Aulæ Trinit. Cantab. Concludo igitur Augustinum obiisse A. 605, 7 Kal. Junii feria quarta. S.

CAP. V. UT DEFUNCTIS AEDILBERCTO ET SABERCTO REGIBUS, SUCCESSORES EORUM IDOLATRIAM RESUSCITARINT, OB QUOD ET MELLITUS AC JUSTUS A BRITTANIA DISCESSERINT. A

Aedilbercti obitus. A. 616.

Anno ab Incarnatione Dominica sexcentesimo decimo [1]sexto, qui est annus [a]vicesimus primus, ex quo Augustinus [2]cum sociis ad prædicandum genti Anglorum missus est, Aedilberct rex Cantuariorum, post regnum temporale, quod quinquaginta et [3]sex annis gloriosissime tenuerat, æterna cælestis regni gaudia subiit: qui tertius quidem in regibus gentis Anglorum, cunctis Australibus eorum provinciis quæ Humbræ fluvio et contiguis ei terminis sequestrantur a Borealibus, imperavit; sed primus omnium cæli regna conscendit.

Nam primus imperium hujusmodi [b]Aelli rex Australium Saxonum; secundus Caelin rex Occidentalium Saxonum, qui lingua eorum Ceaulin vocabatur; tertius, ut dixi, Aedilberct rex Cantuariorum; quartus Reduald rex Orientalium Anglorum, qui etiam vivente Aedilbercto eidem suæ genti ducatum præbebat, obtinuit; quintus Aeduin rex Nordanhymbrorum gentis, id est, ejus quæ ad Borealem Humbræ fluminis plagam inhabitat, majore potentia cunctis qui Brittaniam incolunt, Anglorum pariter et Brittonum populis præfuit, præter [4]Cantuariis tantum; necnon et Mevanias Brittonum insulas, quæ inter Hiberniam et Brittaniam sitæ sunt, Anglorum subjecit imperio; sextus Osuald et ipse Nordanhymbrorum rex Christianissimus, hisdem finibus regnum tenuit; septimus [5]Osuiu frater ejus, æqualibus pene terminis regnum nonnullo tempore coercens, Pictorum quoque atque Scottorum gentes, quæ Septemtrionales Brittaniæ fines tenent, maxima ex parte perdomuit, ac tributarias B

An. 21. ex quo Augustinus missus est;' et postea obiisse dicitur 'post viginti et unum annos acceptæ fidei.' Annum autem inter missionem Augustini et baptismum Aedelbercti fere effluxisse, necesse est; ita quod si hoc etiam ineunte An. 597 evenerit, computus ad novem decem annos ægre proveheretur.

A castigando [1]et corrigendo defuere: nam crebra mentis vesania, et spiritus immundi invasione premebatur.

Auxit autem procellam [2]hujusce perturbationis, etiam mors [a]Sabercti regis Orientalium Saxonum, qui ubi regna perennia petens, tres suos filios, qui pagani perduraverant, regni temporalis heredes reliquit; cœperunt illi mox idolatriæ, quam vivente eo aliquantulum intermisisse videbantur, palam servire, subjectisque populis idola colendi liberam dare licentiam. Cumque viderent pontificem celebratis in ecclesia missarum sollemniis, eucharistiam populo dare, dicebant, ut vulgo fertur, ad eum barbara inflati stultitia: 'Quare non et nobis porrigis panem nitidum, quem et patri nostro [3]Saba,' sic namque eum appellare consuerant, 'dabas, et populo adhuc dare in ecclesia non desistis?' Filii Sabercti.

B Quibus ille respondebat: 'Si vultis ablui fonte illo salutari quo pater vester ablutus est, potestis etiam panis sancti, cui ille participabat, esse participes: sin autem lavacrum vitæ contemnitis, nullatenus valetis panem vitæ percipere.' At illi, 'Nolumus,' inquiunt, 'fontem illum intrare, quia nec opus illo nos habere novimus, sed tamen pane illo refici volumus.' Cumque diligenter ac sæpe ab illo essent admoniti, nequaquam ita fieri posse ut absque purgatione sacrosancta quis oblationi sacrosanctæ [4]communicaret, ad ultimum furore commoti, aiebant: 'Si non vis [5]adsentire nobis in tam facili causa quam petimus, non poteris jam in nostra provincia demorari.' Et expulerunt eum, ac de suo regno cum suis abire jusserunt.

A CAP. VIII. UT BONIFACIUS PAPA JUSTO SUCCESSORI EJUS PALLIUM ET EPISTOLAM MISERIT.

Cui statim successit in pontificatum Justus, qui erat Hrofensis ecclesiæ episcopus. Illi autem ecclesiæ Romanum pro se consecravit episcopum, data sibi ordinandi episcopos auctoritate a pontifice Bonifacio, quem successorem fuisse Deusdedit supra meminimus; cujus auctoritatis ista est forma: Justus Cantuar. IV. A. 624.

'Dilectissimo fratri JUSTO, BONIFACIUS. Quam devote, quamque etiam vigilanter pro Christi evangelio elaboraverit vestra fraternitas, non solum epistolæ a vobis directæ tenor, immo indulta desuper operi vestro perfectio indicavit. Nec enim omnipotens Deus, aut sui nominis sacramentum, aut vestri fructum laboris deseruit, dum ipse prædicatoribus evangelii fideliter repromisit: [y]' Ecce B ego vobiscum sum omnibus diebus usque ad consummationem [1]sæculi.' Quod specialiter injuncto vobis ministerio ejus clementia demonstravit, aperiens corda [2]gentium ad suscipiendum prædicationis vestræ singulare mysterium. Magno enim præmio [3]fatigiorum vestrorum delectabilem cursum, bonitatis suæ suffragiis illustravit, dum creditorum vobis talentorum fidelissimæ negotiationis officiis uberem fructum impendens, ei, quod signare possetis multiplicatis generationibus præparavit. Hocque etiam illa vobis repensatione collatum est, [4]qua injuncto ministerio jugiter persistentes, laudabili patientia redemptionem gentis illius [5]exspectastis, et vestris ut proficerent meritis, eorum est salvatio propinata; dicente Domino: [x]' Qui perseveraverit usque in finem, hic salvus erit.' Salvati ergo estis spe patientiæ, et tolerantiæ virtute, ut infidelium corda C naturali ac superstitioso morbo purgata, sui consequerentur misericordiam Salvatoris. Susceptis namque apicibus filii nostri [6a]Adulvaldi regis, reperimus quanta sacri eloquii eruditione, ejus animum ad veræ conversionis et indubitatæ fidei credulitatem fraternitas vestra perduxerit. Qua ex re de longanimitate clementiæ cælestis certam adsumentes fiduciam, non solum suppositarum ei gentium plenissimam salutem, immo quoque vicinarum, vestræ prædicationis ministerio credimus subsequendam: quatenus, sicut scriptum est, consummati operis vobis merces a retributore omnium bonorum Domino tribuatur. Et vere per omnem terram exisse sonum eorum, et in fines orbis terræ verba ipsorum, universalis gentium confessio suscepto Christianæ sacramento fidei [7]protestetur.

D 'Pallium præterea per latorem præsentium fraternitati tuæ, benignitatis studiis invitati direximus, quod videlicet tantum in sacrosanctis celebrandis mysteriis utendi licentiam imperavimus: concedentes etiam tibi ordinationes episcoporum, exigente opportunitate, Domini præveniente misericordia celebrare: ita ut Christi evangelium plurimorum adnunciatione, in omnibus gentibus quæ necdum conversæ sunt, dilatetur. Studeat ergo tua fraternitas, hoc quod sedis apostolicæ humanitate percepit, intemerata mentis sinceritate servare. Intendens cujus rei similitudine tam præcipuum indumentum humeris tuis bajulandum susceperis. Talemque te Domini implorata clementia exhibendum stude, ut indulti muneris præmia non cum reatitudine, sed cum commodis animarum, ante tribunal summi et venturi Judicis repræsentes. Deus te E incolumem custodiat, dilectissime frater.' Pallium.

A. 625. verbum fidei prædicante Paulino, cujus supra meminimus, suscepit. Cui videlicet regi in auspicium suscipiendæ fidei et regni cælestis, potestas etiam terreni creverat imperii: ita ut, quod nemo Anglorum ante eum[1], omnes Brittaniæ fines, qua vel ipsorum vel Brittonum provinciæ [2]habitant, sub ditione acceperit. Quin et [a]Mevanias insulas, sicut et supra docuimus, imperio subjugavit Anglorum: quarum prior quæ ad Austrum est et situ amplior, et frugum proventu atque ubertate felicior, nongentarum sexaginta familiarum mensuram, juxta æstimationem Anglorum; secunda trecentarum et ultra spatium tenet. Aedilbergæ conjugium. Huic autem genti occasio fuit percipiendæ fidei, quod præfatus rex ejus, cognatione junctus est regibus Cantuariorum, accepta in conjugem Aedilbergae filia Aedilbercti regis, quæ alio nomine [3]Tatae vocabatur. Hujus consortium cum primo ipse missis procis a fratre ejus Aeodbaldo, qui tunc regno Cantuariorum præerat, [4]peteret: responsum est, non esse licitum Christianam virginem pagano in conjugem dari, ne fides et sacramenta cælestis regis, consortio profanarentur regis qui veri Dei cultus esset prorsus ignarus. Quæ cum Aeduino verba nuncii referrent, promisit se nil omnimodis contrarium Christianæ fidei quam virgo colebat, esse facturum: quin potius permissurum ut fidem cultumque suæ religionis cum omnibus qui secum venissent, viris sive feminis, sacerdotibus seu ministris more Christiano servaret. Neque abnegavit se etiam eandem subiturum esse religionem; si tamen examinata a prudentibus sanctior ac Deo dignior posset inveniri. B

Paulini missio. Itaque promittitur virgo, atque Aeduino mittitur, et juxta quod dispositum fuerat, ordinatur episcopus vir Deo dilectus Paulinus qui cum illa veniret, eamque et comites ejus, ne paganorum possent societate pollui, quotidiana exhortatione et sacramentorum cælestium celebratione confirmaret. C

Paulini ordinatio. A. 625. Jul. 21. Ordinatus est autem Paulinus episcopus a Justo archiepiscopo, sub die duodecima Kalendarum Augustarum, anno ab Incarnatione Domini sexcentesimo vicesimo quinto: et sic cum præfata virgine ad regem Aeduinum quasi comes copulæ carnalis advenit. Sed ipse potius toto animo intendens, ut gentem quam adibat, ad agnitionem veritatis advocans, juxta vocem apostoli, uni viro [5]sponso virginem castam exhiberet Christo. Cumque in provinciam venisset, laboravit multum, ut et eos qui secum venerant, ne a fide [6]deficerent, Domino adjuvante contineret, et aliquos, si forte posset, de paganis ad fidei gratiam prædicando converteret. Sed sicut apostolus ait, quamvis multo tempore illo laborante in verbo: ‘ℵ Deus sæculi hujus excæcavit mentes infidelium,’ ne eis fulgeret illuminatio Evangelii gloriæ Christi. D

Eumer sicarius. A. 626. Anno autem sequente venit in provinciam quidam sicarius, vocabulo [7]Eumer, missus a rege Occidentalium Saxonum, nomine Cuichelmo, sperans se regem Aeduinum regno simul et vita privaturum: qui habebat sicam bicipitem toxicatam; ut si ferri vulnus minus ad mortem regis sufficeret, peste juvaretur veneni. Pervenit autem ad regem primo die Paschæ, juxta amnem [8]Deruventionem[×], ubi tunc erat [ϒ]villa regalis, intravitque quasi nuncium domini sui referens: et cum simulatam legationem ore astuto volveret, exsurrexit repente, et evaginata sub veste sica, impetum fecit in regem. Quod cum videret Lilla minister [9]regi amicissimus, non habens scutum ad manum quo regem a nece defenderet, mox interposuit corpus suum ante ictum pungentis: sed tanta vi hostis ferrum infixit, ut per corpus militis occisi etiam regem vulneraret. Qui cum mox undique gladiis impeteretur, in ipso tumultu etiam alium de militibus, cui nomen erat [10]Frodheri, sica nefanda peremit. E

A Eadem autem nocte sacrosancta Dominici ^Paschæ pepererat regina filiam regi, cui nomen Eanfled. Cumque idem rex præsente Paulino episcopo, gratias ageret diis suis pro nata sibi filia, e contra episcopus gratias cœpit agere Domino Christo, regique adstruere, quod ipse precibus suis apud illum obtinuerit, ut regina sospes et absque dolore gravi sobolem procrearet. Cujus verbis delectatus rex, promisit se abrenunciatis idolis Christo serviturum, si vitam sibi et victoriam donaret pugnanti adversus regem, a quo homicida ille, qui eum vulneraverat, missus est: et in pignus promissionis implendæ, eandem filiam [1]suam Christo consecrandam Paulino episcopo adsignavit; quæ baptizata est die sancto ×Pentecostes, prima de gente Nordanhymbrorum, cum [2a]undecim aliis de familia ejus.

B Quo tempore curatus a vulnere sibi pridem inflicto, rex collecto exercitu venit adversus [3]gentem Occidentalium Saxonum, ac bello inito, universos quos in necem suam conspirasse didicerat, aut occidit, aut in deditionem recepit. Sicque victor in patriam reversus, non statim et inconsulte sacramenta fidei Christianæ percipere voluit; quamvis nec idolis ultra servivit, ex quo se Christo serviturum esse promiserat. Verum primo diligentius ex [4]tempore, et ab ipso venerabili viro Paulino rationem fidei ediscere, et cum suis primatibus quos sapientiores noverat, curavit conferre, quid de his agendum arbitrarentur. Sed et ipse cum esset vir natura sagacissimus, sæpe diu solus residens, ore quidem tacito, sed in intimis cordis multa secum conloquens, quid sibi esset faciendum, quæ religio servanda tractabat.

'Dominæ gloriosæ filiæ AEDILBERGÆ reginæ, BONIFACIUS episcopus servus servorum Dei. Redemptoris nostri benignitas humano generi, quod pretiosi sanguinis sui effusione a vinculis diabolicæ captivitatis eripuit, [5]multæ providentiæ' quibus salvaretur propinavit remedia; quatenus sui nominis agnitionem diverso modo gentibus innotescens, Creatorem suum suscepto Christianæ fidei agnoscerent sacramento. 'Didicimus namque referentibus his, qui ad nos gloriosi filii nostri Audubaldi regis laudabilem conversionem nunciantes pervenerunt, quod etiam vestra gloria Christianæ fidei suscepto mirabili sacramento piis et Deo [8]placitis jugiter operibus enitescat, ab idolorum etiam cultu, seu fanorum, auguriorumque inlecebris se diligenter abstineat, et ita in amore Redemptoris sui [9]immutilata devotione persistens invigilet, ut ad dilatandam Christianam fidem incessabiliter non desistat operam commodare: cumque de glorioso conjuge vestro paterna caritas

Qua ex re non modica nobis amaritudo congesta est, ab eo quod pars corporis vestri ab agnitione summæ et individuæ Trinitatis remansit extranea. Unde paternis officiis vestræ gloriosæ Christianitati nostram commonitionem [11]nec distulimus [12]conferendam; adhortantes, quatenus divinæ inspirationis imbuta subsidiis, importune et opportune agendum non differas: ut et ipse Salvatoris nostri Domini Jesu Christi cooperante potentia Christianorum numero copuletur; ut perinde intemerato societatis fœdere jura teneas maritalis consortii. Cap. XII. Ut Aeduini per visionem quondam sibi exuli ostensam, sit ad credendum provocatus.

Paulini argumentum a visione. A. 626. Hæc quidem memoratus papa Bonifacius de salute regis Aeduini ac gentis ipsius, literis agebat. Sed et oraculum cæleste, quod illi quondam exulanti apud [a]Redualdum regem Anglorum pietas divina revelare dignata est, non minimum ad suscipienda vel intelligenda doctrinæ monita salutaris sensum juvit illius. Cum ergo videret Paulinus difficulter posse sublimitatem animi regalis, ad humilitatem viæ salutaris, et suscipiendum mysterium vivificæ crucis inclinari, ac pro salute illius, simul et gentis cui præerat, et verbo exhortationis D apud homines, et apud divinam pietatem verbo deprecationis ageret; tandem, ut verisimile videtur, didicit in spiritu, ut quod vel quale esset oraculum regi quondam cælitus ostensum. Nec exinde distulit quin continuo regem ammoneret explere votum, quod in oraculo sibi exhibito se facturum promiserat, si temporis illius ærumnis exemptus, ad regni fastigia perveniret.

Visionis Aeduini occasio. Erat autem oraculum hujusmodi: Cum [b]persequente illum Aedilfrido, qui ante eum regnavit, per diversa occultus loca vel regna, multo annorum tempore profugus vagaretur; tandem venit ad [7]Redualdum, obsecrans ut vitam suam a tanti persecutoris insidiis tutando servaret; qui libenter eum excipiens, promisit se quæ [8]petebantur, esse facturum. At postquam Aedilfrid in hac eum provincia apparuisse, et apud regem illius familiariter cum sociis habitare cog- E novit, misit nuncios, qui Redualdo pecuniam multam pro nece ejus offerrent; neque aliquid profecit. Misit secundo, misit tertio, et copiosiora [9]argenti dona

A offerens, et bellum insuper illi si contemneretur, indicens. Qui vel minis fractus, vel corruptus muneribus, cessit deprecanti, ut sive occidere se Aeduinum, seu legatariis tradere promisit. Quod ubi [1]fidissimus quidam amicus illius animadvertit, intravit cubiculum quo dormire disponebat ; erat enim prima hora noctis, et evocatum foras, quid erga eum agere rex promisisset, edocuit, et insuper adjecit : ‘ Si ergo vis, hac ipsa hora educam te de hac provincia, et ea in loca introducam, ubi nunquam te vel Reduald vel Aedilfrid invenire valeant.’ Qui ait : ‘ Gratias quidem ago benevolentiæ tuæ ; non tamen hoc facere possum quod suggeris, ut pactum quod cum tanto rege inii, ipse primus irritum faciam, cum ille mihi nil mali fecerit, nil adhuc inimicitiarum intulerit. Quin potius, si moriturus sum, ille me magis quam ignobilior quisquam [2]me morti
B tradat. Quo enim nunc fugiam, qui per omnes Brittaniæ provincias, tot annorum temporumque curriculis vagabundus, hostium vitabam insidias ?’ Abeunte igitur amico remansit Aeduini solus foris, residensque mœstus ante palatium, multis cœpit cogitationum æstibus affici, quid ageret, quove pedem verteret nescius.

Cumque diu tacitis mentis angoribus et cæco carperetur igni, vidit subito intempestæ noctis silentio adpropinquantem sibi hominem vultus habitusque incogniti : quem videns, ut ignotum et inopinatum, non parum expavit. At ille accedens salutavit eum, et interrogavit, quare illa hora, cæteris quiescentibus et alto sopore pressis, solus ipse mœstus in lapide pervigil sederet. At ille vicissim sciscitabatur, quid ad eum pertineret, utrum ipse intus an foris
C noctem transigeret. Qui respondens ait : ‘ Ne me æstimes tuæ mœstitiæ et insomniorum, et forinsecæ et solitariæ sessionis causam nescire : scio enim certissime qui es, et quare mœres, et quæ ventura tibi in proximo mala formidas. Sed dicito mihi quid [3]mercis dare velis ei, si qui sit, qui his te mœroribus absolvat, et Redualdo suadeat, ut nec ipse tibi aliquid mali faciat, nec tuis te hostibus perimendum tradat.’ Qui cum se omnia quæ posset, huic tali pro mercede beneficii daturum esse responderet, adjecit ille : ‘ Quid si etiam regem te futurum exstinctis hostibus in veritate promittat, ita ut non solum omnes tuos progenitores, sed et omnes qui ante te reges in gente Anglorum fuerant, potestate transcendas ?’ At Aeduini constantior interrogando factus, non dubitavit promittere, quin ei qui tanta sibi beneficia donaret, dignis ipse gratiarum
D actionibus responderet. Tum ille tertio : ‘ Si autem,’ inquit, ‘ is qui tibi tanta taliaque dona veraciter adventura prædixerit, etiam consilium tibi tuæ salutis ac vitæ melius atque utilius quam aliquis de tuis parentibus aut cognatis unquam audivit, ostendere potuerit, num ei obtemperare, et monita ejus salutaria suscipere consentis ?’ Nec distulit Aeduini quin continuo polliceretur in omnibus se secuturum doctrinam illius, qui se tot ac tantis calamitatibus ereptum, ad regni apicem proveheret. Quo accepto responso, confestim is qui loquebatur cum eo, imposuit dexteram suam capiti ejus, dicens : ‘ Cum hoc ergo tibi [4]signum advenerit, memento hujus temporis, ac loquelæ nostræ, et ea quæ nunc promittis adimplere ne differas.’ Et his dictis, ut ferunt, repente disparuit, ut intelligeret, non hominem esse qui sibi apparuisset, sed spiritum.

Eventus.

E Et cum regius juvenis solus adhuc ibidem sederet, gavisus quidem de collata sibi [5]consolatione, sed multum solicitus ac mente sedula cogitans quis esset ille, vel unde [6]veniret qui hæc sibi loqueretur, venit ad eum præfatus amicus illius, lætoque vultu salutans eum : ‘ Surge,’ inquit, ‘ intra, et sopitis ac relictis curarum anxietatibus, quieti membra simul et animum compone, quia [7]mutatum est cor regis, nec tibi aliquid mali facere, sed fidem potius pollicitam servare disponit : postquam enim cogitationem suam, de qua tibi ante dixi, reginæ in secreto revelavit, revocavit eum illa ab intentione, ammonens quia nulla ratione conveniat tanto regi amicum suum optimum in necessitate positum auro vendere, immo fidem suam, quæ omnibus ornamentis pretiosior est, amore pecuniæ perdere.' Quid plura? Fecit rex ut dictum est: nec solum exulem nunciis [1]hostilibus non tradidit, sed etiam eum ut in regnum perveniret, adjuvit. Nam mox redeuntibus domum nunciis, exercitum ad debellandum Aedilfridum collegit copiosum, eumque sibi occurrentem cum exercitu [2]multum impari, non enim dederat illi spatium quo totum suum congregaret atque adunaret exercitum, occidit in finibus gentis Merciorum ad Orientalem plagam amnis qui vocatur [A]'Idlae:' in quo certamine et filius Redualdi, vocabulo 'Raegenheri,' occisus est: ac sic Aeduini juxta oraculum quod acceperat, non tantum regis sibi infesti insidias vitavit, verum etiam eidem perempto in regni gloriam successit.

Cum ergo prædicante verbum Dei Paulino rex credere differret, et per aliquod tempus, ut diximus, horis competentibus solitarius sederet, quid agendum sibi esset, [3]quæ religio sequenda sedulus secum ipse scrutari consuesset, ingrediens ad eum quadam die vir Dei, imposuit dexteram capiti ejus, et an hoc signum agnosceret requisivit. Qui cum tremens ad pedes ejus procidere vellet, levavit eum, et quasi familiari voce affatus: 'Ecce,' inquit, 'hostium manus quos timuisti, Domino donante, evasisti; ecce, regnum quod desiderasti, Ipso largiente percepisti. Memento ut tertium quod promisisti, facere ne differas, suscipiendo fidem Ejus, et præcepta servando, qui te et a temporalibus adversis eripiens, temporalis regni honore sublimavit; et si deinceps voluntati ejus, quam per me tibi prædicat, obsecundare volueris, etiam a perpetuis malorum tormentis te liberans, æterni secum regni in cælis faciet esse participem.'

Cap. XIII. Quale consilium idem cum primatibus suis de percipienda fide Christi habuerit; et ut pontifex ejus suas aras profanaverit.

Aeduini consilium de fide. A. 627.

Quibus auditis, rex suscipere quidem se fidem quam docebat, et velle et debere respondebat. Verum adhuc cum amicis [4]principibus, et consiliariis suis sese de hoc collaturum esse dicebat, ut si et illi eadem cum illo sentire vellent, omnes pariter in fonte vitæ Christo consecrarentur. Et annuente Paulino, fecit ut dixerat. Habito enim cum sapientibus consilio, sciscitabatur singillatim ab omnibus, qualis sibi doctrina hæc eatenus inaudita, et novus Divinitatis qui prædicabatur cultus videretur.

Cui primus pontificum ipsius [5]Coifi continuo respondit: 'Tu vide, rex, quale sit hoc quod nobis modo prædicatur: ego [6]autem tibi verissime quod certum didici, profiteor, quia nihil omnino virtutis habet, [7]nihil utilitatis' religio illa quam hucusque tenuimus: nullus enim tuorum studiosius quam ego culturæ deorum nostrorum se subdidit; et nihilominus multi sunt qui ampliora a te beneficia quam ego, et majores accipiunt dignitates, magisque prosperantur in omnibus quæ agenda vel adquirenda disponunt. Si autem dii aliquid valerent, me potius juvare vellent, qui illis impensius servire curavi. Unde restat, ut si ea quæ nunc nobis nova prædicantur, meliora esse et fortiora, habita examinatione perspexeris, absque ullo cunctamine suscipere illa festinemus.'

Cujus suasioni verbisque prudentibus alius optimatum regis tribuens assensum, continuo subdidit: 'Talis,' inquiens, 'mihi videtur, rex, vita hominum præsens in terris, ad comparationem ejus quod nobis incertum est temporis, quale cum te residente ad cœnam cum ducibus ac ministris tuis tempore brumali, accenso quidem foco in medio, et calido effecto cœnaculo, furentibus autem foris per omnia turbinibus hiemalium pluviarum vel nivium, adveniensque unus passerum domum citissime [8]pervolaverit, qui cum per unum ostium ingrediens, mox per aliud exierit. A num ad modicum apparet; quid autem sequatur, quidve præcesserit, prorsus ignoramus. Unde si hæc nova doctrina certius aliquid [1]attulit, merito esse sequenda videtur.' His similia et cæteri majores natu ac regis consiliarii divinitus admoniti prosequebantur.

Adjecit autem Coifi, quia vellet ipsum Paulinum diligentius audire de Deo quem prædicabat, verbum facientem. Quod cum jubente rege faceret, exclamavit auditis ejus sermonibus dicens: 'Jam olim intellexeram nihil esse quod colebamus: quia videlicet quanto [2]studiosius in eo cultu veritatem quærebam, tanto minus inveniebam. Nunc autem aperte profiteor, quia in hac prædicatione veritas claret illa, quæ nobis vitæ, salutis et beatitudinis æternæ dona valet tribuere. Unde suggero, rex, ut templa et altaria quæ sine fructu utilitatis
B sacravimus, ocius anathemati et igni [3]contradamus.' Quid plura? præbuit palam adsensum [4]evangelizanti B. Paulino rex, et abrenunciata idolatria, fidem se Christi suscipere confessus est. Cumque a præfato pontifice sacrorum suorum quæreret, quis aras et fana idolorum cum septis quibus erant circumdata, primus profanare deberet; ille respondit: 'Ego. Quis enim ea quæ per stultitiam colui, nunc ad exemplum omnium aptius quam ipse per sapientiam mihi a Deo vero donatam destruam?' Statimque abjecta superstitione vanitatis, rogavit sibi regem arma dare et equum emissarium, quem ascendens, ad idola destruenda [5]veniret. Non enim licuerat pontificem sacrorum vel arma ferre, vel [6]præter in equa equitare. Accinctus ergo gladio accepit lanceam in manu, et ascendens emissarium regis, [7]pergebat ad idola. Quod aspiciens vulgus, æstimabat eum
C insanire. Nec distulit ille, mox ut [8]propiabat ad fanum, profanare illud, injecta in eo lancea quam tenebat: multumque gavisus de agnitione veri Dei cultus, jussit sociis destruere ac succendere fanum cum omnibus septis suis. Ostenditur autem locus ille quondam idolorum non longe ab Eburaco ad Orientem, ultra amnem Dorwentionem, et vocatur hodie [a]'Godmunddingaham,' ubi pontifex ipse inspirante Deo vero polluit ac destruxit eas quas ipse sacraverat aras.

Cap. XIV. Ut idem Aeduini cum sua gente fidelis sit factus; et ubi Paulinus baptizaverit.

Nordanhymbrorum fides. A. 627.

Igitur accepit rex Aeduini cum cunctis gentis suæ nobilibus, ac plebe perplurima fidem et lavacrum sanctæ regenerationis, anno regni sui undecimo, qui
D est annus Dominicæ Incarnationis sexcentesimus vicesimus septimus, ab adventu [9]vero Anglorum in Brittaniam annus circiter centesimus octogesimus. Baptizatus est autem Eburaci die sancto Paschæ, pridie Iduum Aprilium, in ecclesia S. Petri apostoli, quam ibidem ipse de ligno cum catechizaretur atque ad percipiendum baptisma imbueretur, citato opere construxit. In qua etiam civitate ipse doctori atque antistiti suo Paulino sedem episcopatus donavit. Mox autem ut baptisma consecutus est, curavit, docente eodem Paulino, majorem ipso in loco et augustiorem de lapide fabricare basilicam, in cujus medio ipsum quod prius fecerat, oratorium includeretur. Præparatis ergo fundamentis in gyro prioris oratorii per quadrum cœpit ædificare basilicam. Sed priusquam altitudo parietis esset consummata, rex ipse impia nece occisus opus idem successori
E suo Osualdo [b]perficiendum reliquit. Paulinus autem ex eo tempore sex annis continuis, id est, ad finem usque imperii regis illius, verbum Dei, adnuente ac favente ipso, in ea provincia prædicabat: credebantque et baptizabantur quot-

A idolorum superstitionibus, fidem et sacramenta Christi cum sua provincia suscipere. Et quidem pater ejus Reduald jamdudum in Cantia sacramentis Christianæ fidei imbutus est, sed frustra: nam rediens domum, ab uxore sua et quibusdam perversis doctoribus seductus est, atque a sinceritate fidei depravatus habuit posteriora pejora prioribus; ita ut in morem antiquorum Samaritanorum, et Christo servire videretur, et diis quibus antea serviebat. Atque in eodem fano et altare haberet ad sacrificium Christi, et arulam ad victimas dæmoniorum. Quod videlicet fanum rex ejusdem provinciæ [1]Alduulf[a], qui nostra ætate fuit, usque ad suum tempus perdurasse, et se in pueritia vidisse testabatur. A. 627.

Verum Eorpuald non multo postquam fidem accepit tempore, occisus est a viro gentili, nomine [2]Ricbercto; et exinde tribus annis provincia in errore versata est, donec accepit regnum frater ejusdem Eorpualdi Sigberct, vir per omnia Christianissimus atque doctissimus, qui vivente adhuc fratre cum exularet in Gallia, fidei sacramentis imbutus est, quorum participem, mox ubi regnare cœpit, totam suam provinciam facere curavit. Cujus studiis gloriosissime favit Felix episcopus, qui de [3]Burgundiorum partibus, ubi ortus et ordinatus est, cum venisset ad Honorium archiepiscopum, eique indicasset desiderium suum, misit eum ad prædicandum verbum vitæ præfatæ nationi Anglorum. Nec vota ipsius in cassum cecidere; quin potius fructum in ea multiplicem credentium
C populorum pius agri spiritalis cultor invenit. Siquidem totam illam provinciam juxta sui nominis sacramentum, a longa iniquitate atque infelicitate liberatam, ad fidem et opera justitiæ, ac perpetuæ felicitatis dona perduxit, accepitque sedem episcopatus in civitate [4]Domnoc[b]: et cum [5]decem ac septem annos eidem provinciæ pontificali regimine [6]præesset, ibidem in pace vitam finivit.

Status imperii Aeduini.

Tanta autem eo tempore pax in Brittania, quaquaversum imperium regis Aeduini pervenerat, fuisse perhibetur, ut, sicut usque hodie in proverbio dicitur, etiam si mulier una cum recens nato parvulo vellet totam perambulare insulam a mari ad mare, nullo se lædente valeret. Tantum [3]rex idem utilitati suæ gentis consuluit, ut plerisque in locis ubi fontes lucidos juxta publicos viarum transitus [4]conspexit, ibi ob refrigerium viantium, erectis stipitibus æreos [b]caucos suspendi juberet, neque hos quisquam, nisi ad usum necessarium, contingere præ magnitudine vel timoris ejus auderet, vel amoris vellet. Tantum vero in regno excellentiæ habuit, ut non solum in pugna ante illum vexilla gestarentur, sed et tempore pacis equitantem inter civitates sive villas aut provincias suas cum ministris, semper antecedere signifer consuesset : necnon et incedente illo ubilibet per plateas, illud genus vexilli, quod Romani Tufam, Angli [5]vero appellant [6]Tuuf[c], ante eum ferri solebat. Nam quis non execretur superbum eorum conamen et impium, dicentium posse sine peccato hominem existere ex propria voluntate, et non ex gratia Dei? Et primum quidem blasphemiæ stultiloquium est, dicere esse hominem sine peccato; quod omnino non potest, nisi unus mediator Dei et hominum homo Christus Jesus qui sine peccato est conceptus et partus. Paulini recessus.

Turbatis itaque rebus Nordanhymbrorum hujus articulo cladis, cum nil alicubi præsidii nisi in fuga esse videretur, Paulinus adsumpta secum regina Aedilberge quam pridem adduxerat, rediit Cantiam navigio, atque ab Honorio archiepiscopo et rege Eadbaldo multum honorifice susceptus est. Venit autem illuc duce Basso, milite regis Aeduini fortissimo, habens secum [1]Eanfledam filiam, et Vuscfrean filium Aeduini, necnon et [2]Yffi filium Osfridi filii ejus, quos postea mater metu Eadbaldi et Osualdi regum, misit in Galliam nutriendos [3]regi [a]Daegberecto qui erat amicus illius, ibique ambo in infantia defuncti, et juxta honorem vel regiis pueris, vel innocentibus Christi congruum, in ecclesia B sepulti sunt. Attulit quoque secum vasa pretiosa Aeduini regis perplura, in quibus et crucem magnam auream, et calicem aureum consecratum ad ministerium altaris, quæ hactenus in ecclesia Cantiæ conservata monstrantur.

Episcopus Hrofensis.

Quo in tempore, Hrofensis ecclesia pastorem minime habebat, eo quod Romanus præsul illius ad Honorium papam a Justo archiepiscopo legatarius missus, absorptus fuerat fluctibus Italici maris: ac per hoc curam illius præfatus Paulinus, invitatione Honorii antistitis et Eadbaldi regis suscepit ac tenuit, usquedum et ipse suo tempore ad cælestia regna cum gloriosi fructu laboris ascendit. In qua ecclesia moriens, pallium quoque, quod a Romano papa acceperat, reliquit.

Reliquerat autem in ecclesia sua Eburacensi Jacobum diaconum, virum utique C ecclesiasticum et sanctum, qui multo exhinc tempore in ecclesia manens, magnas antiquo hosti prædas, docendo et baptizando eripuit: cujus nomine [4]vicus in quo maxime solebat habitare, juxta Cataractam, usque hodie cognominatur. Qui quoniam cantandi in ecclesia erat peritissimus, recuperata postmodum pace in provincia, et crescente numero fidelium, etiam magister [b]ecclesiasticæ cantionis juxta morem Romanorum seu Cantuariorum multis cœpit existere: et ipse senex ac plenus dierum, juxta scripturas, patrum viam secutus est.

Qui ut mortuo rege inimico, patriam sunt redire permissi, accepit primus eorum, quem diximus, [1]Eanfrid regnum Berniciorum. Qui uterque rex ut terreni regni infulas sortitus est, sacramenta regni cælestis quibus initiatus erat, anathematizando [2]prodidit; ac se priscis idolatriæ sordibus polluendum perdendumque restituit. Eanfrid rex Bernicior. Apostatæ

Nec mora, utrumque rex Brittonum Ceadualla impia manu, sed justa ultione B peremit. Et primo quidem proxima æstate Osricum, dum se in [3]oppido [a]municipio temerarie obsedisset, erumpens subito cum suis omnibus imparatum cum [4]toto exercitu delevit. Dein cum anno integro provincias Nordanhymbrorum non ut rex victor possideret sed quasi tyrannus sæviens disperderet, ac tragica cæde dilaceraret, tandem Eanfridum inconsulte ad se cum duodecim [5]lectis militibus, postulandæ pacis gratia venientem simili sorte damnavit. Infaustus ille annus et omnibus bonis exosus usque hodie permanet, tam propter apostasiam regum Anglorum qua se fidei sacramentis exuerant, quam propter vesanam [6]Brittonici regis tyrannidem. Unde cunctis placuit regum tempora computantibus, ut ablata de medio regum perfidorum memoria, idem annus sequentis regis, id est, Osualdi, viri Deo dilecti regno adsignaretur: quo, post occisionem C fratris Eanfridi, superveniente cum parvo exercitu, sed fide Christi munito, infandus Brittonum dux cum immensis illis copiis quibus nihil resistere posse jactabat, interemptus est; in loco qui lingua Anglorum [b]Denisesburna, id est [7]Rivus Denisi vocatur. CAP. II. UT DE LIGNO CRUCIS QUOD IDEM REX CONTRA BARBAROS PUGNATURUS EREXERAT, INTER INNUMERA SANITATUM MIRACULA, QUIDAM [8]A DOLENTIS BRACHII SIT LANGUORE CURATUS.

Ostenditur autem usque hodie et in magna veneratione habetur locus ille, ubi venturus ad hanc pugnam Osuald signum sanctæ [c]crucis erexit, ac flexis genibus Dominum deprecatus est, ut in tanta rerum necessitate suis cultoribus D cælesti succurreret auxilio. Denique fertur, quia facta citato opere cruce, ac fovea præparata in qua statui deberet, ipse fide fervens hanc arripuerit, ac foveæ imposuerit, atque utraque manu erectam tenuerit, donec adgesto a militibus pulvere, terræ figeretur. Et hoc facto, elata in altum voce cuncto exercitui proclamaverit: 'Flectamus omnes genua, et Dominum omnipotentem vivum ac verum in [9]commune deprecemur, ut nos ab hoste superbo ac feroce sua miseratione defendat: scit enim ipse quia justa pro salute gentis nostræ bella suscepimus.' Fecerunt omnes ut jusserat, sic incipiente diluculo in hostem progressi, juxta meritum suæ fidei, victoria potiti sunt. In cujus loco orationis innumeræ Crux Osualdi regis. A. 635. Victoria.

virtutes sanitatum noscuntur esse patratæ, ad indicium videlicet ac memoriam A

Hefenfelth.

Vocatur locus ille lingua Anglorum [3]' Hefenfelth[a],' quod dici potest Latine Cælestis campus, quod certo utique præsagio futurorum antiquitus nomen accepit: significans nimirum quod ibidem cæleste erigendum trophæum, cælestis inchoanda victoria, cælestia usque hodie forent miracula celebranda. Est autem [4]locus juxta murum illum, ad Aquilonem, quo Romani quondam ob arcendos Barbarorum impetus, totam a mari ad mare præcinxere Brittaniam, ut supra docuimus. In quo videlicet loco consuetudinem multo jam tempore fecerant fratres Hagustaldensis ecclesiæ quæ non longe abest, adve- B nientes omni anno pridie quam postea idem rex Osuald occisus est, vigilias pro salute animæ ejus facere, plurimaque psalmorum laude celebrata, victimam pro eo mane sacræ oblationis offerre. Qui etiam crescente bona consuetudine, nuper ibidem [b]ecclesia constructa, [5]sacratiorem et cunctis honorabiliorem locum omnibus fecere. Nec immerito, quia nullum, ut comperimus, fidei Christianæ signum, nulla ecclesia, nullum altare in tota Berniciorum gente erectum est, priusquam hoc sacræ crucis vexillum novus militiæ ductor, dictante fidei devotione, contra hostem immanissimum pugnaturus statueret.

Primum fidei signum in Bernicia.

Nec ab re est unum e pluribus quæ ad hanc crucem patrata sunt, virtutis miraculum enarrare. Quidam de fratribus [6]Hagustaldensis ecclesiæ, nomine Bothelm qui nunc usque superest, ante paucos annos dum incautius forte noctu C in glacie incederet, repente corruens brachium contrivit, ac gravissima fracturæ ipsius cœpit molestia fatigari; ita ut ne ad os quidem adducere ipsum brachium ullatenus dolore arcente valeret. Qui cum die quadam mane audiret unum de fratribus ad locum ejusdem sanctæ crucis ascendere disposuisse, rogavit ut aliquam sibi partem de illo ligno venerabili rediens adferret, credere se dicens quia per hoc, donante Domino, salutem posset consequi. Fecit ille ut rogatus est, et reversus ad vesperam, sedentibus jam ad mensam fratribus, obtulit ei aliquid de veteri musco quo superficies ligni erat obsita. Qui cum sedens ad mensam non haberet ad manum ubi oblatum sibi munus reponeret, misit hoc in sinum sibi. Et dum iret cubitum, oblitus hoc alicubi deponere, permisit suo in sinu permanere. At medio noctis tempore, cum evigilaret, sensit nescio D quid frigidi suo lateri adjacere, admotaque manu [7]requirere quid esset, ita sanum brachium manumque reperit, ac si nihil unquam tanti languoris [8]habuisset.

Osualdi regis legatio ad Scottos. A. 635.

Idem ergo Osuald, mox ubi regnum suscepit, desiderans totam cui præesse cœpit gentem fidei Christianæ gratia imbui, cujus experimenta permaxima in expugnandis barbaris jam ceperat, misit ad majores natu Scottorum, inter quos exulans ipse baptismatis sacramenta, cum his qui secum erant militibus, consecutus erat; petens ut sibi mitteretur antistes, cujus doctrina ac ministerio gens quam regebat Anglorum, Dominicæ fidei et dona disceret, et susciperet E sacramenta. Neque aliquanto tardius quod petiit impetravit: accepit namque pontificem [9]Aedanum summæ mansuetudinis et pietatis ac moderaminis virum, habentemque zelum Dei, quamvis non plene secundum scientiam. Namque diem Paschæ Dominicum more suæ gentis, cujus sæpius mentionem fecimus, Ninia episcop. I. Austr. Pict. A. 394.

errore idolatriæ, fidem veritatis acceperant, prædicante eis verbum [a]Nynia episcopo reverentissimo et sanctissimo viro, de natione Brittonum, qui erat Romæ regulariter fidem et mysteria veritatis edoctus; cujus sedem episcopalem, S. Martini episcopi nomine et ecclesia insignem, ubi ipse etiam corpore una cum pluribus sanctis requiescit, jam [1]nunc Anglorum gens obtinet. Qui locus ad provinciam Berniciorum pertinens, vulgo vocatur [b]'Ad Candidam casam,' eo quod ibi ecclesiam de lapide, insolito Brittonibus more fecerit. A

Rex Meilochon.

Venit autem Brittaniam Columba, regnante Pictis [c]Bridio filio Meilochon, rege potentissimo, nono anno regni ejus, gentemque illam verbo et exemplo ad fidem Christi convertit: unde et præfatam insulam ab eis in possessionem monasterii faciendi accepit. Neque enim magna est, sed quasi familiarum quinque, juxta æstimationem Anglorum; quam successores ejus usque hodie tenent, ubi et ipse sepultus est, cum esset annorum septuaginta septem, post annos circiter triginta et duos ex quo ipse Brittaniam prædicaturus adiit. Fecerat autem, priusquam Brittaniam veniret, monasterium nobile in Hibernia, quod a copia roborum [d]Dearmach lingua Scottorum, hoc est, Campus roborum, cognominatur. Ex quo utroque monasterio [2]plurima exinde monasteria per discipulos ejus et in Brittania et in Hibernia propagata sunt: in quibus omnibus idem monasterium insulanum, in quo ipse requiescit corpore, principatum [3]teneret. B

Habere autem solet ipsa insula rectorem semper abbatem presbyterum, cujus juri et omnis provincia, et [e]ipsi etiam episcopi, ordine inusitato, debeant esse subjecti, juxta exemplum primi doctoris illius, qui non episcopus, sed presbyter extitit et monachus: de cujus vita et verbis nonnulla a discipulis ejus feruntur scripta haberi. Verum qualiscumque fuerit ipse, nos hoc de illo certum tenemus, quia reliquit successores magna continentia ac divino amore regularique institutione insignes: in tempore quidem summæ festivitatis dubios circulos sequentes, utpote quibus longe ultra orbem positis nemo synodalia Paschalis observantiæ decreta porrexerat; tantum ea quæ in propheticis, evangelicis et apostolicis literis discere poterant pietatis et castitatis opera diligenter observantes. Permansit autem hujusmodi observantia Paschalis apud eos tempore non pauco, hoc est, usque ad annum Dominicæ Incarnationis septingentesimum decimum [4]quintum, per annos centum quinquaginta. C

Sciebant enim, ut Christiani, resurrectionem Dominicam quæ prima sabbati facta est prima sabbati semper esse celebrandam: sed ut barbari et rustici, quando eadem prima sabbati quæ nunc Dominica dies [6]cognominatur veniret, minime didicerant. Cap. V. De vita Aedani episcopi.

Ab hac ergo insula, ab horum collegio monachorum, ad provinciam Anglorum instituendam in Christo, missus est Aedan, [a]accepto gradu episcopatus. Quo tempore eidem monasterio [b]Segeni abbas et presbyter præfuit. Unde inter alia vivendi documenta, saluberrimum abstinentiæ vel continentiæ clericis exemplum reliquit: cujus doctrinam id maxime commendabat omnibus, quod non aliter quam vivebat cum suis, ipse docebat. Nihil enim hujus mundi B quærere, nil amare curabat. Cuncta quæ sibi a regibus vel divitibus sæculi donabantur, mox pauperibus qui occurrerent erogare gaudebat. Discurrere per cuncta et urbana et rustica loca, non equorum dorso, sed pedum incessu vectus, nisi si major forte necessitas compulisset, solebat: quatenus ubicumque aliquos vel divites vel pauperes incedens aspexisset, confestim ad hos divertens, vel ad fidei suscipiendæ sacramentum si infideles essent, invitaret; vel si fideles, in ipsa eos fide confortaret, atque ad eleemosynas operumque bonorum executionem, et verbis excitaret et factis. Aedani vita. A. 635.

In tantum autem vita illius a nostri temporis segnitia distabat, ut omnes qui cum eo incedebant, sive adtonsi, seu laici, meditari deberent; id est, aut legendis Scripturis, aut Psalmis [3]discendis operam dare. Hoc erat quotidianum opus C illius, et omnium qui cum eo erant, ubicumque locorum devenissent. Et si forte evenisset, quod tamen raro evenit, ut ad regis convivium vocaretur, intrabat cum uno clerico, aut duobus; et ubi paululum reficiebatur, [4]adceleravit ocius ad legendum cum suis, sive ad orandum egredi. Cujus exemplis informati tempore illo religiosi quique viri ac feminæ, consuetudinem fecerunt per totum annum, excepta remissione quinquagesimæ Paschalis, quarta et sexta sabbati jejunium ad nonam usque horam protelare. Nunquam divitibus honoris sive timoris gratia, si qua deliquissent, reticebat; sed aspera illos invectione corrigebat. Nullam potentibus sæculi pecuniam, excepta solummodo esca si quos hospito suscepisset, umquam dare solebat, sed ea potius quæ sibi a divitibus donaria pecuniarum largiebantur, vel in usus pauperum, ut diximus, disper- D gebat, vel ad redemptionem eorum qui injuste fuerant venditi, dispensabat. Denique multos quos pretio dato redemerat, redemptos postmodum suos discipulos fecit, atque ad sacerdotalem usque gradum erudiendo atque instituendo provexit. Studia.

Ferunt autem quia cum de provincia Scottorum rex Osuald postulasset antistitem, qui sibi suæque genti verbum fidei ministraret, missus fuerit [c]primo alius austerioris animi vir, qui cum aliquandiu genti Anglorum prædicans nihil proficeret, nec libenter a populo audiretur, redierit patriam, atque in conventu seniorum retulerit, quia nil prodesse docendo genti ad quam missus erat, potuisset, eo quod essent homines indomabiles, et duræ ac barbaræ mentis. At illi, ut perhibent, tractatum magnum in concilio quid esset agendum, habere cœpe- E runt; desiderantes quidem genti quam [5]petebantur, saluti esse, sed de non recepto quem miserant prædicatore dolentes. Tunc ait Aedan, nam et ipse concilio intererat, ad eum de quo agebatur sacerdotem: ‘Videtur mihi, frater, quia durior justo indoctis auditoribus fuisti, et non eis juxta apostolicam [6]disci- Prædecessor.

Earconberct rex Cantuar. primus idola destruit.
A. 640. Anno Dominicæ Incarnationis sexcentesimo quadragesimo, Eadbald rex Cantuariorum transiens ex hac vita, Earconbercto filio regni gubernacula reliquit: quæ ille suscepta viginti quatuor annis et aliquot mensibus nobilissime tenuit. Hic primus regum Anglorum in toto regno suo idola relinqui ac destrui, simul et jejunium quadraginta dierum observari principali auctoritate præcepit. Addunt et alia, quæ ipsa nocte in monasterio eodem divinitus fuerint ostensa miracula: sed hæc nos ad alia tendentes suis narrare permittimus. Sepultum est autem corpus venerabile virginis et sponsæ Christi, in ecclesia beati protomartyris Stephani: placuitque post diem tertium, ut lapis quo monumentum tegebatur, amoveretur, et altius ipso in loco reponeretur: quod dum fieret, tantæ [3]fragrantia suavitatis' ab imis ebullivit, ut cunctis qui adstabant fratribus ac soro-

Sed et matertera ejus, de qua diximus, Aedilberg, et ipsa Deo dilectam perpetuæ virginitatis gloriam in magna corporis continentia conservavit: quæ cujus esset virtutis, magis post mortem claruit. Cum enim esset abbatissa, cœpit facere in monasterio suo ecclesiam in honorem omnium apostolorum, in qua suum corpus sepeliri cupiebat. Sed cum opus idem ad medium ferme esset perductum, illa ne hoc perficeret, morte prærepta est, et in ipso ecclesiæ loco ubi desiderabat, condita. Post cujus mortem fratribus alia magis curantibus, intermissum est hoc ædificium annis septem, quibus completis, statuerunt ob nimietatem laboris, hujus structuram ecclesiæ funditus relinquere; ossa vero abbatissæ illo de loco elevata in aliam ecclesiam, quæ esset perfecta ac dedicata
C transferre. Et aperientes sepulcrum ejus, ita intemeratum corpus invenere, ut a corruptione concupiscentiæ carnalis erat inmune: et ita denuo lotum, atque aliis vestibus indutum, transtulerunt illud in ecclesiam B. Stephani martyris; cujus videlicet natalis ibi solet in magna gloria celebrari die Nonarum Juliarum.

CAP. IX. UT IN LOCO IN QUO OCCISUS EST REX OSUALD, CREBRA SANITATUM MIRACULA FACTA; UTQUE IBI PRIMO JUMENTUM CUJUSDAM VIANTIS, AC DEINDE PUELLA PARALYTICA SIT CURATA.

Regnavit autem Osuald Christianissimus rex Nordanhymbrorum novem annis, adnumerato etiam illo anno, quem et feralis impietas regis Brittonum, et apostasia demens regum Anglorum detestabilem fecerat. Siquidem, ut supra
D docuimus[A], unanimo omnium consensu firmatum est, ut nomen et memoria apostatarum de catalogo regum Christianorum prorsus aboleri deberet, neque aliquis regno eorum annus adnotari. Quo completo annorum curriculo occisus est commisso gravi prælio, ab eadem pagana gente paganoque rege Merciorum, a quo et prædecessor ejus Aeduini peremptus fuerat, in loco qui lingua Anglorum nuncupatur [a]Maserfelth, anno ætatis suæ trigesimo octavo, [b]die quinto mensis Augusti.

[a] Duo comitatus hunc locum sibi clamant. Lancastria juxta Winwicum nomen loci Maserfelth exhibuit, et inscriptionem in ecclesia Winwici ab antiquo conservatam, non omisso argumento quod in Nordanhymbrorum regno situm habeat, ubi Penda Osualdum aggressus est. Salopia vero suam etiam habet Maserfeldam hodie 'Oswestre' sive 'Oswaldstre,' qui Brittanice 'Crux Osualdi' dicitur, atque in eo comitatu pugnatum, quia nempe Osualdus eum a Penda nuper devicto ceperat. Ab hac sententia stat auctor Vitæ S. Osualdi apud Capgravium, auctoritatem ejus confirmante Camdeno. Est autem Oswestre ab urbe Salopiæ septem decem fere miliaribus versus Walliam, a fossa regis Offæ miliario non plane dimidio. In quo quidem campo ecclesia quæ Candida Ecclesia dicitur in S. terra fossam ad mensuram staturæ virilis reddiderit. Nec mirandum in loco mortis illius infirmos sanari, qui semper dum viveret infirmis et pauperibus consulere, eleemosynas dare, opem ferre non cessabat. Et multa quidem in loco illo, vel de pulvere loci illius facta virtutum miracula narrantur: sed nos duo tantum quæ a majoribus audivimus, referre satis duximus. A

Non multo post interfectionem ejus exacto tempore, contigit ut quidam equo sedens iter juxta locum ageret illum; cujus equus subito lassescere, consistere, caput in terram declinare, spumas ex ore demittere, et augescente dolore nimio, in terram cœpit ruere. [1]Desiluit eques, et stramine [2]substrato cœpit exspectare horam, qua aut melioratum reciperet jumentum, aut relinqueret mortuum. At ipsum diu gravi dolore vexatum, cum diversas in partes se torqueret, repente volutando devenit in illud loci ubi rex memorabilis occubuit. Nec mora, B quiescente dolore cessabat ab insanis membrorum motibus, et consueto equorum more, quasi post lassitudinem in diversum latus vicissim sese volvere, statimque exsurgens quasi [3]sanum per omnia, [4]virecta herbarum avidius carpere cœpit.

Quo ille viso, ut vir sagacis ingenii, intellexit aliquid miræ sanctitatis huic loco quo equus est curatus, inesse; et posito ibi signo, non multo post ascendit equum, atque ad hospitium quo proposuerat, accesit: quo dum adveniret, invenit puellam ibi, neptem patris-familias, longo paralysis morbo gravatam: et cum familiares domus illius, de acerba puellæ infirmitate ipso præsente quererentur, cœpit dicere ille de loco ubi caballus suus esset curatus. Quid multa? imponentes eam carro, duxerunt ad locum[5], ibidemque deposuerunt. At illa posita in loco, obdormivit parumper; et ubi evigilavit, sanatam se ab illa cor- C poris dissolutione sentiens, postulata aqua, ipsa lavit faciem, crines composuit, caput linteo cooperuit, et cum his qui se adduxerant, sana pedibus incedendo reversa est.

Cap. X. Ut pulvis loci illius contra ignem valuerit.

[6]Eodem tempore venit alius quidam de natione Brittonum, ut ferunt, iter faciens juxta ipsum locum in quo præfata erat pugna completa; et vidit unius loci spatium cætero campo viridius ac venustius: cœpitque sagaci animo conjicere quod nulla esset alia causa insolitæ illo in loco viriditatis, nisi quia ibidem sanctior cætero exercitu vir aliquis fuisset interfectus. Tulit itaque de pulvere terræ illius secum inligans in linteo, cogitans quod futurum erat, quia ad mede- D lam infirmantium idem pulvis proficeret; et pergens itinere suo pervenit ad vicum quendam vespere, intravitque in domum in qua [7]vicani cœnantes epulabantur: et susceptus a dominis domus, resedit et ipse cum eis ad convivium, adpendens linteolum cum pulvere quem adtulerat, in [8]una posta′ parietis. Cumque diutius epulis atque ebrietati vacarent, accenso grandi igne in medio, contigit volantibus in altum scintillis, culmen domus, quod erat virgis contextum ac fœno tectum, subitaneis flammis impleri. Quod cum repente convivæ terrore confusi [9]conspicerent, fugerunt foras, [10]nil ardenti domui, jamjamque perituræ prodesse valentes. Consumpta ergo domo flammis, [11]posta solummodo in qua′ pulvis ille inclusus pendebat, tuta ab ignibus et intacta remansit. Qua visa virtute, mirati sunt valde; et perquirentes subtilius, invenerunt quia de E illo loco adsumptus erat pulvis ubi regis Osualdi sanguis [12]fuerat effusus. Quibus patefactis ac diffamatis longe lateque miraculis, multi [13]per dies′ locum frequentare illum, et sanitatum ibi gratiam capere sibi suisque cœperunt.

A servantur, translata sunt. Factum est autem hoc per industriam reginæ Merciorum Osthrydae, quæ erat filia fratris ejus, [1] id est' Osuiu qui post illum regni apicem tenebat, ut in sequentibus dicemus. A. 643.

Est monasterium nobile in provincia Lindissi, nomine [a] Beardaneu, quod eadem regina cum viro suo Aedilredo multum diligebat, venerabatur, excolebat, in quo desiderabat honoranda patrui sui ossa recondere: cumque venisset carrum in quo eadem ossa ducebantur, incumbente vespera, in monasterium præfatum, noluerunt ea qui erant in monasterio libenter excipere: quia etsi sanctum eum noverant, tamen quia de alia provincia ortus fuerat, et super eos regnum acceperat, veteranis eum odiis etiam mortuum insequebantur. Unde factum est ut ipsa nocte reliquiæ adlatæ foris permanerent, tentorio [2] tantum majore
B supra carrum in quo inerant, extenso. Sed miraculi cælestis ostensio, quam reverenter [3] eæ suscipiendæ' a cunctis fidelibus essent, patefecit. Nam tota [4] ea nocte columna lucis a carro illo ad cælum usque porrecta, omnibus pene ejusdem Lindissæ provinciæ locis conspicua stabat. Unde mane facto fratres monasterii illius, qui pridie abnuerant, diligenter ipsi petere cœperunt, ut apud se eædem sanctæ ac Deo dilectæ reliquiæ conderentur. Lota igitur ossa intulerunt in thecam, quam in hoc præparaverant, atque in ecclesia juxta honorem congruum posuerunt: et ut regia viri sancti persona memoriam haberet æternam, vexillum ejus super tumbam auro et purpura compositum adposuerunt, ipsamque aquam in qua [5] laverunt ossa, in angulo sacrarii fuderunt. Ex quo tempore factum est, ut ipsa terra quæ lavacrum venerabile suscepit, ad abigen-
C dos ex obsessis corporibus dæmones, gratiæ salutaris haberet effectum.

Devotio.

Denique tempore sequente, cum præfata regina in eodem monasterio moraretur, venit ad salutandam eam abbatissa quædam venerabilis, quæ usque hodie superest, vocabulo Aedilhild, soror virorum sanctorum Aedilvini et Aldevini, quorum prior [b] episcopus in Lindissi provincia, secundus erat abbas in monasterio quod vocatur [A] Peartaneu, a quo non longe et illa monasterium habebat. [A] v. II. 16.

Cum ergo [6] veniens illo, loqueretur cum regina, atque inter alia, sermone de Osualdo exorto, diceret quod et ipsa lucem nocte illa supra reliquias ejus ad cælum usque altam vidisset, adjecit regina quia de pulvere pavimenti in quo aqua lavacri illius effusa est, multi jam sanati essent infirmi. At illa petiit sibi portionem pulveris salutiferi dari; et accipiens, [7] inligatam panno condidit in D capsella, et rediit. Transacto autem tempore aliquanto, cum esset in suo monasterio, venit illic quidam hospes, qui solebat nocturnis sæpius horis repente ab inmundo spiritu gravissime vexari: qui cum benigne susceptus post cœnam in lecto membra posuisset, subito a diabolo arreptus, [8] clamare, dentibus frendere, spumare, et diversis motibus cœpit membra torquere. Cumque a nullo vel teneri vel ligari potuisset, cucurrit minister, et pulsans ad ostium, nunciavit abbatissæ. At illa aperiens januam monasterii, exivit ipsa cum una sanctimonialium feminarum ad locum virorum; et evocans presbyterum, rogavit secum venire ad patientem. Ubi cum venientes viderent multos adfuisse qui vexatum tenere et motus ejus insanos comprimere conati, nequaquam valebant, dicebat presbyter [9] exorcismos, et [10] quæque poterat pro sedando miseri furore agebat.
E Sed nec ipse, quamvis multum laborans, proficere aliquid valebat. Cumque nil salutis furenti superesse videretur, repente venit in mentem abbatissæ pulvis ille præfatus, statimque jussit ire ministram, et capsellam in qua erat, adducere. Et cum illa adferens quæ jussa est, intraret atrium domus, in cujus interioribus dæmoniosus torquebatur, conticuit ille subito, et quasi in somnum laxatus deposuit caput, membra in quietem omnia composuit. Conticuere omnes intentique ora tenebant, quem res exitum haberet solliciti exspectantes. Et post aliquantum horæ spatium, resedit qui vexabatur, et graviter suspirans: ‘Modo,’ inquit, ‘sanum sapio, recepi enim sensum animi mei.’ At illi sedulo scisciabantur quomodo hoc contigisset. Qui ait: ‘Mox ut virgo hæc cum capsella quam portabat, adpropinquavit atrio domus hujus, discessere omnes qui me premebant spiritus maligni, et me relicto nusquam comparuerunt.’ Tunc dedit ei abbatissa portiunculam de pulvere illo; et sic data oratione a presbytero illo, noctem quietissimam duxit: neque aliquid ex eo tempore nocturni timoris aut vexationis ab antiquo hoste pertulit. Cap. XII. Ut ad tumbam ejus sit puerulus [1]e febre curatus. B

Sequente dehinc tempore fuit in eodem monasterio puerulus quidam longo febrium incommodo graviter vexatus: qui cum die quodam sollicitus horam accessionis exspectaret, ingressus ad eum quidam de fratribus: ‘Vis,’ inquit, ‘mi nate, doceam te quomodo cureris ab [2]hujus molestia languoris? Surge, [3]ingredere ecclesiam, et accedens ad sepulcrum Osualdi, ibi reside, et quietus manens adhære tumbæ. Vide ne exeas inde, nec de loco movearis, donec hora recessionis febrium transierit. Tunc ipse intrabo, et educam te inde.’ Fecit ut ille suaserat, sedentemque ad tumbam sancti, infirmitas tangere nequaquam præsumpsit; [4]quin in tantum timens aufugit, ut nec secunda die, nec tertia, neque umquam exinde eum auderet contingere. Quod ita esse gestum qui referebat mihi frater inde adveniens adjecit, quod eo adhuc tempore quo mecum C loquebatur superesset in eodem monasterio jam juvenis ille, in quo tunc puero factum erat hoc miraculum sanitatis. Nec mirandum preces regis illius jam cum Domino regnantis, multum valere apud eum qui temporalis regni [5]quondam gubernacula tenens, magis pro æterno regno semper laborare ac deprecari solebat.

Denique ferunt quia a tempore matutinæ laudis sæpius ad diem usque in orationibus perstiterit, atque ob crebrum morem orandi, sive gratias agendi Domino semper ubicumque sedens, supinas super genua sua manus habere solitus sit. Vulgatum est autem, et in consuetudinem proverbii versum, quod etiam inter verba orationis vitam finierit. Nam cum armis et hostibus circumseptus, jamjamque videret se esse perimendum, oravit[6] pro animabus exercitus D sui. Unde dicunt in proverbio: ‘Deus miserere animabus, dixit Osuald cadens in terram.’

Translatio reliquiarum S. Osualdi. A. 643.

[a]Ossa igitur illius translata et condita sunt in monasterio [7]quo diximus: porro [b]caput et manus cum brachiis a corpore præcisas, jussit rex qui occiderat, in stipitibus suspendi. Quo post annum veniens cum exercitu successor regni ejus Osuiu, abstulit ea, et caput quidem in cœmeterio Lindisfarnensis ecclesiæ: in [c]regia vero civitate manus cum brachiis condidit.

Sed et in Hibernia cum presbyter adhuc peregrinam pro æterna patria duceret vitam, rumorem sanctitatis [1]illius in ea quoque insula longe lateque jam percrebuisse ferebat: e quibus unum quod inter alia retulit miraculum, præsenti nostræ historiæ inserendum credidimus. In Hibernia.

'Tempore,' inquit, 'mortalitatis quæ Brittaniam Hiberniamque lata strage vastavit, percussus est ejusdem clade pestis inter alios scholasticus quidam de gente Scottorum, doctus quidem vir studio literarum; sed erga curam perpetuæ suæ salvationis nihil omnino studii et industriæ gerens: qui cum se morti proximum videret, timere cœpit et pavere, ne mox mortuus, ob merita scelerum ad Pestis. A. 664.

B inferni claustra raperetur: clamavitque me, cum essem in [2]vicino positus, et inter ægra tremens suspiria, flebili voce talia mecum querebatur: Vides, inquit, quia [3]jamjamque crescente corporis molestia ad articulum subeundæ mortis compellor: nec dubito me post mortem corporis statim ad perpetuam animæ mortem rapiendum, ac infernalibus subdendum esse tormentis: qui tempore non pauco inter studia divinæ lectionis, vitiorum potius implicamentis quam divinis solebam servire mandatis. Inest autem animo, si mihi pietas Superna aliqua vivendi spatia donaverit, vitiosos mores corrigere, atque ad imperium Divinæ voluntatis totam ex integro mentem vitamque transferre. Verum novi non hoc esse meriti mei, ut inducias vivendi vel accipiam vel me accepturum esse confidam, nisi forte misero mihi et indigno [4]venia, per auxilium eorum qui

C illi fideliter servierunt, propitiari dignatus fuerit. Audivimus autem, et fama [5]celeberrima, quia fuerit in gente vestra rex mirandæ sanctitatis, vocabulo Osuald, cujus excellentia fidei et virtutis, etiam post mortem, virtutum frequentium operatione claruerit: precorque, si aliquid reliquiarum illius penes te [6]habes, adferas mihi, si forte mihi Dominus per ejus meritum misereri voluerit. At ego respondi: Habeo quidem de ligno, in quo caput ejus occisi a paganis infixum est; et, si firmo corde credideris, potest Divina pietas per tanti [7]meritum viri, et hujus vitæ spatia longiora concedere, et ingressu te vitæ perennis dignum reddere. Nec moratus [8]ille, integram se in hoc habere fidem respondebat.

'[9]Tunc benedixi aquam, et astulam roboris præfati inmittens obtuli ægro

A. 644. quadragesimo quarto, reverentissimus pater Paulinus, quondam [1]quidem Eburacensis, sed tunc Hrofensis episcopus civitatis, transivit ad Dominum sexto 10 Oct. Iduum Octobrium die: qui [a]decem et novem annos, menses duos, dies viginti unum episcopatum tenuit; [b]sepultusque est in [2]secretario beati apostoli Andreæ, quod rex Aedilberct a fundamentis in eadem Hrofi civitate construxit. Osuini cædes. A. 651. Habuit autem Osuiu primis regni sui temporibus consortem regiæ dignitatis, vocabulo Osuini, de stirpe regis Aeduini, hoc est, filium Osrici, de quo supra retulimus, virum eximiæ pietatis et religionis: qui provinciæ [3]Derorum [4]septem annis' in maxima omnium rerum affluentia, et ipse amabilis omnibus præfuit. Sed nec cum eo, ille qui cæteram Transhumbranæ gentis partem ab Aquilone, B id est, Berniciorum provinciam regebat, habere pacem potuit; quin potius ingravescentibus causis dissensionum miserrima hunc cæde peremit. Siquidem congregato contra invicem exercitu, cum videret se Osuini cum illo qui plures habebat auxiliarios, non posse bello confligere, ratus est, utilius tunc demissa intentione bellandi, servare se ad tempora meliora. Remisit ergo exercitum quem congregaverat, ac singulos domum redire præcepit, a loco qui vocatur Uilfaraesdun. [c]Uilfaraesdun, id est, 'Mons Uilfari,' et est a vico Cataractone decem ferme millibus passuum contra solstitialem occasum secretus: divertitque ipse cum uno tantum milite [5]sibi fidelissimo, nomine [6]Tondheri, celandus in domo comitis Hunvaldi, quem etiam ipsum sibi amicissimum autumabat. Sed, heu, proh dolor! longe aliter erat: nam ab eodem comite proditum, eum [7]Osuiu cum C præfato ipsius milite per præfectum suum Aediluinum detestanda omnibus 20 Aug. morte interfecit. Quod factum est die [8]decima tertia[d] Kalendarum Septembrium, anno regni ejus nono, in loco qui dicitur [e]Ingetlingum; ubi postmodum castigandi hujus facinoris gratia, monasterium constructum est: in quo pro Ingetlingum Mon.

si a morte prædecessoris computamus, secundus ejus annus die 5 Augusti exierat. Obiit Oswius A. 670 die 15 Feb., cui successit Egfridus. In lib. IV. c. 5, incidimus in mensem Septembrem A. 673, anno tertio; IV. 12, Augustum A. 678, anno octavo; IV. 17, Septembrem, A. 680 anno decimo, et IV. 26, Maium A. 685, anno 15 Egfridi: at hi anni, a morte Oswii supputati, terminos suos a Februario præcedente omnes excederent. Obiit Egberct rex Cantiæ, IV. 5, mense Julio A. 673, successoremque habuit Hlothaire. In lib. IV. 17, mensis Septembris A. 680 ad annum ejus septimum refertur, qui annus, si a morte Egbercti computetur, mense Julio præcedente exierat. Attamen animadvertendum est quod, IV. 5, regnasse asseritur Hlotharius an. 11. mens. 7, scilicet a mense Julio A. 673 ad diem 6 Februarii A. 685; quum, in IV. 26, obiisse dicitur cum regnasset annis 12, quod non nisi cum annis cavis Incarnationis quibus regnum tenuerit conquadraret.

Conjecturam misit vir doctus 'Ellerton' fuisse; cujus quidem nominis plures sunt loci in ea regione, omnes tamen Cataractæ propiores quam ut ad situm a Beda datum accommodentur. Chronicon MS. Dunelm. A utriusque regis, et occisi videlicet, et ejus qui occidere jussit, animæ redemptione cotidie Domino preces offerri deberent.

Erat autem rex Osuini et aspectu venustus, et statura sublimis, et affatu jucundus, et moribus civilis, et manu omnibus, [1]id est,' nobilibus simul atque ignobilibus largus: unde contigit ut ob regiam ejus et animi, et vultus, et meritorum dignitatem ab omnibus diligeretur, et undique ad ejus ministerium de cunctis prope provinciis viri etiam nobilissimi concurrerent. Cujus inter cæteras [2]virtutis et modestiæ,' et, ut ita dicam, specialis benedictionis glorias, etiam maxima fuisse fertur humilitas, ut uno probare sat erit exemplo. Osuini R. indoles.

Donaverat equum optimum antistiti Aidano, in quo ille quamvis ambulare solitus, vel amnium fluenta transire, vel si alia quælibet necessitas insisteret, B viam peragere posset: cui cum parvo interjecto tempore pauper quidam occurreret eleemosynam petens, desiliens ille præcepit equum, ita ut erat stratus regaliter, pauperi dari: erat enim multum misericors, et cultor pauperum, ac velut pater miserorum. Hoc cum regi esset relatum, dicebat episcopo, cum forte ingressuri essent ad prandium: 'Quid voluisti, domine antistes, equum regium, quem te conveniebat [3]proprium habere, pauperi dare? Nunquid non habuimus equos viliores plurimos, vel alias species quæ ad pauperum dona sufficerent, quamvis illum eis equum non dares, quem tibi specialiter possidendum elegi?' Cui statim episcopus: 'Quid loqueris,' inquit, 'rex? [4]Numquid tibi carior est ille filius equæ, quam ille filius Dei?' Quibus dictis intrabant ad prandendum. Et episcopus quidem residebat in suo loco. Porro rex, venerat C [5]enim de venatu, [6]cœpit consistens ad focum calefieri cum ministris: et repente inter calefaciendum recordans verbum quod dixerat illi antistes, discinxit se gladio suo, et dedit illum ministro, festinusque accedens ante pedes episcopi conruit, postulans ut sibi placatus esset, 'Quia nunquam,' inquit, 'deinceps aliquid loquar de hoc, aut judicabo quid, vel quantum de pecunia nostra filiis Dei tribuas:' Quod videns episcopus, multum pertimuit, ac statim exsurgens levavit eum, promittens se multum illi esse placatum, dummodo ille residens ad epulas tristitiam deponeret. Dumque rex jubente ac postulante episcopo, lætitiam reciperet, cœpit e contra episcopus tristis usque ad lacrymarum profusionem effici. Quem dum presbyter suus lingua sua patria, quam rex et domestici ejus non noverant, quare lacrymaretur interrogasset: 'Scio,' inquit, 'quia D non multo tempore victurus est rex: nunquam enim [7]ante hæc' vidi [8]humilem regem. [9]Unde animadverto illum citius ex hac vita rapiendum: non enim digna est hæc gens talem habere rectorem.' Nec multo post, dira antistitis præsagia tristi regis funere, de quo supra diximus, impleta sunt. Exemplum humilitatis sub correptione.

Sed et ipse antistes Aedan non plus quam duodecimo post occisionem regis quem amabat die, id est, [a]pridie Kalendarum Septembrium, de sæculo ablatus, perpetua laborum suorum a Domino præmia recepit. Aedani obitus. A. 651. 31 Aug.

Qui benedicens illos, ac Domino commendans, dedit etiam oleum sanctificatum: ‘ Scio,’ inquiens, ‘ quia ubi navem ascenderitis, tempestas vobis et ventus contrarius superveniet: sed tu memento ut hoc oleum quod tibi do, mittas in mare; et statim quiescentibus ventis, serenitas maris vos læta prosequetur, ac cupito itinere domum remittet.’ Quæ cuncta ut prædixerat antistes, ex ordine completa sunt: et quidem inprimis furentibus undis pelagi, tentabant nautæ anchoris in mare missis navem retinere, neque hoc agentes, aliquid proficiebant: cumque [1]verrentibus undique et implere incipientibus navem fluctibus, mortem sibi omnes imminere, jamjamque adesse viderent, tandem presbyter reminiscens verba antistitis, adsumpta ampulla misit de oleo in pontum, et statim, ut prædictum erat, suo quievit a B fervore. Sicque factum est, ut vir Dei [2]et per prophetiæ spiritum tempestatem prædixerit futuram, et per virtutem ejusdem spiritus, hanc exortam, quamvis corporaliter absens, sopiverit. Cujus ordinem miraculi non quilibet dubius relator, sed [3]fidelissimus mihi nostræ ecclesiæ presbyter, Cynimund vocabulo, narravit, qui se hoc ab ipso [4]Utta presbytero, in quo et per quem completum est, audisse perhibebat.

Cap. XVI. Ut idem admotum ab hostibus urbi regiæ ignem orando amoverit.

In incendio Bebbanburgh. A. 642–51.

Aliud ejusdem patris memorabile miraculum ferunt multi qui nosse potuerunt. Nam [5]tempore episcopatus ejus, hostilis Merciorum exercitus, Penda duce, Nordanhymbrorum regiones impia clade longe lateque devastans, pervenit C ad urbem usque regiam, quæ ex Bebbæ quondam reginæ vocabulo cognominatur, eamque [6]quia neque armis, neque obsidione capere poterat, flammis absumere conatus est: discissisque [7]viculis quos' in [8]vicinia urbis invenit, [9]advexit illo plurimam congeriem trabium, tignorum, parietum [10]virgeorum, [11]et tecti fenei,' et his urbem in magna altitudine circumdedit, a parte [12]quæ terræ est contigua: et dum ventum opportunum cerneret, inlato igne comburere urbem nisus est. Quo tempore reverentissimus antistes Aidan in insula Farne, quæ duobus [13]ferme millibus passuum ab urbe procul abest, morabatur. Illo enim sæpius, [14]secretæ orationis et silentii causa, secedere consuerat. Denique usque hodie locum sedis illius solitariæ in eadem insula solent ostendere. Qui cum ventis [15]ferentibus globos ignis, ac fumum supra muros urbis exaltari conspiceret, fertur D elevatis ad cælum oculis manibusque, cum lacrymis dixisse: ‘ Vide, Domine, quanta mala facit Penda.’ Quo dicto, statim mutati ab urbe venti, in eos qui accenderant, flammarum incendia retorserunt, ita ut aliquot læsi, omnes territi, impugnare ultra urbem cessarent quam divinitus [16]juvari cognoverant.

Cap. XVII. Ut [a]apposta ecclesiæ cui idem accumbens obierat, ardente cætera domo, flammis absumi nequiverit; et de interna vita [17]ejus.

A sua et adjacentibus agellis habens. Tetenderunt ergo ei ægrotanti tentorium ad Occidentalem ecclesiæ partem, ita ut ipsum tentorium parieti hæreret ecclesiæ. Unde factum est, ut [1]adclinis destinæ quæ extrinsecus ecclesiæ pro munimine erat adposita, spiritum vitæ exhalaret ultimum. Obiit autem septimo decimo episcopatus sui anno, pridie Kalendarum Septembrium. Cujus corpus mox inde translatum ad insulam Lindisfarnensium, atque in cœmeterio fratrum sepultum est. B ac monasterio destinatus, ac tempore non pauco in episcopatu permansit. Contigit autem post aliquot annos, ut Penda Merciorum rex cum hostili exercitu hæc in loca perveniens, cum cuncta quæ poterat ferro flammaque perderet, vicus quoque ille in quo antistes obiit, una cum ecclesia memorata flammis absumeretur. Sed mirum in modum [2]sola illa destina, cui incumbens obiit, ab ignibus circum cuncta vorantibus, absumi non potuit. Quo clarescente miraculo, mox ibidem ecclesia restaurata, et hæc eadem destina in munimentum est parietis, ut ante fuerat, forinsecus adposita. Rursumque peracto tempore aliquanto, evenit per culpam incuriæ, vicum eundem, et ipsam pariter ecclesiam ignibus consumi. Sed ne tunc quidem eandem tangere flamma destinam valebat: et cum magno utique miraculo ipsa ejus foramina ingrediens, quibus ædi-
C ficio erat adfixa, [3]perederet, ipsam tamen lædere nullatenus sinebatur. Unde tertio ædificata ibi ecclesia, destinam illam non ut antea deforis in fulcimentum domus adposuerunt; sed intro ipsam ecclesiam in memoriam miraculi posuerunt, ubi intrantes genu flectere, ac misericordiæ cælesti supplicare deberent. Constatque multos ex eo tempore gratiam sanitatis in eodem loco consecutos: quin etiam [4]astulis ex ipsa destina excisis et in aquam missis, plures sibi suisque languorum remedia conquisiere.

Scripsi [5]autem hæc de persona et operibus viri præfati; nequaquam in eo laudans vel eligens hoc, quod de observatione Paschæ minus perfecte sapiebat: immo hoc multum detestans, sicut in libro quem de Temporibus composui, manifestissime probavi, sed quasi verax historicus, simpliciter ea quæ de illo sive Apologia pro Aedano de Paschate.
D per illum sunt gesta, describens, et quæ laude sunt digna in ejus actibus laudans, atque ad utilitatem legentium memoriæ commendans: studium videlicet pacis et caritatis, continentiæ et humilitatis; animum iræ et avaritiæ victorem, superbiæ simul et vanæ gloriæ contemptorem; industriam faciendi simul et docendi mandata cælestia, sollertiam lectionis et vigiliarum, auctoritatem sacerdote dignam, redarguendi superbos ac potentes, pariter et infirmos consolandi, ac pauperes recreandi vel defendendi clementiam. Qui, ut breviter multa comprehendam, quantum ab eis qui illum novere didicimus, nil ex omnibus quæ in evangelicis, vel apostolicis sive propheticis literis facienda cognoverat, prætermittere, sed cuncta pro suis viribus operibus explere curabat. Cap. XVIII. De vita vel morte religiosi regis Sigbercti.

Sigberct rex Or. Anglorum. A. 630.

Tantumque rex ille cælestis regni amator factus est, ut ad ultimum relictis B regni negotiis, et cognato suo [2]Ecgrice commendatis, qui et antea partem ejusdem regni tenebat, intraret [f]monasterium quod sibi fecerat, atque accepta tonsura pro æterno magis regno militare curaret. Quod dum multo tempore faceret, contigit gentem Merciorum duce rege Penda adversus Orientales Anglos in bellum procedere, qui dum se inferiores in bello hostibus conspicerent, rogaverunt Sigberctum ad confirmandum militem secum venire in prælium. Illo nolente ac contradicente, invitum [3]monasterio eruentes duxerunt in certamen, sperantes minus animos militum trepidare, minus præsente duce quondam strenuissimo et eximio posse fugam meditari. Sed ipse professionis suæ non immemor, dum [4]optimo esset vallatus exercitu, nonnisi virgam tantum habere in manu voluit: occisusque est una cum rege Ecgrice, et cunctus eorum, insistentibus paganis, C cæsus sive dispersus exercitus.

Annæ successio. A. 635. A. 654.

Successor autem regni eorum factus est Anna, filius Eni, de [g]regio genere, vir optimus, atque [5]optimæ [h] genitor sobolis,' de quibus in sequentibus suo tempore dicendum est: qui et [i]ipse postea ab eodem pagano Merciorum duce, a quo et prædecessor ejus, [k]occisus est.

Erat autem monasterium [3]silvanum, et maris vicinitate amœnum, constructum in castro quodam, quod lingua Anglorum [a]Cnobheresburg, id est, 'Urbs Cnobheri' vocatur; quod deinde rex provinciæ illius Anna, ac nobiles quique augustioribus ædificiis ac donariis adornarunt. Erat autem vir iste de nobilissimo genere Scottorum, sed longe animo quam carne nobilior. Ab ipso tempore pueritiæ suæ curam non modicam lectionibus sacris simul et monasticis exhibebat disciplinis, et, quod maxime sanctos decet, cuncta quæ agenda didicerat, sollicitus agere curabat.

At ille oculos in inferiora deflectens, vidit quasi vallem tenebrosam subtus se in imo positam. Vidit et quatuor ignes in aere, non multo ab invicem spatio distantes. Et interrogans angelos qui essent hi ignes, audivit hos esse ignes qui mundum succendentes essent consumpturi. Unum mendacii, cum hoc quod in baptismo abrenunciare nos Satanæ et omnibus operibus ejus promisimus, minime implemus: alterum cupiditatis, cum mundi divitias amori cælestium præponimus: tertium dissensionis, cum atque in inmensam adunati sunt flammam. Cumque adpropinquassent, pertimescens ille dicit angelo: ‘Domine, ecce ignis mihi adpropinquat.’ At ille: ‘Quod non incendisti,’ inquit, ‘non ardebit [1]in te: nam [2]etsi terribilis iste ac grandis esse rogus videtur, tamen juxta merita operum singulos examinat; quia uniuscujusque cupiditas in hoc igne ardebit. Sicut enim quis ardet in corpore per inlicitam [3]voluptatem, ita solutus corpore ardebit per debitam pœnam.’ Tunc vidit unum de tribus angelis, qui sibi in tota utraque visione ductores adfuerunt, præcedentem [4]ignes flammæ′ dividere, et duos ab utroque latere circumvolantes, ab ignium se periculo defendere. Vidit autem et dæmones per ignem volantes, incendia bellorum contra justos struere. Sequuntur adversus ipsum accusationes malignorum, defensiones spirituum bonorum, copiosior cælestium agminum visio; sed et virorum de sua natione [5]sanctorum, quos olim sacerdotii gradu non ignobiliter potitos, fama jam vulgante, compererat; a quibus non pauca, quæ vel ipsi, vel omnibus qui audire vellent, multum salubria essent, audivit. Qui cum verba finissent, et cum angelicis spiritibus ipsi quoque ad cælos redirent, remanserunt cum B. Furseo tres angeli, de quibus diximus, qui eum ad corpus referrent. Cumque præfato igni maximo [6]adpropiarent, divisit quidem angelus, sicut prius, ignem flammæ. Sed vir Dei ubi ad patefactam usque inter flammas januam pervenit, arripientes inmundi spiritus unum de eis, quos in ignibus torrebant, jactaverunt in eum, et contingentes humerum maxillamque ejus incenderunt: cognovitque hominem, et quia vestimentum ejus morientis acceperit, [7]ad memoriam reduxit. Quem angelus sanctus statim adprehendens, in ignem rejecit. Dicebatque hostis malignus: ‘Nolite repellere quem ante suscepistis: nam sicut bona ejus peccatoris suscepistis, ita et de pœnis ejus participes esse debetis.’ Contradicens angelus: ‘Non,’ inquit, ‘[8]propter avaritiam, sed propter salvandam ejus animam suscepit:’ cessavitque ignis. Et conversus ad eum angelus: ‘Quod incendisti,’ inquit, ‘hoc arsit in te. Si enim hujus viri in peccatis suis mortui pecuniam non accepisses, nec pœna ejus in te arderet.’ Et plura locutus, quid erga salutem eorum qui [9]ad mortem′ pœniterent, esset agendum, salubri sermone docuit. Qui postmodum in corpore restitutus, omni vitæ suæ tempore signum incendii quod in anima pertulit, visibile cunctis in humero maxillaque portavit: mirumque in modum quod anima in occulto passa sit, caro palam [10]præmonstrabat. Curabat autem semper, sicut et antea facere consuerat, omnibus opus virtutum et exemplis ostendere et prædicare sermonibus. Ordinem autem visionum suarum, illis solummodo qui propter desiderium compunctionis interrogabant, exponere volebat. Superest adhuc frater quidam senior monasterii nostri qui narrare solet, dixisse sibi quendam multum veracem ac religiosum hominem, quod ipsum Furseum viderit in provincia Orientalium Anglorum, illasque visiones ex ipsius ore audierit: adjiciens quia tempus hiemis fuerit acerrimum, et glacie constrictum, cum sedens in tenui veste vir, [11]ita inter dicendum propter [12]multitudinem memorati timoris vel suavitatis, quasi in media æstatis caumate sudaverit.

A CAP. XXII. UT ORIENTALES SAXONES FIDEM QUAM DUDUM ABJECERANT, SUB REGE SIGBERCTO, PRÆDICANTE CEDDO RECEPERINT.

Eo tempore etiam Orientales Saxones fidem quam olim expulso Mellito antistite [A]abjecerant, instantia regis Osuiu receperunt. Erat enim rex ejusdem gentis Sigberct, qui post Sigberctum cognomento [a]Parvum regnavit, amicus ejusdem Osuiu regis, qui cum frequenter ad eum in provinciam Nordanhymbrorum veniret, solebat eum hortari ad intelligendum Deos esse non posse qui hominum manibus facti essent; Dei creandi materiam lignum vel lapidem esse non posse, quorum recisuræ vel igni absumerentur, vel in vasa quælibet humani usus formarentur, vel certe despectui habita foras projicerentur; et pedibus conculcata in terram verterentur. Deum potius intelligendum majestate incom-
B prehensibilem, humanis oculis invisibilem, omnipotentem, æternum, qui cælum et terram et humanum genus creasset, regeret, et judicaturus esset orbem in æquitate; cujus sedes æterna [1]non in vili et caduco metallo, sed in cælis esset credenda:' meritoque intelligendum, quia omnes qui voluntatem Ejus a quo creati sunt discerent et facerent, æterna ab Illo præmia essent percepturi. Hæc et hujusmodi multa cum rex Osuiu regi Sigbercto [2]amicabili et quasi fraterno consilio sæpe inculcaret, tandem juvante amicorum consensu credidit, et facto cum suis consilio, cum exhortatione, faventibus cunctis, et adnuentibus fidei, baptizatus est cum eis a Finano episcopo in villa regia cujus [×]supra meminimus, quæ cognominatur Ad Murum. Igitur rex Sigberct æterni regni jam civis effectus, temporalis sui regni sedem [3]repetiit, postulans ab Osuiu rege ut aliquos sibi doctores daret, qui gentem suam ad fidem Christi converterent ac fonte salutari abluerent. At ille mittens ad provinciam Mediterraneorum Anglorum, clamavit ad se virum Dei Cedd, et dato illi socio altero quodam presbytero, misit prædicare verbum genti Orientalium Saxonum. Ubi cum omnia perambulantes multam Domino ecclesiam congregassent, contigit quodam tempore eundem Cedd redire domum, ac pervenire ad ecclesiam Lindisfaronensem, propter conloquium Finani episcopi; qui ubi prosperatum ei opus evangelii comperit, fecit eum episcopum in [4]gentem Orientalium Saxonum, vocatis ad se in ministerium ordinationis aliis duobus
D episcopis: qui accepto gradu episcopatus, rediit ad provinciam, et majore auctoritate cœptum opus explens, fecit per loca ecclesias, presbyteros et diaconos ordinavit, qui se in verbo fidei et ministerio baptizandi adjuvarent, maxime in civitate quæ lingua Saxonum [b]'Ythancaestir' appellatur. CAP. XXIII. UT IDEM EPISCOPUS CEDD LOCUM MONASTERII CONSTRUENDI AB OIDILVALDO REGE ACCIPIENS, ORATIONIBUS AC JEJUNIIS DOMINO CONSECRAVERIT; ET DE OBITU IPSIUS.

Oidilvald rex Deror. vovet mon. A. 653–64. Solebat autem idem vir Domini, cum apud Orientales Saxones episcopatus officio fungeretur, [b]sæpius etiam suam, id est, Nordanhymbrorum provinciam exhortandi gratia revisere: quem cum Oidilvald filius Osualdi regis, qui in Deirorum partibus [c]regnum habebat, virum sanctum et sapientem, probumque moribus videret, postulavit eum possessionem terræ aliquam a se ad construendum monasterium accipere, in quo ipse rex et frequentius ad deprecandum Dominum verbumque audiendum advenire, et defunctus sepeliri deberet. Nam et seipsum fideliter credidit multum juvari eorum orationibus quotidianis, qui D illo in loco Domino servirent. Habuerat autem idem rex secum fratrem germanum ejusdem episcopi, vocabulo Caelin, virum æque Deo devotum, qui ipsi ac familiæ ipsius verbum et sacramenta fidei, erat enim presbyter, ministrare solebat, per cujus notitiam maxime ad diligendum noscendumque episcopum pervenit. Favens ergo votis regis antistes, elegit sibi locum monasterii construendi in montibus arduis ac remotis; in quibus latronum magis latibula ac lustra ferarum, quam habitacula fuisse videbantur hominum: ut juxta prophe-

A diebus cunctis, excepta Dominica, jejunium ad vesperam [1]usque juxta morem protelans, [2]ne tunc quidem nisi panis permodicum, et unum ovum gallinaceum cum parvo lacte aqua mixto percipiebat. Dicebat enim hanc esse consuetudinem eorum, a quibus normam disciplinæ regularis didicerat, ut accepta nuper loca ad faciendum monasterium vel ecclesiam, prius orationibus ac jejuniis Domino consecrent. Cumque decem dies Quadragesimæ restarent, venit qui clamaret eum ad regem. At ille, ne opus religiosum negotiorum regalium causa intermitteretur, petiit presbyterum suum Cynibillum, qui etiam frater germanus erat ipsius, pia cœpta complere. Cui cum ille libenter adquiesceret, expleto studio jejuniorum et orationis, fecit ibi monasterium, quod nunc [a]Laestingaeu vocatur, et religiosis moribus, juxta [3]ritus Lindisfarnensium ubi educaobligans: ‘ Si paganus,’ inquit, ‘ nescit accipere nostra donaria, offeramus Ei qui novit, Domino Deo nostro.’ Vovit ergo quia si victor existeret, filiam suam Domino sacra virginitate [1]dicandam offerret; simul et duodecim possessiones prædiorum ad construenda monasteria donaret: et sic cum paucissimo exercitu se certamini dedit. Denique fertur quia tricies majorem pagani habuerint exercitum; siquidem ipsi triginta legiones ducibus nobilissimis instructas in bello habuere, quibus Osuiu rex cum Alchfrido filio, perparvum, ut dixi, habens exercitum, sed Christo duce confisus occurrit. Nam alius filius ejus Ecgfrid eo tempore in provincia Merciorum apud reginam [a]Cynuise obses tenebatur. Filius autem Osualdi regis Oidilvald, qui eis auxilio esse debuerat, in parte erat adversariorum, eisdemque contra patriam et patruum suum [2]pugnaturis ductor exstiterat, quamvis ipso tempore pugnandi sese pugnæ subtraxerat, eventumque discriminis tuto in loco exspectabat. Inito ergo certamine fugati sunt et cæsi pagani, duces regii triginta qui ad auxilium venerant pene omnes interfecti: in quibus Aedilheri frater [3]Annæ regis Orientalium Anglorum qui post eum regnavit, auctor ipse belli, perditis militibus sive auxiliis interemptus[4]: et quia prope fluvium [b]Uinuaed pugnatum est, qui tunc præ inundantia pluviarum late alveum suum, immo omnes ripas suas transierat, contigit ut multo plures aqua fugientes, quam bellantes perderet ensis.

Interea Aidano episcopo de hac vita sublato, Finan pro illo gradum episcopatus, a Scottis ordinatus ac missus acceperat: qui in insula Lindisfarnensi fecit ecclesiam episcopali sedi congruam; quam tamen more Scottorum, non de lapide, sed de robore secto totam composuit, atque harundine texit, quam tempore sequenti reverentissimus archiepiscopus Theodorus in honore beati apostoli Petri dedicavit. Sed [8]episcopus loci [9]ipsius Eadberct ablata harundine, D plumbi laminis eam totam, hoc est, et tectum et ipsos quoque parietes ejus cooperire curavit.

His temporibus quæstio facta est frequens et magna, de [b]observatione Paschæ, confirmantibus eis qui de Cantia, vel de Galliis advenerant, quod Scotti Dominicum Paschæ diem contra universalis ecclesiæ morem celebrarent. Erat in his acerrimus veri Paschæ defensor, nomine [10]Ronan, natione quidem Scottus, sed in Galliæ vel Italiæ partibus regulam ecclesiasticæ veritatis edoctus; qui cum Finano confligens, multos quidem correxit, vel ad sollertiorem veritatis inquisitionem accendit: nequaquam tamen Finanum emendare potuit; quin potius, quod esset homo ferocis animi, acerbiorem castigando, et apertum veritatis adversarium reddidit. Observabat autem Jacob diaconus quondam, ut supra E docuimus, venerabilis archiepiscopi Paulini, verum et Catholicum Pascha, cum omnibus quos ad [11]correctiorem viam erudire poterat. contigisse fertur illis temporibus, ut bis in anno uno Pascha celebraretur. Et A cum rex Pascha Dominicum solutis jejuniis faceret, tunc regina cum suis persistens adhuc in jejunio diem Palmarum celebraret. Hæc autem dissonantia Paschalis observantiæ vivente Aedano [1]patienter ab omnibus tolerabatur, qui [2]patenter intellexerant, quia etsi Pascha contra morem eorum qui ipsum miserant facere non potuit, opera tamen fidei, pietatis, et dilectionis, juxta morem omnibus sanctis consuetum, diligenter exsequi curavit: unde ab omnibus etiam his qui de Pascha aliter sentiebant, merito diligebatur: nec solum a mediocribus, verum ab ipsis quoque episcopis, Honorio Cantuariorum, et Felice Orientalium Anglorum, venerationi habitus est.

Colmanus III. ep. Lindisf. A. 662.

Defuncto autem Finano qui post illum fuit, cum Colmanus in episcopatum succederet, et ipse missus a Scottia, gravior de observatione Paschæ necnon et B de aliis ecclesiasticæ vitæ disciplinis controversia nata est: unde [3]movit hæc quæstio sensus et corda multorum, timentium ne forte accepto Christianitatis vocabulo, in vacuum currerent, aut cucurrissent. Pervenit et ad ipsas principum aures, Osuiu videlicet regis, et filii ejus Alchfridi; qui nimirum Osuiu a Scottis edoctus ac baptizatus, illorum etiam lingua optime imbutus, nihil melius quam quod illi docuissent autumabat. Porro Alchfrid magistrum habens eruditionis Christianæ Uilfridum virum doctissimum: nam et Romam prius propter doctrinam ecclesiasticam adierat, et apud Dalfinum archiepiscopum Galliarum Lugduni multum temporis egerat, a quo etiam tonsuræ ecclesiasticæ coronam susceperat, hujus doctrinam omnibus Scottorum traditionibus jure præferendam sciebat: unde ei etiam donaverat monasterium quadraginta familia- C rum in loco qui dicitur Inhrypum; quem videlicet locum paulo ante eis qui Scottos sequebantur in possessionem monasterii dederat. Sed quia illi postmodum data sibi optione, magis loco cedere quam suam mutare consuetudinem volebant, dedit eum illi qui dignam loco et doctrinam haberet, et vitam. Venerat eo tempore Agilberctus, Occidentalium Saxonum episcopus, cujus supra meminimus, amicus Alchfridi regis, et Uilfridi abbatis, ad provinciam Nordanhymbrorum, et apud eos aliquandiu demorabatur; qui etiam Uilfridum, rogatu Alchfridi, in præfato suo monasterio presbyterum fecit. Habebat autem secum ipse presbyterum nomine Agathonem. Mota ergo ibi quæstione de Pascha, vel [a]tonsura, vel aliis rebus ecclesiasticis, dispositum est ut in monasterio quod dicitur Strenaeshalch, quod interpretatur 'Sinus fari,' cui tunc Hild abbatissa Deo D devota femina præfuit, synodus fieri et hæc quæstio terminari deberet. Veneruntque illo reges ambo, pater scilicet et filius; episcopi, Colman cum clericis suis de Scottia, Agilberctus cum Agathone et Uilfrido presbyteris. Jacobus et Romanus in horum parte erant: Hild abbatissa cum suis in parte Scottorum, in qua erat etiam venerabilis episcopus Cedd, jamdudum ordinatus a Scottis, ut supra docuimus, qui et interpres in eo concilio vigilantissimus utriusque partis exstitit.

A similia dicente, jussit rex et Agilberctum proferre in medium morem suæ observationis, unde initium haberet, vel qua hunc auctoritate sequeretur. Respondit Agilberctus: ‘Loquatur, obsecro, vice mea discipulus meus Uilfrid presbyter, quia unum ambo sapimus cum cæteris qui hic adsident ecclesiasticæ traditionis cultoribus; et ille melius ac manifestius ipsa lingua Anglorum, quam ego per interpretem, potest explanare quæ sentimus.’ Tunc Uilfrid jubente rege ut diceret, ita exorsus est: ‘Pascha quod facimus,’ inquit, ‘vidimus Romæ ubi beati apostoli Petrus et Paulus vixere, docuere, passi sunt et sepulti, ab omnibus celebrari: hoc in Italia, hoc in Gallia, quas discendi vel orandi studio pertransivimus, ab omnibus agi conspeximus: hoc Africam, Asiam, Aegyptum, Græciam, et omnem orbem, quacumque Christi ecclesia diffusa est, B per diversas nationes et linguas, uno ac non diverso temporis ordine [1]gerere comperimus: præter hos tantum, et obstinationis eorum complices, Pictos dico et Brittones, cum quibus de duabus ultimis oceani insulis, et his non totis, contra totum orbem stulto labore pugnant.’ Cui hæc dicenti respondit Colmanus: ‘Mirum quare stultum appellare velitis laborem nostrum, in quo tanti apostoli qui super pectus Domini recumbere dignus fuit, exempla sectamur; cum ipsum sapientissime vixisse omnis mundus noverit.’ At Uilfridus: ‘Absit,’ inquit, ‘ut Johannem stultitiæ reprehendamus, cum scita legis Mosaicæ juxta literam servaret, judaizante adhuc in multis ecclesia, nec subito valentibus apostolis omnem legis observantiam quæ a Deo instituta est, abdicare. Quomodo simulacra quæ a dæmonibus inventa sunt, repudiare omnes qui ad fidem veniunt, necesse C est: videlicet ne scandalum facerent eis qui inter gentes erant Judæis. Hinc est enim quod Paulus Timotheum circumcidit, quod hostias in templo immolavit, quod cum Aquila et Priscilla caput Corinthi totondit: ad nihil videlicet utile, nisi ad scandalum vitandum Judæorum. Hinc quod eidem Paulo Jacobus ait: ‘Vides, frater, quot millia sunt in Judæis qui crediderunt? et omnes hi æmulatores sunt Legis.’ Nec tamen hodie clarescente per mundum evangelio necesse est, immo nec licitum fidelibus vel circumcidi, vel hostias Deo victimarum offerre carnalium. Itaque Johannes secundum Legis consuetudinem quarta decima die mensis primi ad vesperam, incipiebat celebrationem festi Paschalis, nil curans hæc sabbato, an alia qualibet feria proveniret. At vero Petrus cum Romæ prædicaret, memor quia Dominus prima sabbati resurrexit D a mortuis, ac mundo spem resurrectionis contulit, ita Pascha faciendum intellexit, ut secundum consuetudinem ac præcepta Legis, quartam decimam lunam primi mensis, æque sicut Johannes orientem ad vesperam semper exspectaret: et hac exorta, si Dominica dies, quæ tunc prima sabbati vocabatur, erat mane ventura, in ipsa vespera Pascha Dominicum celebrare incipiebat, quomodo et nos [2]hodie facere solemus. Sin autem Dominica non proximo mane post lunam quartam decimam, sed sexta decima, aut septima decima, aut alia qualibet luna, usque ad vicesimam primam esset ventura, exspectabat eum, et præcedente sabbato, vespere, sacrosancta Paschæ sollemnia inchoabat; sicque fiebat, ut Dominica Paschæ dies nonnisi a quinta decima luna usque ad vicesimam primam servaretur. Neque hæc evangelica et apostolica traditio Legem E solvit, sed potius adimplet, in qua observandum Pascha a quarta decima luna primi mensis ad vesperam, usque ad vicesimam primam lunam ejusdem mensis ad vesperam, præceptum est: in quam observantiam imitandam, omnes B. Johannis successores in Asia post obitum ejus, et omnis per orbem ecclesia conversa est. Et hoc esse verum Pascha, hoc solum fidelibus celebrandum, Nicæno concilio non statutum noviter, sed confirmatum est, ut ecclesiastica docet historia. Unde constat vos, Colmane, neque Johannis, ut autumatis, exempla sectari, neque Petri, cujus traditioni scientes contradicitis, neque Legi, neque Evangelio in observatione vestri Paschæ congruere. Cap. XXVI. Ut Colman victus domum redierit ; et Tuda pro illo episcopatu sit functus : qualisque illis doctoribus fuerit habitus ecclesiæ.

Finitoque conflictu, ac soluta concione, Agilberctus domum rediit. Colman videns spretam suam doctrinam, sectamque esse despectam, adsumptis his qui se sequi voluerunt, id est, qui Pascha catholicum, et tonsuram coronæ, nam et de hoc quæstio non minima erat, recipere nolebant, in Scottiam regressus est, tractaturus cum suis, quid de his facere deberet. Cedd, relictis Scottorum vestigiis, ad suam sedem rediit, utpote agnita observatione catholici Paschæ. [a]Facta C est autem hæc quæstio anno Dominicæ Incarnationis sexcentesimo sexagesimo quarto, qui fuit annus Osuiu regis vicesimus secundus ; episcopatus autem Scottorum, quem gesserunt in provincia Anglorum, annus tricesimus. Reverso autem [5]patriam Colmano, suscepit pro illo [6]pontificatum Nordanhymbrorum famulus Christi Tuda, qui erat apud Scottos Austrinos eruditus, atque ordinatus episcopus, habens juxta morem provinciæ illius coronam tonsuræ ecclesiasticæ, et catholicam temporis Paschalis regulam observans: vir quidem bonus ac religiosus, sed permodico tempore ecclesiam regens. Venerat [7]autem de Scottia, tenente adhuc pontificatum Colmano, et diligenter ea quæ ad fidem D et veritatem pertinent, et verbo cunctos docebat et opere. Porro fratribus, qui in Lindisfarnensi ecclesia, Scottis abeuntibus, remanere maluerunt, [c]præpositus est abbatis jure vir reverentissimus ac mansuetissimus Eata, qui erat abbas in monasterio quod [8]dicitur Mailros : quod aiunt Colmanum [9]abiturum petiisse et impetrasse a rege Osuiu, eo quod esset idem Eata unus de duodecim pueris Aidani, quos primo episcopatus sui tempore de natione Anglorum erudiendos in Christo accepit. Multum namque eundem episcopum Colmanum rex pro insita illi prudentia diligebat. Ipse est Eata, qui [d]non multo post eidem ecclesiæ Lindisfarnensi episcopus factus est. Abiens autem domum Colman adsumpsit secum [e]partem ossium reverentissimi patris Aidani ; partem vero in ecclesia cui præerat, reliquit, et in secretario ejus condi præcepit. Tuda IV. ep. Lindisf. Scottor. epp. conversatio.

Quantæ autem parsimoniæ, [1]cujus continentiæ fuerit, ipse cum prædecessoribus suis, testabatur etiam locus ille quem [2]regebant, ubi abeuntibus eis, excepta ecclesia, paucissimæ domus repertæ sunt; hoc est, illæ solummodo, sine quibus conversatio civilis esse nullatenus poterat. Nil pecuniarum absque pecoribus habebant. Si quid enim pecuniæ a divitibus accipiebant, mox pauperibus dabant. Nam neque ad susceptionem potentium sæculi, vel pecunias colligi, vel domus [3]prævideri necesse fuit, qui nunquam ad ecclesiam nisi orationis tantum, et audiendi [4]verbi Dei causa veniebant. Rex ipse, cum opportunitas exegisset, cum quinque tantum aut sex [5]ministris veniebat, et expleta in ecclesia oratione discedebat. Quod si forte eos ibi refici contingeret, simplici tantum et quotidiano fratrum cibo contenti, nil ultra quærebant. Tota enim fuit tunc solicitudo doctoribus illis, Deo serviendi, non sæculo; tota cura cordis excolendi, non ventris. Unde et in magna erat veneratione tempore illo religionis habitus; ita ut ubicumque clericus aliquis aut monachus adveniret, gaudenter ab omnibus tanquam Dei famulus exciperetur: [6]etiam si in itinere pergens inveniretur, adcurrebant, et flexa cervice vel manu signari, vel ore illius se benedici gaudebant; verbis quoque horum exhortatoriis diligenter auditum præbebant. Sed et diebus Dominicis ad ecclesiam, sive ad monasteria certatim, non reficiendi corporis, sed audiendi sermonis Dei gratia confluebant: et si quis sacerdotum in vicum forte deveniret, mox congregati in unum vicani, verbum vitæ ab illo expetere curabant. Nam neque alia ipsis sacerdotibus aut clericis vicos adeundi, quam prædicandi, baptizandi, infirmos visitandi, et, ut breviter dicam, animas curandi causa fuit: qui in tantum erant ab omni avaritiæ peste castigati, ut nemo territoria ac possessiones ad construenda monasteria, nisi a [7]potentibus sæculi [8]coactus, acciperet. Quæ consuetudo per omnia aliquanto post hæc tempore in ecclesiis Nordanhymbrorum servata est. Sed de his satis dictum.

Tudæ ob. et sep. in Paegnalaech.

Eodem anno Dominicæ Incarnationis sexcentesimo sexagesimo quarto, facta [9]erat eclipsis solis [a]die tertio mensis Maii, hora circiter decima diei: quo etiam anno subita [10]pestilentiæ lues, depopulatis prius Australibus Brittaniæ plagis, Nordanhymbrorum quoque provinciam corripiens; atque acerba clade diutius longe lateque desæviens, magnam hominum multitudinem stravit. Qua plaga præfatus Domini sacerdos Tuda raptus est de mundo, et in monasterio quod dicitur [b]Paegnalaech, honorifice sepultus. Hæc autem plaga Hiberniam quo-

[a] Hujus eclipsis sæpius meminit Beda, semel in libro de Temporibus, iterum in Chronico proprie dicto A.M.4622, utrobique ad v. nonas Maias, quod tertio mensis diei respondet. Hoc tamen astronomis non parvum negotium facessit; utpote regulis artis prorsus incongruum. Gerhardus Mercator, qui eclipsim hanc a Beda visam, et tertio illo die Maii observatam fuisse sibi persuasit; auctoritati ejus adeo innixus est, ut exinde tanquam a fundamento novæ hypotheseos structuram efformare non sit veritus. Sed Historiam Bedæ Ecclesiasticam inspicientibus v. 25. clarum erit eclipsin hanc novem annis nativitatem ejus præcessisse. Cum igitur ab aliis accepisset eclipsin initio mensis Maii factam, et ex sua arte cognovisset non nisi novilunii tempore evenire potuisse, neomeniæ diem ex cycli decennovenalis Dionysiani abaco indagandum esse censuit, ex quo quum aureum anni illius numerum XIX. die Maii III. primam lunam indicare deprehenderit, non alio quam illo solis illam defectionem factam esse conclusit. Nondum enim satis perspectum fuerat quam esset fallax cyclica illa neomenias eruendi ratio: cujus errorem suo tempore per ipsa phænomena toto orbi patefactum fuisse Marianus Scottus declaravit, de A. MLXXXII. quo idem ipse XIX. cycli annus decurrebat, ita scribens: 'Prima Paschalis luna IV. Non. Aprilis toto orbi apparuit, quum II. Non. A que insulam pari clade premebat. Erant ibidem eo tempore multi nobilium simul et mediocrium de gente Anglorum, qui tempore Finani et Colmani episcoporum, relicta [1]insula patria, vel divinæ lectionis, vel continentioris vitæ gratia illo secesserant. Et quidam quidem mox se monasticæ conversationi fideliter mancipaverunt, alii magis circumeundo per cellas magistrorum, lectioni operam dare gaudebant: quos omnes Scotti libentissime suscipientes victum eis quotidianum sine pretio, libros quoque ad legendum, et magisterium gratuitum præbere curabant.

Erant inter hos duo juvenes magnæ indolis, de nobilibus Anglorum, Aedilhun et Ecgberct, quorum prior frater fuit Aediluini, viri æque Deo dilecti, qui et ipse ævo sequente Hiberniam gratia legendi adiit, et bene instructus patriam
B rediit, atque episcopus in provincia Lindissi factus, multo ecclesiam [a]tempore nobilissime rexit. Hi ergo cum essent in monasterio quod lingua Scottorum [b]Rathmelsigi appellatur, et omnes socii ipsorum vel mortalitate de sæculo rapti, vel per alia essent loca dispersi, correpti sunt ambo morbo ejusdem mortalitatis, et gravissime adflicti; e quibus Ecgberct, sicut mihi referebat quidam veracissimus et venerandæ canitiei presbyter qui se hæc ab ipso audisse perhibebat, cum se æstimasset esse moriturum, egressus est tempore matutino de cubiculo in quo infirmi quiescebant, et residens solus in loco opportuno, cœpit sedulus cogitare de actibus suis, et conpunctus memoria peccatorum suorum faciem lacrimis abluebat, atque intimo ex corde Deum precabatur, ne adhuc mori deberet, priusquam vel præteritas neglegentias quas in pueritia sive infantia commiserat,
C perfectius ex tempore castigaret, vel in bonis se operibus habundantius exerceret. Vovit etiam votum, quia adeo peregrinus vivere vellet, ut nunquam in insulam in qua natus est, id est, Brittaniam, rediret; quia præter sollemnem canonici temporis psalmodiam, si non valetudo corporis obsisteret, quotidie psalterium totum in memoriam divinæ laudis decantaret; et [2]quia in omni septimana diem cum nocte jejunus transiret. Cumque finitis lacrymis, precibus et votis, domum rediret, invenit sodalem dormientem: et ipse quoque lectulum conscendens, cœpit in quietem membra laxare. Et cum paululum quiesceret, expergefactus sodalis respexit eum, et ait: 'O frater Ecgbercte, O quid fecisti? Sperabam quia pariter ad vitam æternam intraremus. Verumtamen scito quia quæ postulasti, accipies.' Didicerat enim per visionem, et quid ille petiisset, D et quia petita inpetrasset. Quid multa? Ipse Aedilhun proxima nocte defunctus est: at vero Ecgberct decussa molestia ægritudinis convaluit, ac multo [3]postea tempore vivens, acceptumque sacerdotii gradum condignis ornans actibus, post multa virtutum [4]bona, ut ipse desiderabat, nuper, id est, anno Dominicæ Incarnationis septingentesimo vicesimo nono, cum esset ipse annorum nonaginta, migravit ad regna cælestia. Duxit autem vitam in magna humilitatis, mansuetudinis, continentiæ, simplicitatis et justitiæ perfectione. Unde et genti suæ, et illis in quibus exulabat nationibus Scottorum sive Pictorum, [5]exemplo vivendi, et instantia docendi, et auctoritate corripiendi, et pietate largiendi de his quæ a divitibus acceperat, multum profuit. Addidit autem votis quæ diximus, ut semper in Quadragesima non plus quam semel in die reficeret, E non aliud quam panem ac lac tenuissimum, et hoc cum mensura gustaret: quod videlicet lac pridie novum in phiala ponere solebat, [6]et post noctem ablata superficie crassiore, ipse residuum cum modico, ut diximus, pane bibebat. CAP. XXVIII. UT DEFUNCTO TUDA, UILFRID IN GALLIA [1]CEADDA APUD OCCIDENTALES SAXONES, IN PROVINCIA NORDANHYMBRORUM SINT ORDINATI EPISCOPI.

Uilfrid ep. in Gallia ordinatus. A. 664.

Interea rex [a]Alchfrid misit Uilfridum presbyterum ad regem Galliarum, qui eum sibi suisque consecrari faceret episcopum. At ille misit eum ordinandum ad Agilberctum, de quo supra diximus, qui relicta Brittania, Parisiacæ civitatis factus erat episcopus; et consecratus est magno cum honore ab ipso, convenientibus plurimis episcopis in vico regio qui vocatur [b] In Compendio. Quo adhuc in transmarinis partibus [2]propter ordinationem demorante, imitatus industriam filii [3]rex Osuiu, misit Cantiam virum sanctum, modestum moribus, B Scripturarum lectione sufficienter instructum, et ea quæ in Scripturis agenda didicerat, operibus sollerter exequentem, qui Eboracensis ecclesiæ ordinaretur episcopus. Erat autem presbyter vocabulo Ceadda, frater reverentissimi antistitis Ceddi, cujus [x]sæpius meminimus, et abbas monasterii illius quod vocatur Laestingaeu. Misitque rex cum eo presbyterum suum vocabulo [x]Eadhaedum, qui postea regnante Ecgfrido, Hrypensis ecclesiæ præsul factus est. Verum illi Cantiam pervenientes, invenerunt archiepiscopum Deusdedit jam migrasse de sæculo, et necdum alium pro eo constitutum fuisse pontificem. Unde diverterunt ad provinciam Occidentalium Saxonum, ubi erat Uini episcopus: et ab illo est vir præfatus consecratus antistes, adsumtis in societatem ordinationis duobus de Brittonum gente episcopis, qui Dominicum Paschæ diem, ut sæpius C dictum est, secus morem canonicum a quarta decima usque ad vicesimam lunam celebrant. Non enim erat tunc ullus, excepto illo [c]Uine, in tota Brittania canonice ordinatus episcopus. Consecratus ergo in episcopum Ceadda, mox cœpit ecclesiasticæ veritati, et castitati curam impendere; humilitati, continentiæ, lectioni operam dare; oppida, rura, casas, vicos, castella propter evangelizandum, non equitando, sed apostolorum more pedibus incedendo peragrare. Erat enim [4]de discipulis' Aidani, eisdemque actibus ac moribus juxta exemplum ejus, ac fratris sui Ceddi, suos instituere curavit auditores. Veniens quoque Brittaniam Uilfrid jam episcopus factus, et ipse perplura catholicæ observationis moderamina ecclesiis Anglorum sua doctrina contulit. Unde factum est, ut crescente per dies institutione catholica, Scotti omnes qui inter Anglos mora- D bantur, aut his manus darent, aut suam redirent ad patriam.

A Verum Uighard Romam perveniens, priusquam consecrari in [1]episcopatum posset, morte præreptus est, et hujusmodi literæ regi Osuiu Brittaniam remissæ sunt: Literæ Vitaliani P. de ejus obitu.

'Domino [2]excellenti filio Osuio regi Saxonum, Vitalianus episcopus, servus servorum Dei. Desiderabiles literas excellentiæ vestræ suscepimus: quas relegentes, cognovimus ejus piissimam devotionem, ferventissimumque amorem, quem habet propter beatam vitam; et quia dextera Domini protegente ad veram et apostolicam fidem sit conversus, sperans ut sicut in sua gente regnat, ita et cum Christo [3]in futuro conregnare. Et iterum: ^×'Audite insulæ, et adtendite populi de longe.' Et post paululum: ^ϒ'Parum, inquit, est ut mihi sis servus ad suscitandas Tribus Jacob, et fæces Israel convertendas. Et post pusillum: ^'Dedi te in fœdus populi, ut suscitares terram, et possideres hæreditates dissipatas, et diceres his qui vincti sunt: Exite; et his qui in tene-

Et rursum: ^×'Ego Dominus vocavi te in justitia, et adprehendi manum tuam, et servavi; et dedi te in fœdus populi, in lucem gentium, ut aperires oculos cæcorum, et educeres de conclusione vinctum, de domo carceris [5]sedentes in tenebris.' Ecce, excellentissime fili, quam luce clarius est, non solum de vobis, sed etiam de omnibus [6]prophetatum gentibus, quod sint crediturae in Christo omnium conditore. Quamobrem oportet vestram celsitudinem, utpote membrum existens Christi, in omnibus piam regulam sequi perenniter Principis apostolorum, sive in Pascha celebrandum, sive in omnibus quæ tradiderunt sancti apostoli Petrus et Paulus qui ut duo luminaria cæli illuminant mundum, sic doctrina eorum corda hominum quotidie inlustrat credentium.'

Cap. XXX. Ut Orientales Saxones tempore mortalitatis ad idololatriam reversi, sed per instantiam Jarumanni episcopi mox sint ab errore correcti.

Eodem tempore provinciæ Orientalium Saxonum post Suidhelmum, de quo × supra diximus, præfuere reges [a]Sigheri et Sebbi, quamvis ipsi regi Merciorum Uulfhere subjecti. Quæ videlicet provincia cum præfatæ mortalitatis clade premeretur, Sigheri cum sua parte populi, relictis Christianæ fidei Sacramentis, ad apostasiam conversus est. Nam et ipse rex, et plurimi de plebe sive optimatibus, diligentes hanc vitam, et futuram non quærentes, sive etiam non esse credentes, cœperunt fana quæ derelicta erant, restaurare, et adorare simulacra; quasi per hæc possent a mortalitate defendi. Porro socius ejus, et coheres regni ejusdem Sebbi, magna fidem perceptam cum suis omnibus devotione servavit, [3]magna, ut in sequentibus dicemus, vitam fidelem felicitate complevit. Quod ubi rex Uulfheri comperit, fidem videlicet provinciæ ex parte profanatam, misit ad corrigendum errorem, revocandamque ad fidem veritatis provinciam, Jaruman episcopum, qui successor erat Trumheri: qui multa agens sollertia, juxta quod mihi presbyter qui comes itineris illi et cooperator verbi extiterat, referebat, erat enim religiosus et bonus vir, longe lateque omnia pervagatus, et populum et regem præfatum ad viam justitiæ reduxit: adeo ut relictis, sive destructis fanis arisque quas fecerant, aperirent ecclesias, ac nomen Christi, cui contradixerant, confiteri gauderent, magis cum fide resurrectionis in illo mori, quam in perfidiæ sordibus inter idola vivere cupientes. Quibus ita gestis, et ipsi sacerdotes, doctoresque eorum domum rediere lætantes.

At apostolicus papa habito de his consilio, quæsivit sedulus quem ecclesiis Anglorum archiepiscopum mitteret. Erat autem in monasterio [3]Hiridano[c] quod est non longe a Neapoli Campaniæ, abbas Hadrianus, vir natione Afer, sacris literis diligenter imbutus, monasterialibus simul et ecclesiasticis disciplinis institutus, Græcæ pariter et Latinæ linguæ peritissimus. Hunc ad se accitum papa jussit episcopatu accepto Brittaniam venire. Qui indignum se tanto gradui respondens, ostendere posse se dixit alium, cujus magis ad suscipiendum episcopatum et eruditio conveniret, et ætas. Cumque monachum quemdam de vicino virginum monasterio, nomine Andream, pontifici offerret, hic ab omnibus
D qui [4]novere, dignus episcopatu judicatus est. Verum pondus corporeæ infirmitatis, ne episcopus fieri posset, obstitit. Et rursum Hadrianus ad suscipiendum episcopatum actus est: qui [5]petens inducias, si forte alium, qui episcopus ordinaretur ex tempore posset evenire.

Archiepiscopum quærit.
Hadrianus abb.
Andreas abb.

Erat ipso tempore Romæ monachus Hadriano notus, nomine Theodorus, natus [6]Tharso Ciliciæ, vir et sæculari et divina literatura, et Græce instructus et Latine, probus moribus, et ætate venerandus, id est, annos habens ætatis [7]sexaginta et sex. Hunc offerens Hadrianus pontifici, ut episcopus ordinaretur obtinuit: his tamen conditionibus interpositis, ut ipse eum perduceret Brittaniam, eo quod [d]jam bis partes Galliarum diversis ex causis adiisset; et ob id majorem hujus itineris peragendi notitiam haberet, sufficiensque esset in pos-E sessione hominum propriorum: et ut ei doctrinæ cooperator existens, diligenter adtenderet ne quid ille contrarium veritati fidei, Græcorum more, in ecclesiam cui præesset, introduceret. Qui subdiaconus ordinatus, quatuor exspectavit menses, donec illi coma cresceret, quo in coronam tonderi posset. Habuerat

Qui cum pariter per mare ad Massiliam, et deinde per terram [2]Arhelas pervenissent, et tradidissent Johanni archiepiscopo civitatis illius scripta commendatitia Vitaliani pontificis, retenti sunt ab eo, quousque Ebrinus major domus regiæ copiam pergendi quoquo vellent, tribuit eis. Qua accepta Theodorus profectus est ad Agilberctum Parisiorum episcopum, de quo [x]superius diximus, et ab eo benigne susceptus, et multo tempore habitus est. Hadrianus [3]perrexit primum ad Emme Senonum, et postea ad Faronem Meldorum episcopos, et bene [4]sub eis diutius fuit: coegerat enim eos imminens hiems ut ubicumque potuissent quieti manerent. Quod cum nuncii certi narrassent regi Ecgbercto, [5]esse scilicet episcopum quem petierant a Romano antistite, in regno Francorum, misit illo continuo [6]Raedfridum præfectum suum, ad adducendum eum: quo cum venisset, adsumpsit Theodorum cum [7]Ebrini licentia, et perduxit eum ad portum cui nomen est [b]Quentavic, ubi fatigatus infirmitate aliquantisper moratus est; et cum convalescere cœpisset, navigavit Brittaniam. Hadrianum autem Ebrinus retinuit, quoniam suspicabatur eum habere aliquam legationem [c]imperatoris ad Brittaniæ reges adversus regnum, cujus tunc ipse maximam curam gerebat. Sed cum nihil tale illum habere vel habuisse veraciter comperisset, absolvit eum, et post Theodorum ire permisit. Qui statim ut ad illum venit, dedit monasterium B. Petri apostoli, ubi archiepiscopi Cantiæ sepeliri, ut [x]præfatus sum, solent. Præceperat enim Theodoro abeunti domnus apostolicus, ut in diœcesi sua provideret, et daret ei locum in quo cum suis apte degere potuisset.

Pervenit autem Theodorus ad ecclesiam suam secundo postquam consecratus est anno, sub die sexto Kalendarum Juniarum, Dominica; et fecit in ea annos viginti et unum, menses tres, dies viginti sex. Moxque peragrata [d]insula tota, quaquaversum Anglorum gentes morabantur, nam et libentissime ab omnibus suscipiebatur atque audiebatur, rectum vivendi ordinem, ritum Paschæ celebrandi canonicum, per omnia comitante et cooperante Hadriano disseminabat. A qua nati sunt, norunt. Neque unquam prorsus ex quo Brittaniam petierunt Angli, feliciora fuere tempora; dum et fortissimos, Christianosque habentes reges cunctis barbaris nationibus essent terrori, et omnium vota ad nuper audita cælestis regni guadia penderent, et quicumque lectionibus sacris cuperent erudiri, haberent in promptu magistros qui docerent.

Sed et sonos cantandi in ecclesia, quos eatenus in Cantia tantum noverant, ab hoc tempore per omnes Anglorum ecclesias discere cœperunt: primusque, excepto Jacobo de quo ^ supra diximus, cantandi magister Nordanhymbrorum ecclesiis, Aeddi cognomento Stephanus fuit, invitatus de Cantia a reverentissimo viro Uilfrido, qui primus inter episcopos qui de Anglorum gente essent, catholicum vivendi morem ecclesiis Anglorum tradere didicit. Aeddi Stephanus cantor. ^ II. 16. 20. III. 25.

B Itaque Theodorus perlustrans universa, ordinabat locis opportunis episcopos, et ea quæ minus perfecta reperit, his quoque juvantibus corrigebat. In quibus et Ceadda episcopum cum argueret [a]non fuisse rite consecratum; respondens ipse voce humillima: 'Si me,' inquit, 'nosti episcopatum non rite suscepisse, libenter ab officio discedo: quippe qui neque me umquam hoc esse dignum arbitrabar; sed obedientiæ causa jussus subire hoc, quamvis indignus consensi.' At ille audiens humilitatem responsionis ejus, dixit, non eum episcopatum dimittere debere; sed ipse ordinationem ejus denuo catholica ratione consummavit. Eo autem tempore quo defuncto Deusdedit, Doruvernensis ecclesiæ episcopus quærebatur, ordinabatur, mittebatur, Uilfridus quoque de Brittania Galliam ordinandus est missus: et quoniam ante Theodorum rediit, ipse etiam Ceaddæ consecratio consummata. Uilfrid ordinatus.

C in Cantia presbyteros et diaconos, usquedum archiepiscopus ad sedem suam perveniret, ordinabat. At ipse veniens mox in civitate Hrofi, ubi defuncto Damiano episcopatus jam diu cessaverat, ordinavit virum magis ecclesiasticis disciplinis institutum et vitæ simplicitate contentum, quam in sæculi rebus strenuum, cui nomen erat Putta; maxime autem modulandi in ecclesia more Romanorum, quem a discipulis beati papæ Gregorii didicerat, peritum. Cap. III. Ut Ceadda, de quo supra dictum est, provinciæ Merciorum sit episcopus datus; et de vita et de obitu et sepultura ejus.

D Jarumanno, sibi [1]quoque suisque a Theodoro episcopum dari peteret, non eis novum voluit ordinare episcopum; sed postulavit a rege Osuio, ut illis episcopus Ceadda daretur, qui tunc in monasterio suo, quod est in Laestingaeu, quietam vitam agebat, Uilfrido administrante episcopatum Eboracensis ecclesiæ, necnon et omnium Nordanhymbrorum, sed et Pictorum, quousque rex Osuiu imperium protendere poterat. Et quia moris erat eidem reverentissimo antistiti, opus evangelii magis × ambulando per loca, quam equitando perficere; jussit eum Theodorus ubicumque longius iter instaret, equitare, multumque renitentem, studio et amore pii laboris, ipse eum manu sua levavit in equum; quia nimirum sanctum esse virum comperit, atque equo vehi quo esset necesse, compulit. Susceptum itaque episcopatum gentis Merciorum simul et [2]Lindis-

Erat autem idem Ouini monachus magni meriti, et pura intentione supernæ retributionis mundum derelinquens, dignusque per omnia, cui Dominus specialiter sua revelaret arcana, dignus cui fidem narranti audientes accommodarent. Venerat enim cum regina [d] Aedilthryde de provincia Orientalium Anglorum, eratque primus ministrorum, et princeps domus ejus. Qui cum crescente fidei fervore sæculo abrenunciare disponeret, non hoc segniter fecit; sed adeo se mundi rebus exuit, ut relictis omnibus quæ habebat, simplici tantum habitu indutus, et securim atque asciam in manu ferens, veniret ad monasterium ejusdem reverentissimi patris, quod vocatur Laestingaeu. Non enim ad otium, ut quidam, sed ad laborem se C monasterium intrare signabat. Quod ipsum etiam facto monstravit: nam quo minus sufficiebat meditationi Scripturarum, eo amplius operi manuum studium impendebat. Denique cum episcopo in præfata mansione pro suæ reverentia devotionis inter fratres habitus, cum illi intus lectioni vacabant, ipse foris quæ opus esse videbantur, operabatur. Qui cum die quadam tale aliquid foris ageret, digressis ad ecclesiam sociis, ut dicere cœperam, et episcopus solus in oratorio loci, lectioni vel orationi operam daret, audivit repente, ut postea referebat, vocem suavissimam cantantium atque lætantium, de cælo ad terras usque descendere: quam videlicet vocem ab Euro-austro, id est, ab alto brumalis [1] exortus, primo se audisse dicebat, ac deinde paulatim eam sibi adpropiare, donec ad tectum usque oratorii in quo erat episcopus, perveniret: quod ingressa, D totum implevit atque in gyro circumdedit. At ille dum sollicitus in ea quæ audiebat, animum intenderet, audivit denuo, transacto quasi dimidiæ horæ spatio, ascendere de tecto ejusdem oratorii idem lætitiæ canticum, et ipsa qua venerat via, ad cælos usque cum ineffabili dulcedine reverti. Qui cum aliquantulum horæ quasi adtonitus maneret, et quid [2] hæc essent' sollerti animo scrutaretur, aperuit episcopus fenestram oratorii, et sonitum manu faciens, ut sæpe [3] consueverat, si quis foris esset, ad se intrare præcepit. Introivit ille concitus, cui dixit antistes: 'Vade cito ad ecclesiam, et hos septem fratres huc venire facito; tu quoque simul adesto.' A quoque disciplinæ regularis, quæ vel ab ipso didicissent et in ipso vidissent, vel in patrum præcedentium factis sive dictis invenissent, indefessa instantia sequerentur. Deinde subjunxit diem sui obitus jam proxime instare. ‘Namque hospes,’ inquit, ‘ille amabilis, qui fratres nostros visitare solebat, ad me quoque hodie venire, meque de sæculo evocare dignatus est. Propter quod revertentes ad ecclesiam, dicite fratribus ut et meum exitum Domino precibus commendent, et suum quoque exitum, cujus hora incerta est, vigiliis, orationibus, bonis operibus prævenire meminerint.’ Cumque hæc et hujusmodi plura loqueretur, atque illi percepta ejus benedictione, jam multum tristes exissent, rediit ipse solus qui carmen cæleste audierat, et prosternens se in terram: ‘Obsecro,’ inquit, ‘pater; [1]licet aliquid interrogare?’ ‘Interroga,’ inquit, ‘quod vis.’ At
B ille: ‘Obsecro,’ inquit, ‘ut dicas quod erat canticum illud lætantium quod audivi, venientium de cælis super oratorium hoc, et post tempus redeuntium ad cælos?’ Respondit ille: ‘Si vocem carminis audisti, et cælestes supervenire cœtus cognovisti, præcipio tibi in nomine Domini, ne hoc cuiquam ante meum obitum dicas. Revera autem angelorum fuere spiritus, qui me ad cælestia quæ semper amabam ac desiderabam, præmia vocare venerunt, et post dies septem se redituros, ac me secum adducturos esse promiserunt.’ Quod quidem ita ut [2]dictum ei′ erat, opere completum est. Nam confestim languore corporis tactus est, et hoc per dies ingravescente, septimo, ut promissum ei fuerat, die postquam obitum suum Dominici corporis et sanguinis perceptione munivit, soluta ab ergastulo corporis anima sancta, ducentibus, ut credi fas est, angelis comi-
C tibus æterna gaudia petivit. Non autem mirum si diem mortis, vel potius diem Domini lætus aspexit, quem semper usquedum veniret, sollicitus exspectare curavit.

Ceaddæ devotio in ventis.

Namque inter plura continentiæ, humilitatis, doctrinæ, [3]orationum, voluntariæ paupertatis, et cæterarum virtutum merita, in tantum erat timori Domini subditus, in tantum novissimorum suorum in omnibus operibus suis memor, ut sicut mihi frater quidam de eis qui me in Scripturis [4]erudiebant et erat in monasterio ac magisterio [5]illius educatus, vocabulo Trumberct, referre solebat, si forte legente eo vel aliud quid agente, repente flatus venti major adsurgeret, continuo misericordiam Domini invocaret, et eam generi humano propitiari rogaret. Si autem violentior aura insisteret, jam clauso codice procideret in D faciem, atque obnixius orationi incumberet. At si procella fortior, aut nimbus perurgeret, vel etiam corusci ac tonitrua terras et aera terrerent; tunc veniens ad ecclesiam sollicitus orationibus ac psalmis, donec serenitas aeris rediret, fixa mente vacaret. Cumque interrogaretur a suis, quare hoc faceret; respondebat: ‘Non legistis, [a]quia intonuit de cælo [6]Dominus, et Altissimus dedit vocem suam. Misit sagittas suas, et dissipavit eos, fulgura multiplicavit, et conturbavit eos. Movet enim aera Dominus, ventos excitat, jaculatur fulgura, de cælo intonat, ut terrigenas ad timendum se suscitet, ut corda eorum in memoriam futuri judicii revocet, ut superbiam eorum dissipet, et conturbet audaciam, reducto ad mentem tremendo illo tempore, [7]quando ipse cælis ac terris ardentibus, venturus est in nubibus potestate magna et majestate ad judicandos vivos
E et mortuos. Propter quod,’ inquit, ‘oportet nos admonitioni ejus cælesti, debito cum timore et amore respondere; ut quoties aere commoto, manum quasi ad feriendum minitans exerit, nec adhuc tamen percutit, mox imploremus ejus misericordiam, et discussis penetralibus cordis nostri, atque expurgatis vitiorum ruderibus, solliciti ne unquam percuti mereamur, agamus.’

Interea Colmanus, qui de Scottia erat episcopus, relinquens Brittaniam, tulit secum omnes quos in Lindisfarnensium insula congregaverat Scottos: sed et de gente Anglorum viros circiter triginta, qui utrique monachicæ conversationis erant studiis imbuti. Et relictis in ecclesia sua fratribus aliquot, primo venit ad insulam Hii, unde erat ad prædicandum verbum [8]Anglorum genti destinatus. Deinde secessit ad insulam quandam parvam, quæ ad Occidentalem plagam ab Hibernia procul secreta, sermone Scottico [a]Inisboufinde, id est, 'Insula Vitulæ albæ,' nuncupatur. In hanc ergo perveniens, construxit monasterium, et monachos inibi, quos de utraque natione collectos adduxerat, collocavit. Qui cum invicem concordare non possent, eo quod Scotti tempore æstatis quo fruges erant colligendæ, relicto monasterio per nota sibi loca dispersi vagarentur; at vero hieme succedente redirent, et his quæ Angli præparaverant, communiter uti [9]desiderarent: quæsivit Colmanus huic dissensioni remedium, et circumiens

A omnia, prope vel longe, invenit locum in Hibernia insula, aptum monasterio construendo, qui lingua Scottorum [a]Mageo nominatur; emitque partem ejus non grandem, ad construendum ibi monasterium, a comite ad cujus possessionem pertinebat: ea conditione addita, ut pro ipso etiam qui eis locum commodaret, consistentes ibi monachi Domino preces offerrent. Et constructo statim monasterio, juvante etiam comite ac vicinis omnibus, Anglos ibidem [1]locavit, relictis in præfata insula Scottis. Cap. V. De morte Osuiu et Ecgbercti regum; et de synodo facta ad locum Herutforda, cui præsidebat archiepiscopus Theodorus.

Anno Dominicæ Incarnationis sexcentesimo septuagesimo, qui est annus secundus ex quo Brittanniam venit Theodorus, Osuiu rex Nordanhymbrorum pressus est infirmitate, qua et mortuus est anno ætatis suæ quinquagesimo octavo, qui in tantum eo tempore tenebatur amore Romanæ et apostolicæ institutionis, ut si ab infirmitate salvaretur, etiam Romam venire, ibique ad loca sancta vitam finire disponeret; Uilfridumque episcopum ducem sibi itineris fieri, promissa non parva pecuniarum donatione, rogaret. Qui defunctus die de-

'In nomine Domini Dei et Salvatoris nostri Jesu Christi, regnante in perpetuum, ac gubernante suam ecclesiam eodem Domino nostro Jesu Christo, placuit convenire nos, juxta morem canonum venerabilium, tractaturos de necessariis ecclesiæ negotiis. Convenimus autem die vigesima quarta mensis Septembris, Indictione [c]prima, in loco qui dicitur [5]Herutford. Ego quidem
D Theodorus, quamvis indignus, ab apostolica sede destinatus Doruvernensis ecclesiæ episcopus; et consacerdos ac frater noster reverentissimus Bisi Orientalium Anglorum episcopus: quibus etiam frater et consacerdos noster Uilfrid Nordanhymbrorum gentis episcopus per proprios legatarios adfuit. Adfuerunt et fratres ac consacerdotes nostri, Putta episcopus Castelli Cantuariorum quod dicitur Hrofescæstir, Leutherius episcopus Occidentalium Saxonum, Uynfrid episcopus provinciæ Merciorum. Cumque in unum convenientes juxta ordinem quique suum resedissemus: Rogo, inquam, dilectissimi fratres, propter timorem et amorem Redemptoris nostri, ut in commune omnes pro nostra fide tractemus: ut quæque decreta ac definita sunt a sanctis et probabilibus patribus, Concilium Herutford. Cumque explessem prælocutionem, interrogavi unumquemque eorum per ordinem, si consentirent, ea quæ a patribus canonice sunt antiquitus decreta, custodire. [a] Non puto hunc fuisse librum aliquem peculiarem a Theodoro compositum, sed collectionem canonum ecclesiæ in concilio Calcedonensi approbatam, et a Dionysio Exiguo non diu antea in Latinum sermonem traductam, et in Ecclesiam Occidentalem receptam. Theodorus enim rogato fratrum consensu, non ad novellas aliquas constitutiones a se formatas, sed ad ea quæ a patribus canonice sunt antiquitus decreta, protulit eundem librum canonum, nulla alterius mentione facta, et ex 'eodem libro decem capitula, quæ per loca notaverat.' Tantum abfuit a libro novo canonum componendo, ut antiquos e libro canones vix exscripserit quidem. S.

Facta est autem hæc synodus anno ab Incarnatione Domini sexcentesimo septuagesimo tertio, quo anno rex Cantuariorum Ecgberct mense Julio obierat, succedente in regnum fratre Hlothere, quod ipse annos undecim et menses septem tenuit. [a]Bisi autem episcopus Orientalium Anglorum, qui in [4]præfato synodo fuisse perhibetur, ipse erat successor Bonifacii, cujus supra [×]meminimus, vir multæ sanctitatis et religionis. Nam Bonifacio post decem et septem episcopatus sui annos defuncto, episcopus [5]ipse pro eo, Theodoro ordinante, factus est. Quo adhuc superstite, sed gravissima infirmitate ab administrando episcopatu prohibito, duo sunt pro illo, Aecci, et Baduvini, electi et consecrati episcopi: ex quo usque hodie provincia illa duos habere solet episcopos.

Verum si quis ejusce temporis res gestas ac consilia perpendat non alia ratione factum inveniet, quam quod sedem suam in plures dividendam non concederet. Licet enim Theodorus in concilio de augendo numero episcopatuum ad 'præsens siluerit,' fixum tamen id animo habuisse, tum capitulum nonum de eo propositum, tum ecclesiæ necessitas satis demonstrant. Visio de cœmeterio Berecing.

In hoc etenim monasterio plura virtutum sunt signa patrata, quæ et ad memoriam ædificationemque sequentium, ab his qui novere, descripta habentur a multis: e quibus et nos aliqua Historiæ nostræ Ecclesiasticæ inserere curavimus. Cum tempestas sæpe dictæ cladis late cuncta depopulans, etiam partem monasterii hujus illam qua viri tenebantur, invasisset, et passim quotidie raperentur ad Dominum; sollicita mater congregationis, qua hora etiam eam monasterii partem, qua ancillarum Dei caterva a virorum erat secreta contubernio, eadem plaga tangeret, crebrius in conventu sororum perquirere cœpit quo [2] loci in monasterio corpora sua poni et cimiterium fieri vellent, cum eas eodem quo cæteros exterminio raptari e mundo contingeret. Cumque nihil certi responsi, tametsi sæpius inquirens, a sororibus accepisset, accepit ipsa cum omnibus cer- C tissimum Supernæ [3] provisionis responsum. Cum enim nocte quadam expletis matutinæ laudis psalmodiis, egressæ de oratorio famulæ Christi, ad sepulcra fratrum, qui eas ex hac luce præcesserant, solitas Domino laudes decantarent, ecce subito lux emissa cælitus, veluti linteum magnum venit super omnes, tantoque eas stupore perculit, ut etiam canticum quod canebant tremefactæ inter-

Ipse autem splendor emissæ lucis, in cujus comparatione sol meridianus videri posset obscurus, non multo post illo elevatus de loco, in meridianam monasterii partem, hoc est, ad occidentem oratorii secessit, ibique aliquandiu remoratus et ea loca operiens, sic videntibus cunctis ad cæli se alta subduxit; ut nulli esset dubium, quin ipsa lux quæ animas famularum Christi esset ductura vel susceptura in cælis, etiam corporibus earum locum in quo [4] requietura, D et diem resurrectionis essent [5] exspectatura, monstraret. Cujus radius lucis tantus [6] exstitit, ut quidam de fratribus senior qui [7] ipsa hora in oratorio eorum cum alio juniore positus fuerat, referret mane, quod [8] ingressi per rimas ostiorum vel fenestrarum radii lucis, omnem diurni luminis viderentur superare fulgorem.

A prio eam nomine quasi præsentem alloquens, ‘Eadgyd, Eadgyd, Eadgyd;’ et sic terminans temporalem vitam, intravit æternam. At virgo illa quam moriens vocabat, mox in loco quo erat, eadem adtacta infirmitate, ipso quo [1]vocata est die de hac luce subtracta, et illum qui se vocavit ad regnum cæleste secuta est.

Item quædam ex eisdem ancillis Dei cum præfato tacta morbo, atque ad extrema esset perducta, cœpit subito circa mediam noctem clamare his [2]quæ sibi ministrabant, petens ut lucernam quæ inibi accensa erat, exstinguerent: quod cum [3]frequenti voce repeteret, nec tamen ei aliquis obtemperaret, ad extremum intulit: ‘Scio quod me hæc insana mente loqui arbitramini; sed jam nunc non ita esse cognoscite: nam vere dico vobis, quod domum hanc tanta
B luce impletam esse perspicio, ut vestra illa lucerna mihi omnimodis esse videatur obscura.’ Et cum ne adhuc quidem talia loquenti quisquam responderet, vel adsensum præberet, iterum dixit: ‘Accendite ergo lucernam illam, quam diu vultis; attamen scitote quia non est mea[4]: nam mea lux, incipiente aurora, mihi adventura est.’ Cœpitque narrare quia apparuerit sibi quidam vir [5]Dei qui eodem anno fuerat defunctus, dicens quod adveniente diluculo perennem esset exitura ad lucem. Cujus veritas visionis [6]cita circa exortum diei puellæ morte probata est.

Cap. IX. Quæ sint ostensa cælitus signa, cum et ipsa mater congregationis illius e mundo transiret.

C Cum autem et ipsa mater pia Deo devotæ congregationis Aedilburga esset rapienda de mundo, apparuit visio miranda cuidam de sororibus, cui nomen erat Torctgyd, quæ multis jam annis in eodem monasterio commorata, et ipsa semper in omni humilitate ac sinceritate Deo servire satagebat, et adjutrix disciplinæ regularis eidem matri existere, minores docendo vel castigando curabat. Cujus ut virtus juxta apostolum in infirmitate perficeretur, tacta est repente gravissimo corporis morbo, et per annos novem pia Redemptoris nostri provisione multum fatigata: videlicet ut quicquid in ea vitii sordidantis inter virtutes per ignorantiam vel incuriam resedisset, totum hoc caminus diutinæ tribulationis excoqueret. Hæc [7]ergo quadam nocte incipiente crepusculo, egressa de cubiculo quo manebat, vidit manifeste quasi corpus hominis, quod esset sole
D clarius, sindone involutum in sublime ferri, elatum videlicet de domo in qua sorores pausare solebant. Cumque diligentius intueretur, quo trahente levaretur sursum hæc quam contemplabatur species corporis gloriosi, vidit quod quasi funibus auro clarioribus in superna tolleretur, donec cælis patentibus introducta, amplius ab illa videri non potuit. Nec dubium remansit cogitanti de visione, quin aliquis de illa congregatione citius esset moriturus, cujus anima per bona quæ fecisset opera, quasi per funes aureos levanda esset ad cælos: quod revera ita contigit. Nam non multis interpositis diebus, Deo dilecta mater congregationis ipsius, ergastulo carnis educta est; cujus talem fuisse constat vitam, ut nemo qui eam noverit, dubitare debeat quin ei exeunti de hac vita cælestis patriæ patuerit ingressus.

Visio de obitu S. Aedilburgæ. A. 676.

E In eodem quoque monasterio quædam erat femina sanctimonialis, et ad sæculi hujus dignitatem nobilis et in amore futuri sæculi nobilior: quæ ita multis jam annis omni corporis fuerat officio destituta, ut ne unum quidem movere ipsa membrum valeret. Hæc ubi corpus abbatissæ venerabilis in ecclesiam delatum, donec sepulturæ daretur, cognovit, postulavit se illo afferri, et in modum orantium ad illud adclinari. Quod dum fieret, quasi viventem adlocuta, rogavit, ut apud misericordiam pii Conditoris impetraret se a tantis tamque diutinis cruciatibus absolvi. Nec multo tardius exaudita est: nam post dies duodecim, et ipsa educta ex carne, [8]temporales adflictiones' æterna mercede mutavit.

Apparitio Aedilburgæ ad Torctgydam.

Cum vero præfata Christi famula Torctgyd tres adhuc annos post obitum dominæ in hac vita teneretur, in tantum ea quam prædiximus infirmitate decocta est, ut vix ossibus hæreret, et ad ultimum, cum tempus jam resolutionis ejus instaret, non solum membrorum cæterorum, sed et linguæ motu caruit. Quod dum tribus diebus [1]et totidem noctibus ageretur, subito visione spiritali recreata, os et oculos aperuit; [2]aspectansque in cælum, sic ad eam quam intuebatur visionem, cœpit loqui: 'Gratus mihi est multum adventus tuus, et bene venisti:' Et hoc dicto, parumper reticuit, quasi responsum ejus quem videbat, et cui loquebatur, exspectans. Rursumque quasi leviter indignata subjunxit: 'Nequaquam hoc læta ferre [3]queo.' Rursumque modicum silens, tertio dixit: 'Si nullatenus hodie fieri potest, obsecro ne sit longum spatium in medio.' [4]Dixit; et sicut antea, parum silens, ita sermonem conclusit: 'Si omnimodis ita definitum est, neque hanc sententiam licet immutari, obsecro ne amplius quam hæc solummodo proxima nox intersit.' Quibus dictis, interrogata a circumsedentibus, cum quo loqueretur: 'Cum carissima,' inquit, 'mea matre Aedilberge.' Ex quo intellexere quod ipsa ei tempus suæ transmigrationis in proximum nunciare venisset. Nam et ita ut rogabat, transacta una die ac nocte, soluta carnis simul et infirmitatis vinculis, ad æternæ gaudia salutis intravit.

Cap. X. Ut ad cymiterium ejusdem monasterii orans cæca [5]lumen receperit.

Hildilid abbatissa in Berecingum.

Successit autem Aedilburgi in officio abbatissæ devota Deo famula, nomine Hildilid, multisque annis, id est, usque ad ultimam senectutem eidem monasterio strenuissime, in observantia disciplinæ regularis, et in earum quæ ad communes usus pertinent rerum providentia præfuit. Cui cum propter angustiam loci in quo monasterium constructum est, placuisset ut ossa famulorum famularumque Christi quæ ibidem fuerant tumulata, tollerentur, et transferrentur omnia in ecclesiam beatæ Dei Genitricis, unoque conderentur in loco: quoties ibi claritas luminis cælestis, quanta sæpe fragrantia mirandi apparuerit odoris, quæ alia sint signa ostensa, in ipso libro de quo hæc excerpsimus, quisque legerit, inveniet.

Sane nullatenus prætereundum arbitror miraculum sanitatis, quod ad ipsum cymiterium Deo dicatæ congregationis factum idem libellus [a]refert. Erat quippe in proximo comes quidam, cujus uxor ingruente oculis caligine subita, tantum per dies eadem molestia crebrescente gravata est, ut ne minimam quidem lucis ălicujus posset particulam videre. Cui dum aliquandiu cæcitatis hujus nocte clausa maneret, repente venit in mentem, quia si ad monasterium [6]delata virginum sanctimonialium, ad reliquias sanctorum peteret, perditam posset [7]recipere lucem. Nec distulit quin continuo, quod mente conceperat, [8]expleret. Perducta namque a puellis suis [9]ad monasterium, quia in proximo erat, ubi fidem suæ sanationis integram se habere professa est, introducta est [10]ad cymiterium: et cum ibidem diutius flexis genibus oraret, nihilo tardius meruit exaudiri. Nam exsurgens ab oratione, priusquam exiret de loco, petitæ lucis gratiam recepit: et quæ famularum manibus adducta fuerat, ipsa libero pedum incessu domum læta reversa est; quasi ad hoc solummodo lucem amitteret temporalem, ut quanta sanctos Christi lux in cælis, quæ gratia virtutis possideret, sua sanatione demonstraret.

A præferens, quam et olim jam, si non obstinatus conjugis animus divortium negaret, relicto regno subiisset. Unde [1]multis visum et sæpe dictum est, quia talis animi virum, episcopum magis quam regem ordinari deceret. Cumque annos triginta in regno miles [2]regni cælestis exegisset, correptus est corporis infirmitate permaxima, qua et mortuus est: ammonuitque conjugem, ut vel tunc divino se servitio pariter manciparent, cum amplius pariter mundum amplecti, vel potius mundo servire non possent. Quod dum ægre impetraret ab ea, venit ad antistitem Lundoniæ civitatis, vocabulo [a]Ualdheri, qui Erconvaldo successerat; et per ejus benedictionem, habitum religionis quem diu [3]desiderabat, accepit. Attulit autem eidem et summam pecuniæ non parvam, pauperibus erogandam, [4]nil omnimodis sibi reservans; sed pauper spiritu magis

Qui cum ingravescente præfata ægritudine, diem sibi mortis imminere sensisset, timere cœpit homo animi regalis, ne ad mortem veniens tanto adfectus dolore, aliquid indignum suæ personæ, vel ore proferret vel aliorum motu gereret membrorum. Unde accito ad se præfato urbis Lundoniæ in qua tunc ipse manebat, episcopo, rogavit ne plures eo moriente quam ipse episcopus et duo sui ministri adessent. Quod [5]dum episcopus libentissime se facturum promitteret, non multo post idem vir Dei, dum membra sopori dedisset, vidit visionem consolatoriam, quæ omnem ei anxietatem memoratæ solicitudinis auferret; insuper et qua die esset hanc vitam terminaturus, ostenderet. Vidit enim, ut post ipse referebat, tres ad se venisse viros claro indutos habitu; quorum
C unus residens ante lectulum ejus, stantibus his qui secum [6]advenerant comitibus, et interrogantibus de statu ejus quem languentem visitare [7]venerant, dixit quod anima ejus, et sine ullo dolore, et cum magno lucis splendore esset egressura de corpore: sed et tertium exinde diem quo esset moriturus insinuavit. Quod ita utrumque ut ex visione didicit completum est. Nam die dehinc tertio completa hora nona, subito quasi leviter obdormiens, sine ullo sensu doloris emisit spiritum.

Cujus corpori tumulando præparaverant sarcofagum lapideum: sed cum huic corpus imponere cœpissent, invenerunt hoc mensura palmi longius esse sarcofago. Dolantes ergo lapidem in quantum valebant, addiderunt longitudini sarcofagi quasi duorum mensuram digitorum. Sed nec sic quidem corpus capiebat.
D Unde facta difficultate tumulandi, cogitabant aut [8]aliud quærere loculum, aut ipsum corpus, si possent, in genibus inflectendo breviare, donec ipso loculo caperetur. Sed mira res, et non nisi cælitus facta, ne aliquid horum fieri deberet, prohibuit. Nam subito adstante episcopo, et filio regis ejusdem ac [9]monachi Sighardo, qui post illum cum fratre Suefredo regnavit, et turba hominum non modica, inventum est sarcofagum illud congruæ longitudinis ad mensuram corporis, adeo ut a parte capitis etiam cervical posset interponi; a parte vero pedum, mensura quatuor digitorum in sarcofago corpus excederet. Conditus est autem in ecclesia beati [b]Doctoris gentium, cujus edoctus monitis cælestia sperare didicerat.

docuit eos piscando victum quærere. Namque mare et flumina eorum piscibus abundabant; sed piscandi peritia genti nulla nisi ad anguillas tantum inerat. Hunc ergo locum cum accepisset episcopus Uilfrid, fundavit ibi monasterium, ac regulari vita instituit, maxime ex his quos secum adduxerat fratribus: quod usque hodie successores ejus tenere noscuntur. Nam A. 685. ipse illis in partibus annos quinque, id est, usque ad mortem Ecgfridi regis, merito omnibus honorabilis, officium episcopatus et verbo exercebat et opere. Et quoniam illi rex cum [2] præfata loci possessione, omnes [3] qui ibidem erant, facultates cum agris et hominibus donavit, omnes fide Christi institutos, unda baptismatis abluit; inter quos, servos et ancillas ducentos quinquaginta: quos omnes [4] ut baptizando a servitute dæmonica salvavit, [5] etiam [6] libertate donando humanæ jugo servitutis absolvit. Osualdi miraculum in peste Selaeseu. In quo tunc monasterio nonnulla cælestis gratiæ dona [7] specialiter ostensa fuisse [8] perhibentur; utpote ubi nuper expulsa diaboli tyrannide Christus jam regnare cœperat: e quibus unum quod mihi reverentissimus [9] antistes Acca sæpius referre, et a fidelissimis ejusdem monasterii fratribus sibi relatum asserere solebat, memoriæ mandare commodum duximus. Eodem ferme tempore quo ipsa provincia nomen Christi susceperat, multas Brittaniæ provincias mortalitas sæva corripiebat, quæ cum præfatum quoque monasterium, cui tunc regendo religiosissimus Christi sacerdos, vocabulo Eappa, præfuit, nutu Divinæ dispensationis attingeret; multique sive de his qui cum antistite illo venerant, sive de illis qui de eadem provincia Saxonum nuper ad fidem fuerant vocati, passim de hac vita raperentur; visum est fratribus triduanum jejunium agere, et Divinam [10] suppliciter obsecrare clementiam, ut misericordiam sibi dignaretur impendere, [11] et sive periclitantes hoc morbo a præsenti morte liberaret, seu raptos e mundo a perpetua animæ damnatione servaret. A simi apostolorum Principes dignati sunt apparere. Erat enim puer multum simplicis ac mansueti animi, sinceraque devotione sacramenta fidei quæ susceperat servans. Salutantes ergo illum verbis piissimis apostoli dicebant: ‘Noli timere, fili, mortem pro qua sollicitus es: nos enim te hodierna die ad cælestia sumus regna perducturi. Sed primum expectare habes donec missæ celebrentur, ac viatico Dominici corporis ac sanguinis accepto, sic infirmitate simul et morte absolutus ad æterna in cælis gaudia subleveris. Clama ergo ad te presbyterum Eappan, et dicito illi quia Dominus exaudivit preces vestras, et devotionem ac jejunia propitius aspexit: neque aliquis de hoc monasterio, sive [1]adjacentibus ei possessiunculis hac clade ultra moriturus est; sed omnes qui alicubi de vestris hac ægritudine laborant, resurrecturi a languore, [2]pristina sunt [3]sos-
B pitate recuperandi, præter te solum qui hodierna es die liberandus a morte, et ad visionem Domini Christi cui fideliter servisti, perducendus in cælum: quod Divina vobis misericordia, per intercessionem religiosi ac Deo dilecti regis Osualdi, qui quondam genti Nordanhymbrorum et regni temporalis auctoritate et Christianæ pietatis, quæ ad regnum perenne ducit, devotione sublimiter præfuit, conferre dignata est. Hac etenim die idem rex ab infidelibus in bello corporaliter extinctus, mox ad sempiterna animarum gaudia adsumptus in cælum et electorum est sociatus agminibus. Quærant in suis codicibus in quibus defunctorum est adnotata depositio, et invenient illum hac, ut diximus, die raptum esse de sæculo. Celebrent ergo missas per cuncta monasterii oratoria hujus, sive ‘pro gratiarum actione’ exauditæ suæ deprecationis, sive etiam in memo-
C riam præfati regis Osualdi, qui quondam ipsorum genti præerat. Ideoque pro eis quasi pro suæ gentis advenis supplex orabat ad Dominum: et cunctis convenientibus ad ecclesiam fratribus, communicent omnes sacrificiis cælestibus, et ita soluto jejunio corpus quoque suis reficiant alimentis.’

Quæ cum omnia vocato ad se presbytero puer verba narrasset, interrogavit eum sollicitus quales essent habitu vel specie viri qui sibi apparuissent. Respondit: ‘Præclari omnino habitus et vultus erant, lætissimi ac pulcherrimi, quales nunquam ante videram, neque aliquos hominum tanti decoris ac venustatis esse posse credebam. Unus quidem attonsus erat ut clericus, alius barbam habebat prolixam: dicebantque quod unus eorum Petrus, alius vocaretur Paulus: et ipsi essent ministri Domini et Salvatoris nostri Jesu Christi,
D ad tuitionem nostri monasterii missi ab ipso de cælis.’ Credidit ergo verbis pueri presbyter, ac statim egressus [5]requisivit in annali suo, et invenit eadem ipsa die Osualdum regem fuisse peremptum: vocatisque fratribus, parari prandium, missas fieri, atque omnes communicare more solito præcepit: simul et infirmanti puero, de eodem sacrificio Dominicæ oblationis particulam deferri mandavit.

Quibus ita gestis, non multo post, eadem ipsa die puer defunctus est, suaque morte probavit vera fuisse verba quæ ab apostolis Christi audierat. Sed et hoc ejus verbis testimonium perhibuit, quod nemo præter ipsum tempore illo ex eodem est monasterio raptus de mundo; ex qua nimirum visione multi qui hæc audire potuerunt [6]ad exorandam in adversis Divinam clemen-
E tiam, et ad salutaria jejuniorum remedia subeunda sunt mirabiliter accensi: et [a]ex eo tempore non solum in eodem monasterio, sed et in plerisque locis aliis, cœpit annuatim ejusdem regis ac militis Christi natalitius dies missarum celebratione venerari. Dies S. Osualdi.

Cap. XVII. De synodo facta in campo [7] Haethfelda, præsidente archiepiscopo Theodoro.

His temporibus [b] audiens Theodorus fidem ecclesiæ Constantinopoli per hæresim Eutychetis multum esse turbatam, et ecclesias Anglorum quibus præerat ab hujusmodi labe immunes perdurare desiderans, collecto venerabilium sacerdotum doctorumque plurimorum cœtu, cujus essent fidei singuli sedulus C inquirebat, omniumque unanimem in fide catholica reperit consensum: et hunc synodalibus literis ad instructionem memoriamque sequentium commendare curavit, quarum videlicet literarum istud exordium est: A. 680. Synodus Haethfelth.

'In nomine Domini nostri Jesu Christi Salvatoris, imperantibus dominis piissimis nostris Ecgfrido rege Hymbronensium, anno decimo regni ejus, sub die quintadecima Kalendas Octobres, Indictione octava; et Aedilredo rege Mercinensium, anno sexto regni ejus; et [8] Alduulfo rege [9] Estranglorum, anno decimo septimo regni ejus; et Hlothario rege Cantuariorum, regni ejus anno septimo: [c] præsidente Theodoro, gratia Dei archiepiscopo Brittaniæ insulæ, et civitatis Doruvernis; una cum eo sedentibus cæteris episcopis Brittaniæ insulæ viris venerabilibus, præpositis sacrosanctis evangeliis, in loco qui Saxonico vocabulo D [10] Haethfelth[×] nominatur, pariter tractantes, fidem rectam et orthodoxam exposuimus; sicut Dominus noster Jesus [11] Christus incarnatus tradidit discipulis suis, qui præsentialiter viderunt et audierunt sermones ejus, atque sanctorum patrum tradidit symbolum, et generaliter omnes sancti et universales synodi, et omnis probabilium catholicæ ecclesiæ doctorum chorus. Hos itaque sequentes nos pie atque orthodoxe, juxta divinitus inspiratam doctrinam eorum professi credimus consonanter, et confitemur secundum sanctos patres, proprie et veraciter Patrem et Filium et Spiritum Sanctum Trinitatem in Unitate consubstantialem, et Unitatem in Trinitate, hoc est, unum Deum in tribus subsistentiis vel personis consubstantialibus, æqualis gloriæ et honoris.' A ediscceret, Romamque rediens referret. Nam et synodum beati papæ Martini, centum quinque episcoporum consensu non multo ante Romæ celebratam, contra eos maxime qui unam in Christo operationem et voluntatem prædicabant, secum veniens attulit; atque in præfato religiosissimi abbatis Benedicti monasterio transscribendam commodavit. Tales namque eo tempore, fidem Constantinopolitanæ ecclesiæ multum [1]conturbaverunt; sed Domino donante proditi jam tunc et victi sunt. Unde volens Agatho papa, sicut in aliis provinciis, ita etiam in Brittania qualis esset status ecclesiæ, quam ab hæreticorum contagiis castus, ediscere; hoc negotium reverentissimo abbati Johanni Brittaniam destinato injunxit. Quamobrem collecta pro hoc in Brittania synodo quam diximus, inventa est in omnibus fides inviolata catholica: datumque illi exem-

Verum ille patriam revertens, non multo postquam oceanum transiit, arreptus infirmitate, ac defunctus est: corpusque ejus ab amicis propter amorem S. Martini cujus monasterio præerat, Turonis delatum, atque honorifice sepultum est. Nam et benigno ecclesiæ illius hospitio, cum Brittaniam iret, exceptus est: rogatusque multum a fratribus, ut Romam revertens, illo itinere veniret, atque ad eam diverteret ecclesiam. Denique ibidem adjutores itineris et injuncti operis accepit: qui etsi in itinere defunctus est, nihilominus exemplum catholicæ fidei Anglorum Romam perlatum est, atque ab apostolico papa omnibusque qui audiere vel legere, gratantissime susceptum.

Alia fuit ejusdem nominis et monasterii abbatissa A. 870 quæ naribus labioque abscissis furorem Danicum evasit, et reliquas sorores ad suum exemplum induxit. Bedæ autem Aebba vixit tempore S. Cap. XXI. Ut Theodorus episcopus inter Ecgfridum et Aedilredum reges pacem fecerit.

A. 679. Ecgfridi et Aedilredi pugna.

Anno regni Ecgfridi nono, conserto gravi prælio inter ipsum et Aedilredum regem Merciorum juxta fluvium Treanta, [a]occisus est Aelfuini frater regis Ecgfridi, juvenis circiter decem et octo annorum utrique provinciæ multum amabilis. Nam et [b]sororem ejus quæ dicebatur Osthryd, rex Aedilred habebat uxorem. Cumque materies belli acrioris et inimicitiæ longioris inter reges, populosque feroces videretur exorta, Theodorus Deo dilectus antistes divino [3]functus auxilio, salutifera exhortatione cœptum tanti periculi funditus exstinguit incendium: adeo ut pacatis alterutrum regibus ac populis, nullius anima hominis pro interfecto regis fratre, sed debita solummodo [4]multa pecuniæ regi ultori daretur. Cujus fœdera pacis multo exinde tempore inter eosdem reges, eorumque regna durarunt.

Pax per Theodorum.

A CAP. XXII. UT VINCULA CUJUSDAM CAPTIVI, CUM PRO EO MISSÆ CANTARENTUR, SOLUTA SINT.

In præfato autem prælio quo occisus est rex Aelfuini, memorabile quoddam factum esse constat, quod nequaquam silentio prætereundum arbitror, sed multorum saluti, si referatur, fore proficuum. Occisus est ibi inter alios, de militia ejus juvenis, vocabulo Imma, qui cum die illo et nocte sequenti inter cadavera occisorum similis mortuo jaceret, tandem recepto spiritu revixit, ac residens sua vulnera, prout potuit, ipse alligavit: [1]dein modicum requietus levavit se, et cœpit abire sicubi amicos qui sui curam agerent, posset invenire. Quod dum faceret, inventus est, et captus a viris hostilis exercitus, et ad dominum ipsorum, comitem videlicet Aedilredi regis, adductus: a quo interrogatus quis esset, B timuit se militem fuisse confiteri; rusticum se potius et pauperem, atque uxoreo vinculo conligatum fuisse respondit; et propter victum militibus adferendum in expeditionem se cum [2]suis similibus venisse testatus est. At ille suscipiens eum, curam vulneribus egit; et ubi [3]sanescere cœpit, noctu eum ne aufugeret, vinciri præcepit. Nec tamen vinciri potuit: nam mox ut abiere qui vinxerant, eadem ejus sunt vincula soluta.

Habebat enim germanum fratrem cui nomen erat Tunna, presbyterum et abbatem monasterii in civitate quæ hactenus ab ejus nomine [a]Tunnacaestir cognominatur: qui cum eum in pugna peremptum audiret, venit quærere si forte corpus ejus invenire posset, inventumque alium illi per omnia simillimum, putavit ipsum esse: quem ad monasterium suum deferens, honorifice sepelivit, C et pro absolutione animæ ejus sæpius missas facere curavit. Quarum celebratione factum est quod dixi, ut nullus eum posset vincire, quin continuo solveretur. Interea comes qui eum tenebat, mirari, et interrogare cœpit quare ligari non posset, an forte [b]literas solutorias de qualibus fabulæ ferunt, apud se haberet, propter quas ligari non posset. At ille respondit, nihil se talium artium nosse; 'sed habeo fratrem,' inquit, 'presbyterum in mea provincia, et scio quia ille me interfectum putans, pro me missas [4]crebras facit: et si nunc in alia vita essem, ibi anima mea per intercessiones ejus solveretur a pœnis.' Dumque aliquanto tempore apud comitem teneretur, animadverterunt qui eum diligentius considerabant, ex vultu et habitu et sermonibus ejus, quia non erat de paupere vulgo, ut dixerat, sed de nobilibus. Tunc secreto advocans eum comes, D interrogavit eum intentius unde esset, promittens se nihil ei mali facturum pro eo, si simpliciter sibi quis fuisset, proderet. Quod dum ille faceret, ministrum se regis fuisse manifestans, respondit: 'Et ego per singula tua responsa cognoveram quia rusticus non eras, et nunc dignus quidem es morte, [5]quia omnes fratres et cognati mei in illa sunt pugna interempti; nec te tamen occidam, ne fidem mei promissi prævaricer.

Ut ergo convaluit, vendidit eum Lundoniam [6]Freso cuidam; sed nec ab illo cum illuc duceretur ullatenus potuit alligari. Verum cum alia atque alia vinculorum ei genera hostes imponerent [7]cumque vidisset qui emerat, vinculis eum non potuisse cohiberi, donavit ei facultatem sese redimendi si posset. [8]A tertia autem hora quando missæ fieri solebant, sæpissime vincula solvebantur. At ille E dato jurejurando ut rediret vel pecuniam illi pro se mitteret, venit Cantiam ad

Hildæ obitus. A. 680. Anno [5]post hunc sequente, hoc est, anno Dominicæ Incarnationis sexcentesimo octogesimo, [6]religiosissima Christi famula Hild, abbatissa monasterii quod dicitur Streaneshalch, ut ^ supra retulimus, post multa quæ fecit in terris opera cælestia, ad percipienda præmia vitæ cælestis de terris ablata transivit die quinta-decima Kalendarum Decembrium, cum esset annorum sexaginta sex: quibus æqua [7]portione divisis, triginta tres primos in sæculari habitu nobilissime conversata complevit, et totidem sequentes nobilius in monachica vita Domino consecravit. Nam et nobilis natu erat, hoc est, filia nepotis [a]Aeduini regis, vocabulo Hererici: cum quo etiam rege, ad prædicationem beatæ memoriæ Paulini, primi Nordanhymbrorum episcopi, fidem et sacramenta Christi suscepit, atque hæc usquedum ad ejus visionem pervenire meruit, intemerata servavit.

Secessus ad Or. Angl. A. 648. Quæ cum relicto habitu sæculari, Illi soli servire decrevisset, secessit ad provinciam Orientalium Anglorum: erat namque propinqua regis illius, desiderans exinde, si quo modo posset, derelicta patria et omnibus quæcumque habuerat, [8]in Galliam pervenire, atque in monasterio Cale peregrinam pro Domino vitam ducere, quo facilius perpetuam in cælis patriam posset mereri. Nam et in eodem monasterio soror ipsius [b]Heresuid, mater Alduulfi regis Orientalium Anglorum, regularibus subdita disciplinis, ipso tempore coronam exspectabat æternam: cujus æmulata exemplum, et ipsa proposito peregrinandi annum totum in [c]præfata provincia retenta est: deinde ab Aedano episcopo [9]in patriam revocata, accepit locum unius familiæ ad [d]Septentrionalem plagam Uiuri fluminis, ubi æque anno uno monachicam cum perpaucis sociis vitam agebat.

[d] Interiit, ut videtur, hic locus, nisi per eum intelligamus ecclesiam S. Hildæ cujus certa initia sunt sequiorum temporum, et quæ in Australi Tinæ fluminis potius quam septentrionali Uiuri plaga sita est. Non impossibile tamen est, quod sicut monasterium Gyruiense cum Uiremuthensi coaluit, non obstante parallela loci distantia, ita ecclesia hæc,

A Post hæc facta est abbatissa in monasterio quod vocatur [a] Heruteu; quod videlicet monasterium factum erat non multo ante a religiosa Christi famula [b] Heiu, quæ prima feminarum fertur in provincia Nordanhymbrorum propositum vestemque sanctimonialis habitus, consecrante Aedano episcopo, suscepisse. Sed illa post non multum tempus facti monasterii, secessit ad civitatem Calcariam quæ a gente Anglorum [1c] Kaelcacaestir' [c] appellatur, ibique sibi mansionem instituit. Prælata autem regimini monasterii illius famula Christi Hild, mox hoc regulari vita per omnia, prout a doctis viris discere poterat, ordinare curabat: nam et episcopus Aidan, et quique noverant eam religiosi, pro insita ei sapientia et amore divini famulatus, sedulo eam visitare, obnixe amare, diligenter erudire solebant.

B Cum ergo aliquot annos huic monasterio, regularis vitæ institutioni multum intenta præesset, contigit eam suscipere etiam construendum sive ordinandum monasterium in loco qui vocatur [d] Streaneshalch, quod opus sibi injunctum non segniter implevit. Nam eisdem quibus prius monasterium, etiam hoc disciplinis vitæ regularis instituit: et quidem [2] multam inibi quoque justitiæ, pietatis, et castimoniæ, cæterarumque virtutum, sed maxime pacis et caritatis custodiam docuit: ita ut in exemplum primitivæ ecclesiæ nullus ibi dives, nullus esset egens, omnibus essent omnia communia, cum nihil cujusquam esse videretur proprium. Tantæ autem erat ipsa prudentiæ, ut non solum mediocres quique in necessitatibus suis, sed etiam reges ac principes nonnunquam ab ea quærerent consilium, et invenirent. Tantum lectioni divinarum Scripturarum suos vacare subditos,

Streaneshalch. A. 658.

Denique quinque ex eodem monasterio postea episcopos vidimus, et hos omnes singularis meriti ac sanctitatis viros, quorum hæc sunt nomina, Bosa, Aetla, [3] Oftfor[e], Johannes, et Uilfrid. De primo supra diximus, quod Eboraci fuerit consecratus antistes: de secundo breviter intimandum, quod in episco-patum [4] Dorciccaestræ fuerit ordinatus: de ultimis infra dicendum est, quod eorum primus [5] Hagustaldensis, secundus Eboracensis ecclesiæ sit ordinatus episcopus. De medio nunc dicamus, quia cum in utroque Hildæ abbatissæ monasterio lectioni et observationi Scripturarum operam dedisset, tandem perfec-
D tiora desiderans, venit Cantiam ad archiepiscopum beatæ recordationis Theodorum: ubi postquam aliquandiu lectionibus sacris vacavit, etiam Romam adire curavit, quod eo [6] tempore magnæ virtutis æstimabatur: et inde cum rediens Brittaniam adiisset, divertit ad provinciam [7] Huicciorum cui tunc rex Osric præfuit; ibique verbum fidei prædicans, simul et exemplum vivendi sese videntibus atque

A sororum pausans, audivit subito in aere notum campanæ sonum, quo ad orationes excitari vel convocari solebant, cum quis eorum de sæculo fuisset evocatus: apertisque, ut sibi videbatur, oculis aspexit, detecto domus culmine, fusam desuper lucem omnia replevisse: cui videlicet luci [1] dum sollicita intenderet, vidit animam præfatæ Dei famulæ in ipsa luce comitantibus ac ducentibus angelis ad cælum ferri. Cumque somno excussa videret cæteras pausantes circa se sorores, intellexit vel in somnio vel in visione mentis ostensum sibi esse quod viderat. Statimque exsurgens nimio timore perterrita cucurrit ad virginem quæ tunc monasterio abbatissæ vice præfuit, cui nomen erat Frigyd, fletuque ac lacrymis multum perfusa, ac suspiria longa trahens nunciavit, matrem illarum omnium Hild abbatissam jam migrasse de sæculo, et se aspectante cum luce
B immensa ducibus angelis ad æternæ limina lucis et supernorum consortia civium ascendisse. Quod cum illa audisset, suscitavit cunctas sorores, et in ecclesiam convocatas, orationibus ac psalmis pro anima matris operam dare monuit. Quod cum residuo noctis tempore diligenter agerent, venerunt primo diluculo fratres qui ejus obitum nunciarent, a loco ubi defuncta est. At illæ respondentes dixerunt, se prius eadem cognovisse: et cum exponerent per ordinem quomodo hæc vel quando didicissent, inventum est, eadem hora transitum ejus illis ostensum esse per visionem, qua illam referebant exisse de mundo. Pulchraque rerum concordia procuratum est divinitus, ut cum illi exitum ejus de hac vita viderent, tunc isti introitum ejus in perpetuam animarum vitam cognoscerent. Distant autem inter se monasteria hæc tredecim ferme millibus passuum.

C Ferunt autem quod eadem nocte, in ipso quoque monasterio ubi præfata Dei famula obiit, cuidam virginum Deo devotarum quæ illam immenso amore diligebat, obitus illius in visione apparuerit, quæ animam ejus cum angelis ad cælum ire conspexerit, atque hoc ipsa qua factum est hora, his quæ secum erant [2]famulis Christi manifeste narraverit, easque ad orandum pro anima ejus, etiam priusquam cætera congregatio ejus obitum cognovisset, excitaverit. Quod ita fuisse factum mox congregationi mane facto innotuit. Erat enim hæc, ipsa hora cum aliis nonnullis Christi ancillis in extremis monasterii locis seorsum posita, ubi nuper venientes ad [3]conversationem feminæ solebant probari, donec regulariter institutæ in societatem congregationis susciperentur. Visio alia de eodem.

D CAP. XXIV. QUOD IN MONASTERIO EJUS [4]FUERIT FRATER, CUI' DONUM CANENDI SIT DIVINITUS CONCESSUM.

In hujus monasterio abbatissæ fuit frater quidam divina gratia specialiter insignis [5]quia carmina religioni et pietati apta facere solebat; ita ut quicquid ex divinis literis per interpretes disceret, hoc ipse post pusillum verbis poeticis maxima suavitate et compunctione compositis, in sua, id est, Anglorum lingua proferret. Cujus carminibus multorum sæpe animi ad contemptum sæculi, et [6]appetitum sunt vitæ cælestis accensi. Et quidem et alii post illum in gente Anglorum religiosa poemata facere tentabant; sed nullus [7]eum æquiparare' potuit. Namque ipse non ab hominibus, neque per hominem institutus canendi artem didicit; sed divinitus adjutus gratis canendi donum accepit. Unde nihil competenti membra dedisset sopori, adstitit ei quidam per somnium, eumque A salutans, ac suo appellans nomine: [a]'Caedmon,' inquit, 'canta mihi aliquid.' At ille [1]respondens, 'Nescio,' inquit, 'cantare; nam et ideo de convivio egressus huc secessi, quia cantare non poteram.' Rursum ille qui cum eo loquebatur, 'Attamen,' ait, 'mihi cantare habes.' 'Quid,' inquit, 'debeo cantare?' At ille, 'Canta,' inquit, 'principium creaturarum.' Quo accepto responso, statim ipse cœpit cantare in laudem Dei Conditoris versus, quos nunquam audierat, quorum iste est sensus: 'Nunc laudare debemus Auctorem regni cælestis, potentiam Creatoris, et consilium illius, facta Patris gloriæ. Quomodo Ille cum sit æternus Deus, omnium miraculorum auctor exstitit, qui primo filiis hominum cælum pro culmine tecti, dehinc terram Custos humani generis omnipotens creavit.' [b]Hic est sensus, non autem ordo ipse verborum quæ dormiens ille cane- B bat: neque enim possunt carmina, quamvis optime composita, ex alia in aliam linguam ad verbum sine detrimento sui decoris ac dignitatis transferri. Exsurgens autem a somno, cuncta quæ dormiens cantaverat, memoriter retinuit, et [2]eis mox plura in eundem modum verba Deo digni carminis adjunxit.
E unquam frivoli et supervacui poematis facere potuit; sed ea tantummodo quæ ad religionem pertinent, religiosam ejus linguam decebant. Siquidem in habitu sæculari usque ad tempora provectioris ætatis constitutus [8]nil carminum aliquando didicerat. Unde nonnunquam in convivio, cum esset lætitiæ causa ut omnes per ordinem cantare deberent, ille ubi adpropinquare sibi citharam cernebat, surgebat a media cœna et egressus ad suam domum repedabat. Caedmonis donum canendi.

Quod dum tempore quodam faceret, et relicta domo convivii egressus esset ad stabula jumentorum quorum ei custodia nocte illa erat delegata, ibique hora[9] Somnio revelatum.

Veniensque mane ad villicum qui sibi præerat, quid doni percepisset indicavit, atque ad abbatissam perductus, jussus est, multis doctioribus viris præsentibus, indicare somnium et dicere carmen, ut universorum judicio quid vel unde esset quod referebat, probaretur. Visumque est omnibus, cælestem ei a Domino concessam esse gratiam. Exponebantque illi quendam sacræ historiæ sive doctrinæ sermonem, præcipientes ei, si posset, hunc in modulationem carminis transferre. At ille suscepto negotio abiit, et mane rediens, optimo carmine C quod jubebatur, compositum reddidit. Unde mox abbatissa amplexata gratiam Dei in viro, sæcularem illum habitum relinquere, et monachicum [3]suscipere propositum docuit, susceptumque in monasterium cum omnibus suis fratrum cohorti adsociavit, jussitque illum seriem sacræ historiæ doceri. At ipse cuncta quæ audiendo discere poterat, rememorando secum et quasi mundum animal, ruminando, in carmen dulcissimum convertebat; suaviusque resonando, doctores suos vicissim auditores [4]sui faciebat. Canebat autem de creatione mundi, et origine humani generis, et tota Genesis historia, de egressu Israel [5]ex Aegypto et ingressu in terram repromissionis, de aliis plurimis sacræ Scripturæ historiis, de Incarnatione [6]Dominica, Passione, Resurrectione, et Ascensione in cælum, de Spiritus Sancti adventu, et Apostolorum doctrina. Item de terrore D futuri judicii, et horrore pœnæ gehennalis, ac dulcedine regni cælestis multa carmina faciebat; sed et alia perplura de beneficiis et judiciis divinis, in quibus cunctis homines ab amore scelerum abstrahere, ad dilectionem vero et sollertiam bonæ actionis excitare curabat. Erat enim vir multum religiosus, et regularibus disciplinis humiliter subditus; adversum vero illos qui aliter facere volebant, zelo magni fervoris accensus: unde et pulchro vitam suam fine conclusit.

Qua accepta [a]in manu, interrogavit, si omnes placidum erga se animum, et sine querela controversiæ ac rancoris haberent. Respondebant omnes, placidissimam se mentem ad illum, et ab omni ira remotam habere: eumque vicissim rogabant, [1]placidam erga ipsos mentem [2]habere. Qui confestim respondit: 'Placidam ego mentem, filioli, erga omnes Dei famulos gero.' Sicque se cælesti muniens viatico, vitæ alterius ingressui paravit; et interrogavit, quam prope esset hora qua fratres ad dicendas Domino laudes nocturnas excitari deberent. Cap. XXV. Qualis visio cuidam viro Dei apparuerit, priusquam monasterium Coludanæ urbis esset incendio consumptum.

A. 679. Incendium mon. Colud.

His temporibus monasterium virginum quod Coludi urbem cognominant, cujus et supra meminimus, per culpam incuriæ flammis absumptum est. Quod
C tamen a malitia inhabitantium in eo, et præcipue illorum qui majores esse videbantur contigisse, omnes qui novere facillime potuerunt advertere. Sed non defuit puniendis admonitio Divinæ pietatis, qua correcti, per jejunia, fletus et preces iram a se, instar Ninivitarum, justi Judicis averterent.

Adamnani visio de eodem.

Erat namque in eodem monasterio vir de genere Scottorum, [b]Adamnanus vocabulo, ducens vitam in continentia et orationibus multum Deo devotam, [5]ita ut nihil unquam cibi vel potus, [6]excepta die Dominica et quinta sabbati perciperet; sæpe autem noctes integras pervigil in oratione transigeret. Quæ quidem illi districtio vitæ arctioris, primo ex necessitate emendandæ suæ pravitatis obvenerat. Sed procedente tempore necessitatem in consuetudinem verterat.

Siquidem in adolescentia sua sceleris aliquid commiserat, quod commissum,
D ubi ad cor suum rediit, gravissime exhorruit, et se pro illo puniendum a districto Judice timebat. Accedens ergo ad sacerdotem a quo sibi sperabat iter salutis posse demonstrari, confessus est reatum suum, petiitque ut consilium sibi daret quo posset fugere a ventura [7]ira. Qui audito ejus commisso dixit: 'Grande vulnus grandioris curam medelæ desiderat: et ideo jejuniis, psalmis et orationibus, quantum vales, insiste, quo præoccupando faciem Domini in confessione propitium eum invenire merearis.' At ille quem nimius reæ conscientiæ tenebat dolor, et internis peccatorum vinculis quibus gravabatur, ocius desiderabat absolvi: 'Adolescentior sum,' inquit, 'ætate, et vegetus corpore: quidquid mihi imposueris agendum, dummodo salvus fiam in die Domini, totum facile

Revelatio de incendio. Quod dum multo tempore sedulus exsequeretur, contigit eum die quadam de monasterio illo longius egressum, comitante secum uno de fratribus, peracto itinere redire: qui cum monasterio propinquarent et ædificia illius sublimiter erecta aspicerent, solutus est in lacrymis vir Dei, et tristitiam cordis vultu indice prodebat. Quod intuens comes, quare faceret inquisivit. At ille: 'Cuncta,' inquit, 'hæc quæ cernis ædificia publica vel privata, in proximo est ut ignis absumens in cinerem convertat.' Quod ille audiens, mox ut intraverunt monas-turbata de tali præsagio vocavit ad se virum, et diligentius ab eo rem, vel unde hoc ipse nosset, inquirebat. Qui ait: 'Nuper occupatus noctu vigiliis et psalmis, vidi adstantem mihi subito quendam incogniti vultus: cujus præsentia cum essem exterritus, dixit mihi ne timerem; et quasi familiari me voce alloquens, Bene facis, inquit, qui tempore isto [6]nocturno quietis non somno indulgere, sed vigiliis et orationibus insistere [7]maluisti. At ego, Novi, [8]inquam, multum mihi esse necesse vigiliis salutaribus insistere, et pro meis erratibus sedulo Dominum deprecari. Qui adjiciens, Verum, inquit, dicis, quia [9]et tibi et multis opus est peccata sua bonis operibus redimere, et cum cessant a laboribus rerum temporalium, tunc pro appetitu æternorum bonorum liberius laborare; sed hoc tamen paucissimi faciunt. Nam et domunculæ quæ ad orandum vel legendum factæ erant, nunc in commessationum, potationum, fabulationum, et cæterarum sunt inlecebrarum cubilia conversæ. Virgines quoque Deo dicatæ, contempta reverentia suæ professionis, quotiescumque vacant, texendis subtilioribus indumentis operam dant, quibus aut seipsas ad vicem sponsarum in periculum sui status adornent, aut externorum sibi virorum amicitiam comparent. Unde merito loco huic et habitatoribus ejus gravis de cælo vindicta flammis sævientibus præparata est.' Dixit autem abbatissa: 'Et quare non citius hoc compertum mihi revelare volu- E

Qua divulgata visione aliquantulum loci accolæ paucis diebus timere, et seipsos intermissis facinoribus castigare cœperunt. Verum post obitum ipsius abbatissæ redierunt ad pristinas sordes, immo sceleratiora fecerunt. Et cum dicerent, Pax et securitas, extemplo præfatæ ultionis sunt pœna multati.

Cap. XXVI. De morte Ecgfridi et Hlotheri regum.

Anno Dominicæ Incarnationis sexcentesimo octogesimo quarto, Ecgfrid rex Nordanhymbrorum, misso [a]Hiberniam cum exercitu duce Bercto, vastavit B misere gentem innoxiam et nationi Anglorum semper amicissimam ; ita ut ne ecclesiis quidem, aut monasteriis manus parceret hostilis. At insulani, et quantum valuere, armis arma repellebant, et invocantes Divinæ auxilium pietatis, cælitus se vindicari continuis diu [2]imprecationibus postulabant. Et quamvis maledici regnum Dei possidere non possint, creditum est tamen quod hi qui merito impietatis suæ maledicebantur, ocius Domino vindice pœnas sui reatus luerent. Siquidem anno post hunc proximo idem rex, cum temere exercitum ad vastandam Pictorum provinciam duxisset, multum prohibentibus amicis et maxime beatæ memoriæ [b]Cudbercto qui nuper fuerat ordinatus episcopus, introductus est, simulantibus fugam hostibus, in angustias inaccessorum montium, et cum maxima parte copiarum quas secum adduxerat, exstinctus anno ætatis C suæ quadragesimo, regni autem quinto decimo, die XIII. Kalendarum Juniarum. Et quidem, ut dixi, prohibuerunt amici ne hoc bellum iniret ; sed [3]quoniam anno præcedente noluerat audire reverentissimum patrem Ecgberctum, [c]ne Scottiam [d]nil se lædentem impugnaret, datum est illi ex pœna peccati illius, ne nunc eos qui ipsum ab interitu revocare cupiebant, audiret.

Nam et Picti terram possessionis suæ quam tenuerunt Angli et Scotti qui erant in Brittania, [5]Brittonum quoque pars nonnulla, libertatem receperunt, quam et hactenus habent per annos circiter quadraginta sex ; ubi inter [6]plurimos gentis′ Anglorum vel interemptos gladio, vel servitio addictos, vel de terra Pictorum fuga lapsos, etiam reverentissimus vir Dei Trumuini qui D in eos episcopatum acceperat, recessit cum suis qui erant in monasterio [e]Aebbercurnig, posito quidem in regione Anglorum, sed in vicinia freti quod Anglorum terras, Pictorumque disterminat; eosque ubicumque poterat, amicis per monasteria commendans, ipse in sæpedicto famulorum famularumque Dei monasterio quod vocatur Streanaeshalch, locum mansionis elegit ; ibique cum paucis suorum in monachica districtione vitam non [7]sibi solummodo, sed et multis utilem plurimo annorum tempore duxit : ubi etiam defunctus, in ecclesia B. Petri apostoli, juxta honorem et vita et [8]gradu ejus condignum [f]conditus est. Præerat quidem tunc eidem monasterio regia virgo Aelbfled una cum matre Eanflede quarum

A. 685. Cudberct ep. Lindisf. a Farne.

Ipso etiam anno quo finem vitæ accepit rex Ecgfrid, episcopum, ut diximus, fecerat ordinari Lindisfarnensium ecclesiæ, virum sanctum et venerabilem Cudberctum qui in insula permodica quæ appellatur [c]Farne, et ab eadem ecclesia novem ferme millibus passuum in oceano procul abest, vitam solitariam per annos plures in magna corporis et mentis continentia duxerat. Qui quidem a prima ætate pueritiæ, studio religiosæ vitæ semper ardebat; sed ab ineunte adolescentia monachicum et nomen adsumpsit et habitum. Intravit [3]autem primo monasterium [d]Mailros, quod in ripa Tuidi fluminis positum, tunc abbas Eata, vir omnium mansuetissimus ac simplicissimus regebat: qui postea episcopus Hagustaldensis, sive Lindisfarnensis ecclesiæ factus est, ut supra memoravimus: cui tempore illo [4]præpositus Boisil magnarum virtutum et prophetici spiritus [5]sacerdos fuit. Hujus discipulatui Cudberct humiliter subditus, et scientiam ab eo [6]Scripturarum et bonorum operum sumpsit exempla. C

Nec solum ipsi monasterio regularis vitæ monita simul et exempla præbebat, sed et vulgus circumpositum longe lateque a vita stultæ consuetudinis ad cælestium gaudiorum convertere curabat amorem. Nam et multi fidem quam habebant, iniquis profanabant operibus: et aliqui etiam tempore mortalitatis, neglectis fidei sacramentis quibus erant imbuti, ad erratica idolatriæ medicamina concurrebant; quasi missam a Deo conditore plagam, per incantationes, vel fylacteria, vel alia quælibet [7]dæmoniacæ artis arcana cohibere valerent. Ad utrorumque ergo corrigendum errorem crebro ipse de monasterio egressus, [8]aliquoties equo sedens, sed sæpius [9]pedes incedens, circumpositas veniebat ad villas, et viam veritatis prædicabat errantibus; quod ipsum etiam Boisil suo tempore facere consueverat. A ea quæ audire et intelligere poterant, operando sequerentur. Porro Cudbercto tanta erat dicendi peritia, tantus amor persuadendi quæ [1]cœperat, tale vultus angelici lumen, ut nullus præsentium latebras ei sui cordis celare præsumeret; omnes palam quæ gesserant, confitendo proferrent, quia nimirum hæc eadem illum latere nullo modo [2]putabant; et confessa dignis, ut imperabat, pœnitentiæ fructibus abstergerent. Solebat autem ea maxime loca peragrare, [3]illis prædicare in viculis, qui in arduis asperisque montibus procul positi, aliis horrori erant ad visendum, et paupertate pariter ac rusticitate sua doctorum arcebant accessum. Quos tamen ille pio libenter mancipatus labori [4]tanta doctrinæ sollertis excolebat industria, ut de monasterio egressus sæpe [5]ebdomade integra, aliquando duabus vel tribus, nonnunquam etiam mense pleno domum non redi-

Cudberct præpos. Lindisf.

Cum ergo venerabilis Domini famulus multos in Mailrosensi monasterio degens annos, magnis virtutum signis [6]efulgeret, transtulit eum reverentissimus abbas ipsius Eata ad insulam Lindisfarnensium, ut ibi quoque fratribus custodiam disciplinæ regularis et auctoritate præpositi intimaret, et propria actione præmonstraret. Nam et ipsum locum tunc idem reverentissimus pater abbatis jure regebat. Siquidem a temporibus ibidem antiquis et episcopus cum clero, et abbas solebat manere cum monachis; qui tamen et ipsi ad curam episcopi familiariter pertinerent. Quia nimirum Aedan qui primus ejus loci episcopus fuit, cum monachis illuc et ipse monachus adveniens, monachicam in eo con-

D quoque contemplationis, quæ diximus, silentia secreta pervenit. Verum quia de vita illius et virtutibus ante annos plures sufficienter et versibus heroicis, et simplici oratione conscripsimus, hoc tantum in præsenti commemorare satis sit, quod aditurus insulam protestatus est fratribus, dicens: ‘Si mihi Divina gratia in loco illo donaverit, ut de opere manuum mearum vivere queam, libens ibi morabor; sin alias, ad vos citissime Deo volente revertar.’ Erat autem locus et aquæ prorsus et frugis et arboris inops, sed et spirituum malignorum frequentia humanæ habitationi minus accommodus: sed ad votum viri Dei habitabilis per omnia factus est, siquidem ad adventum ejus spiritus [9]recessere maligni. Cum autem ipse sibi ibidem expulsis hostibus mansionem angustam circumvallante aggere, et domos in ea necessarias, juvante fratrum manu, id est, oratorium, et
E habitaculum commune construxisset, jussit fratres in ejusdem habitaculi pavimento foveam facere: erat autem tellus durissima et saxosa, cui nulla omnino [10]spes venæ fontanæ videretur inesse. Quod dum facerent, ad fidem et preces famuli Dei, alio die aqua plena inventa est, quæ usque ad hanc diem, sufficientem cunctis illo advenientibus gratiæ suæ cælestis copiam [11]ministrat. Hic cum audiret eum ad civitatem [4]Lugubaliam[b] devenisse, venit ex more, cupiens salutaribus ejus exhortationibus ad superna desideria magis magisque accendi. Qui dum sese alterutrum cælestis vitæ poculis debriarent, dixit inter alia antistes: 'Memento, frater Hereberct, ut modo quidquid opus habes, me interroges, mecumque loquaris: postquam enim ab invicem digressi fuerimus, non ultra nos in hoc sæculo carnis obtutibus invicem aspiciemus. Certus sum namque [5]quod tempus meæ resolutionis instat, et velox est depositio tabernaculi

Qui hæc audiens provolutus est ejus vestigiis, et fusis cum gemitu lacrymis, 'Obsecro,' inquit, 'per Dominum, ne me deseras, sed tui memor sis fidissimi sodalis, rogesque Supernam pietatem, ut Cui simul in terris servivimus, ad ejus videndam gratiam simul transeamus ad cælos. Nosti enim quia ad tui oris imperium semper vivere studui, et quicquid ignorantia vel fragilitate deliqui, æque ad tuæ voluntatis examen mox emendare curavi.' Incubuit precibus antistes, statimque edoctus in spiritu impetrasse [6]se quod petebat a Domino: 'Surge,' inquit, 'frater mi, et noli plorare, sed gaudio gaude quia quod rogavimus, Superna nobis clementia donavit.'

Volens autem latius demonstrare Divina dispensatio, quanta in gloria vir Domini Cudberct post mortem viveret, cujus ante mortem vita sublimis crebris etiam miraculorum patebat indiciis, transactis sepulturæ ejus annis undecim, immisit in [4]animo fratrum ut tollerent ossa illius, [5]quæ more mortuorum consumpto jam et in pulverem redacto corpore [6]reliquo, sicca invenienda putabant: atque in novo recondita loculo, in eodem quidem loco, sed supra pavimentum dignæ venerationis gratia locarent. Quod dum sibi placuisse Eadbercto antistiti suo referrent, adnuit consilio eorum, jussitque ut die depositionis ejus hoc facere meminissent. Quod ubi videre fratres, nimio mox timore perculsi, festinaverunt referre antistiti quæ invenerant, qui tum forte in remotiore ab ecclesia loco refluis undique pelagi fluctibus cincto, solitarius manebat. In hoc etenim semper Quadragesimæ tempus agere, in hoc quadraginta ante Dominicum natale dies in magna continentiæ, orationis et lacrymarum devotione transigere solebat: in quo etiam venerabilis prædecessor ejus Cudberct priusquam insulam Farne peteret, aliquandiu [10]secretus Domino militabat.

Hæc et hujusmodi plura ubi multis cum lacrymis et magna compunctione antistes lingua etiam tremente complevit, fecerunt fratres ut jusserat, et involutum novo amictu corpus novaque in theca reconditum, supra pavimentum sanctuarii posuerunt. A CAP. XXXI. UT QUIDAM AD TUMBAM EJUS SIT A PARALYSI [1]SANATUS.

Erat in eodem monasterio frater quidam, nomine Badudegn, tempore non pauco hospitum ministerio deserviens, qui nunc usque superest, testimonium habens ab universis fratribus [2]cunctisque supervenientibus hospitibus′ quod vir esset multæ pietatis ac religionis, injunctoque sibi officio supernæ tantum mercedis gratia subditus. Hic cum quadam die lenas sive saga quibus in hospitale utebatur, in mari lavasset, rediens domum repentina medio itinere molestia [3]tactus est, ita ut corruens in terram et aliquandiu pronus jacens, vix tandem resurgeret; resurgens autem sensit dimidiam corporis sui partem a capite usque ad pedes paralysis languore depressam: et maximo cum labore baculo innitens domum pervenit. Crescebat morbus paulatim, et nocte superveniente gravior
B effectus est, ita ut die redeunte vix ipse per se exsurgere aut incedere valeret. Quo affectus incommodo, concepit [4]utillimum mente consilium, ut ad ecclesiam quoquo modo posset perveniens, intraret ad tumbam reverentissimi patris Cudbercti, ibique genibus flexis supplex Supernam pietatem rogaret, ut vel ab hujuscemodi languore, si hoc sibi utile esset, liberaretur; vel si se tali molestia diutius castigari Divina providente gratia oporteret, patienter dolorem ac placida mente sustineret inlatum. Fecit igitur ut animo disposuerat, et imbecilles artus baculo sustentans intravit ecclesiam; ac prosternens se ad corpus viri Dei pia intentione, per ejus auxilium Dominum sibi propitium fieri precabatur: atque inter preces velut in soporem solutus sensit, ut ipse postea referre erat solitus, quasi magnam latamque manum caput sibi in parte qua dolebat, tetigisse,
C eodemque tactu totam illam quæ languore pressa fuerat corporis sui partem, paulatim fugiente dolore, ac sanitate subsequente, [5]ad pedes usque′ pertransisse. Quo facto, mox evigilans sanissimus surrexit, ac pro sua sanitate Domino gratias denuo referens, quid erga se actum esset fratribus indicavit: cunctisque congaudentibus ad ministerium quod solicitus exhibere solebat, quasi flagello probante castigatior rediit.

Sed et indumenta, quibus Deo dicatum corpus Cudbercti, vel vivum antea, vel postea defunctum vestierant, etiam ipsa a gratia curandi non vacarunt, sicut in volumine vitæ et virtutum ejus quisque legerit, inveniet.

Nec silentio prætereundum quod ante triennium per reliquias ejus factum, nuper mihi per ipsum, in quo factum est, fratrem innotuit. Est autem factum in monasterio quod juxta amnem [a]Dacore constructum ab eo cognomen accepit, cui tunc vir religiosus [b]Suidberct abbatis jure præfuit. Erat in eo quidam adolescens cui tumor deformis palpebram oculi fœdaverat, qui cum per dies crescens oculo interitum minaretur, curabant medici hunc adpositis pigmentorum fomentis emollire, nec valebant. Quidam abscidendum esse [6]dicebant; alii hoc fieri metu majoris periculi vetabant. Cumque tempore non pauco frater præfatus tali incommodo laboraret, neque imminens oculo exitium humana manus curare valeret, quin [7]per dies augesceret, contigit eum subito Divinæ
E pietatis gratia per sanctissimi patris Cudbercti reliquias sanari. Nam quando fratres sui corpus ipsius post multos sepulturæ annos incorruptum [8]reperierunt, tulerunt partem de capillis quam more reliquiarum rogantibus amicis dare, vel ostendere in signum miraculi possent.

Qui cum die quadam ingressus ecclesiam, aperuisset thecam reliquiarum, ut portionem earum roganti amico præstaret, contigit et ipsum adolescentem cui oculus languebat, in eadem ecclesia tunc adesse. Cumque presbyter portionem quantam voluit, amico dedisset, residuum dedit adolescenti, ut suo in loco reponeret. At ille salubri instinctu admonitus, cum accepisset capillos sancti capitis, adposuit palpebræ languenti, et aliquandiu tumorem illum infestum horum adpositione comprimere ac mollire curabat. Quo facto, reliquias, ut [1]jussus erat,′ sua in theca recondidit, credens suum oculum capillis viri Dei quibus [2]adtactus erat, ocius esse sanandum. Neque [3]eum sua fides fefellit. Erat enim, ut referre erat solitus, tunc [4]hora circiter [5]secunda diei. Sed cum alia, quæque dies illa exigebat, cogitaret et faceret, imminente hora ipsius diei sexta, repente contingens oculum, ita sanum cum palpebra invenit, ac si nil unquam in eo deformitatis ac tumoris apparuisset.

HISTORIÆ ECCLESIASTICÆ ANGLORUM GENTIS

LIBER QUINTUS.

Cap. I. Ut [6]Oidiluald successor Cudbercti in anachoretica vita, laborantibus in mari fratribus, tempestatem orando sedaverit.

Oidiluald succedit Cudbercto in anachor. Farn. A. 687.

SUCCESSIT autem viro Domini Cudbercto, in exercenda vita solitaria quam in insula Farne ante episcopatus sui tempora gerebat, vir venerabilis Oidiluald, qui multis annis in monasterio quod dicitur Inhrypum, acceptum presbyteratus officium condignis gradu [7]ipse consecrabat actibus. Cujus ut meritum vel vita qualis fuerit, certius clarescat, unum ejus narro miraculum quod mihi unus e fratribus propter quos et in quibus patratum est, ipse narravit: videlicet Gudfrid, venerabilis Christi famulus et presbyter, qui etiam postea fratribus ejusdem ecclesiæ Lindisfarnensis in qua educatus est, abbatis jure præfuit. ‘Veni,’ inquit, ‘cum duobus fratribus aliis ad insulam Farne, loqui desiderans cum reverentissimo patre [a]Oidilualdo: cumque allocutione ejus refecti et benedictione petita domum rediremus, ecce subito, positis nobis in medio mari, interrupta est serenitas qua vehebamur, et tanta ingruit tamque fera [8]tempestatis hiems,′ ut neque velo neque remigio quicquam proficere, neque aliud quam mortem sperare valeremus. Cumque diu multum cum vento pelagoque frustra certantes tandem post terga respiceremus, si forte vel ipsam de qua egressi eramus, insulam aliquo conamine repetere possemus, invenimus nos undique versum pari tempestate præclusos, nullamque spem [9]nobis in nobis restare salutis. Ubi autem longius visum levavimus, vidimus in ipsa insula Farne, egressum de latibulis suis amantissimum Deo patrem Oidilualdum iter nostrum inspicere. Audito etenim fragore procellarum ac ferventis oceani, exierat videre quid nobis accideret: cumque nos in labore ac desperatione positos cerneret, flectebat genua sua ad Patrem Domini nostri Jesu Christi pro nostra vita et salute [10]precaturus. Et cum orationem compleret, simul tumida æquora placavit; adeo ut cessante per omnia sævitia tempestatis, secundi nos venti ad terram usque per plana maris terga comitarentur. Cumque evadentes ad terram,

A naviculam quoque nostram ab undis exportaremus, mox eadem quæ nostri gratia modicum siluerat, tempestas rediit, et toto illo die [1]multum furere non cessavit; ut palam daretur intelligi, quia modica illa quæ provenerat intercapedo quietis ad viri Dei preces, nostræ evasionis gratia, cælitus donata [2]est.'

Mansit [3]autem idem vir Dei in insula Farne duodecim annis ibidemque defunctus[4]; sed in insula Lindisfarnensi juxta præfatorum corpora episcoporum, in ecclesia [5]beati apostoli Petri sepultus est. Cap. II. Ut episcopus Johannes mutum [8]et scabiosum' benedicendo curaverit.

B [9]Cujus regni principio defuncto Eata episcopo, Johannes, vir sanctus, Hagustaldensis ecclesiæ præsulatum suscepit: de quo plura virtutum miracula qui eum familiariter noverunt, dicere solent, et maxime vir reverentissimus ac veracissimus [a]Bercthun, diaconus quondam ejus, nunc autem abbas monasterii quod vocatur Inderauuda, id est, 'in silva Derorum:' e quibus aliqua memoriæ tradere commodum duximus. [b]Est [10]mansio quædam secretior, nemore raro et vallo circumdata, non longe ab Hagustaldensi ecclesia, id est, unius ferme milliarii et dimidii spatio interfluente Tino amne separata, habens cœmeterium S. Michaelis Archangeli, in qua vir Dei sæpius ubi opportunitas adridebat temporis, et maxime in Quadragesima, manere cum paucis, atque orationibus ac lectioni quietus operam dare consueverat. Cumque tempore quodam, incipiente Qua-
C dragesima, ibidem mansurus adveniret, jussit suis quærere pauperem aliquem majore infirmitate vel inopia gravatum, quem secum habere illis diebus ad faciendam eleemosynam [11]possent: sic enim semper facere solebat.

A. 685. Joh. Hagust. ep. Bercthun abb. Inderauuda. Cœmet. S. Mich.

Erat autem in villa non longe posita quidam adolescens mutus, episcopo notus, nam sæpius ante illum percipiendæ eleemosynæ gratia venire consueverat, qui ne unum quidem sermonem unquam [12]profari poterat; sed et scabiem tantam ac furfures habebat in capite, ut nil unquam capillorum ei in superiore parte capitis nasci valeret, tantum in circuitu horridi crines stare videbantur. Hunc ergo adduci præcipit episcopus, et ei in conseptis ejusdem mansionis parvum tugurium fieri in [13]quo manens quotidianam ab eis stipem acciperet. Cumque una Quadragesimæ esset impleta septimana, sequente Dominica jussit ad se intrare
D pauperem, ingresso [14]eo linguam proferre ex ore ac sibi ostendere jussit; et adprehendens eum de mento, signum sanctæ crucis linguæ ejus impressit, quam signatam revocare in os, et loqui illum præcepit: 'Dicito,' inquiens, 'aliquod verbum, dicito [15]'Gae,' quod est, lingua Anglorum, verbum adfirmandi et consentiendi, id est, 'etiam.' Dixit ille statim, soluto vinculo linguæ, quod jussus erat. Addidit episcopus nomina litterarum: 'Dicito A.;' dixit ille A. 'Dicito B;' dixit ille et hoc. Cumque singula litterarum nomina dicente episcopo responderet, addidit et syllabas ac verba dicenda illi proponere. Et cum in omnibus consequenter responderet, præcepit eum sententias longiores dicere; et fecit: neque ultra cessavit tota die illa et nocte sequente, quantum vigilare potuit, ut ferunt qui præsentes fuere, loqui aliquid, et arcana suæ cogitationis
E ac voluntatis, quod nunquam antea potuit, aliis ostendere; in similitudinem illius diu claudi qui curatus[16]ab apostolis Petro et Johanne, exsiliens stetit et ambulabat;

Cap. III. Ut [1]puellam languentem orando sanaverit.

Uilfrid Hagust. Joh. Ebor. A. 686.

Narravit idem Bercthun et aliud de præfato antistite miraculum. Quia cum reverentissimus vir Uilfrid post longum exilium in episcopatum esset Hagustaldensis ecclesiæ receptus, et idem Johannes, defuncto Bosa viro multæ sanctitatis et humilitatis, episcopus pro eo Eboraci substitutus, venerit ipse tempore quodam ad monasterium virginum in loco qui vocatur [a]Uetadun, cui tunc Heriburg abbatissa præfuit. 'Ubi cum venissemus,' inquit, 'et magno universorum gaudio suscepti essemus, indicavit nobis abbatissa, [2]quod quædam de numero virginum quæ erat filia ipsius carnalis, gravissimo languore teneretur: quia phlebotomata est nuper in brachio, et cum esset in studio, tacta est infirmitate repentini doloris, quo mox increscente, magis gravatum est brachium illud vulneratum, ac versum in tumorem, adeo ut vix duabus manibus circumplecti posset, ipsaque jacens in lecto præ nimietate doloris jam moritura videretur. Rogavit ergo episcopum abbatissa ut [3]intraret ad eam, ac benedicere illam dignaretur, quia crederet eam ad benedictionem vel tactum illius mox melius habituram. Interrogans autem ille quando phlebotomata esset puella, et ut cognovit quia in luna quarta, dixit: Multum insipienter et indocte fecistis in luna quarta phlebotomando. Memini enim beatæ memoriæ Theodorum archiepiscopum dicere, quia periculosa sit satis illius temporis phlebotomia, quando et lumen lunæ, et rheuma oceani in cremento est. Et quid ego possum puellæ, si moritura est, facere? At illa instantius obsecrans pro filia quam oppido diligebat, nam et abbatissam eam pro se facere disposuerat, tandem obtinuit ut ad languentem intraret. Intravit ergo me secum adsumto ad virginem quæ jacebat multo, ut dixi, dolore constricta, et brachio in tantum grossescente, ut nihil prorsus in [4]cubito flexionis haberet: et adstans dixit orationem super illam, ac benedicens egressus est. Cumque post hæc hora competente consederemus ad mensam, adveniens quidam clamavit me [5]foras, et ait: Postulat [6]Quoenburg, hoc enim erat nomen virginis, ut ocius regrediaris ad eam. Quod dum facerem, reperi illam ingrediens vultu hilariorem, et velut sospiti similem. Et dum adsiderem illi, dixit: Vis petamus bibere? [7]At ego; Volo, inquam, et multum delector, si potes. Cumque oblato poculo biberemus ambo, cœpit mihi dicere quia ex quo episcopus oratione pro me, et benedictione completa egressus est, statim melius habere incipio; etsi necdum vires pristinas recepi, dolor tamen omnis et de brachio ubi ardentior inerat, et de toto meo corpore, velut ipso episcopo foras eum exportante, funditus ablatus est, tametsi tumor adhuc brachii manere videretur. Abeuntibus autem nobis inde, continuo fugatum dolorem membrorum fuga quoque tumoris horrendi secuta est; et erepta morti ac doloribus virgo, laudes Domino Salvatori una cum cæteris qui ibi erant, servis illius referebat.' A CAP. IV. UT CONJUGEM COMITIS INFIRMAM AQUA BENEDICTA CURAVERIT.

Aliud quoque non multum huic dissimile miraculum de præfato antistite narravit idem abbas, dicens: 'Villa erat comitis cujusdam qui vocabatur [a]Puch, non longe a monasterio nostro, id est, [1]duum ferme millium spatio separata: cujus conjux quadraginta ferme diebus erat acerbissimo languore detenta, ita ut tribus septimanis non posset de cubiculo in quo jacebat, foras efferri. Contigit autem eo tempore virum Dei illo ad dedicandam ecclesiam ab eodem comite vocari. Cumque dedicata esset ecclesia, rogavit comes eum ad prandendum [2]in domum suam ingredi. Renuit episcopus, dicens se ad monasterium quod [3]proxime erat, debere reverti. At ille obnixius precibus instans, vovit etiam se eleemosynas pauperibus daturum, dummodo ille dignaretur eo die domum suam B ingrediens jejunium solvere. Rogavi et ego una cum illo, promittens etiam me eleemosynas in alimoniam inopum dare, dum ille domum comitis pransurus ac benedictionem daturus intraret. Cumque hoc tarde ac difficulter impetraremus, intravimus ad reficiendum. Miserat autem episcopus mulieri quæ infirma jacebat, de aqua benedicta quam in dedicationem ecclesiæ consecraverat, per unum de his qui mecum venerant fratribus, præcipiens ut gustandam illi daret, et ubicumque maximum ei dolorem inesse didicisset, de ipsa eam aqua lavaret. Quod ut factum est, surrexit statim mulier sana, et non solum se infirmitate longa carere, sed et perditas dudum vires recepisse sentiens, obtulit poculum episcopo ac nobis: cœptumque ministerium nobis omnibus propinandi usque ad prandium completum non omisit; imitata socrum B. Petri[4], quæ cum febrium C fuisset ardoribus fatigata, ad tactum manus Dominicæ surrexit, et sanitate simul ac virtute recepta, ministrabat eis.'

CAP. V. UT [5]ITEM PUERUM COMITIS ORANDO A MORTE REVOCAVERIT.

Alio item tempore vocatus ad dedicandam ecclesiam comitis vocabulo [b]Addi, cum postulatum complesset ministerium, rogatus est ab eodem comite intrare ad unum de pueris ejus qui acerrima ægritudine premebatur, ita ut deficiente penitus [6]omni membrorum officio, jamjamque moriturus esse videretur; cui etiam loculus jam tunc erat præparatus in quo defunctus condi deberet. Addidit autem vir etiam lacrimas precibus, diligenter obsecrans ut intraret oraturus pro illo, quia multum necessaria sibi esset vita ipsius; crederet vero quia si ille D ei manum [7]imponere atque eum benedicere voluisset, statim melius haberet. Intravit ergo illo episcopus, et vidit eum mœstis omnibus jam morti proximum, positumque loculum juxta eum in quo sepeliendus poni deberet; dixitque orationem ac benedixit eum, et egrediens dixit solito consolantium sermone: 'Bene convalescas, et cito.' Cumque post hæc sederent ad mensam, misit puer ad dominum suum, rogans sibi poculum vini mittere, quia sitiret. Gavisus ille multum quia bibere posset, misit ei calicem vini benedictum ab episcopo; quem ut bibit, surrexit continuo, et veterno infirmitatis discusso, induit se ipse vestimentis suis; et egressus inde intravit, ac salutavit episcopum et convivas, dicens, quia ipse quoque delectaretur manducare et bibere cum eis. Jusserunt eum sedere secum ad epulas, multum gaudentes de sospitate illius. Reside- E bat, vescebatur, bibebat, lætabatur, quasi unus e convivis agebat; et multis post hæc annis vivens, in eadem quam acceperat salute permansit. Hoc autem miraculum memoratus abbas non se præsente factum, sed ab his qui præsentes fuere, sibi perhibet esse relatum.

CAP. VI. UT CLERICUM SUUM CADENDO CONTRITUM [1]ÆQUE ORANDO AC BENEDICENDO A MORTE REVOCAVERIT. A

Herebald.

Neque hoc prætereundum [2] silentio, quod famulus Christi [3] Herebald in seipso ab eo factum solet narrare miraculum, qui tunc quidem in clero illius conversatus, nunc [4] monasterio quod est juxta ostium Tini fluminis, abbatis jure præest. ‘ Vitam,’ inquit, ‘ illius, quantum hominibus æstimare fas est, [5] quod præsens optime cognovi, per omnia episcopo dignam esse comperi. Sed et cujus meriti apud internum [6] testem habitus sit, et in multis aliis, et in meipso maxime expertus sum: quippe quem ab ipso, ut ita dicam, mortis limite revocans, ad viam vitæ sua oratione ac benedictione reduxit. Nam cum primævo adolescentiæ [7] tempore in clero illius degerem legendi quidem canendique [8] studiis traditus, sed non adhuc animum perfecte a juvenilibus cohibens inlecebris, contigit die B quadam nos iter agentes cum illo devenisse in viam planam et amplam [9] aptamque cursui equorum: cœperuntque juvenes qui cum ipso erant, maxime laici, postulare episcopum ut cursu majore equos suos invicem probare liceret. At ille primo negavit, otiosum dicens esse quod desiderabant; sed ad ultimum multorum unanima intentione devictus; Facite, inquit, si vultis, ita tamen ut Herebald ab illo se certamine [10] funditus abstineat. Porro ipse diligentius obsecrans, ut et mihi certandi cum illis copia daretur, fidebam namque equo quem mihi ipse optimum donaverat, nequaquam impetrare potui.

Herebald invito episcopo currit.

‘ At cum sæpius huc atque illuc spectante me et episcopo, concitatis in cursum equis reverterentur; et ipse lascivo superatus animo non me potui cohibere, sed, prohibente licet illo, ludentibus me miscui, et simul cursu equi con- C tendere cœpi. Et quia moveri non poteram, tetenderunt ibidem papilionem in qua jacerem. Erat autem [11] hora diei D circiter septima,′ a qua ad vesperum usque quietus, et quasi mortuus permanens tunc paululum revivisco, ferorque domum a sociis, ac tacitus tota nocte perduro. Vomebam autem sanguinem, eo quod et interanea essent ruendo convulsa. At episcopus gravissime de casu et interitu meo dolebat, eo quod me speciali diligeret affectu: nec voluit nocte illa juxta morem cum clericis suis manere, verum solus in oratione persistens noctem ducebat pervigilem, pro mea ut reor sospitate Supernæ pietati supplicans. Ipse vero tametsi certus est factus de visione, nihilominus tentavit iter dispositum cum fratribus memoratis incipere. Cumque jam navi imposuissent quæ tanti itineris necessitas poscebat, atque opportunos aliquot [2]dies ventos expectarent, facta est nocte quadam tam sæva tempestas, quæ perditis nonnulla ex parte his quæ in navi erant rebus, ipsam in [3]littus jacentem inter undas relinqueret: salvata sunt tamen omnia quæ erant Ecgbercti, et sociorum ejus. Qui cum illo advenissent, erant autem numero [b]duodecim, divertentes ad Pippinum ducem Francorum, gratanter ab illo suscepti sunt: et quia nuper [c]citeriorem Fresiam, expulso inde [11]Rathbedo rege ceperat, illo eos ad prædicandum misit; ipse quoque imperiali auctoritate juvans, ne [12]qui prædicantibus quicquam molestiæ inferret; multisque eos qui fidem suscipere vellent beneficiis adtollens: unde factum est, opitulante gratia Divina, ut multos in brevi ab idolatria ad fidem converterent Christi.

Hic enim inter duodecim apostolos Hewaldos duos numerat, sed ex Beda constat hos duos esse ab illis 12 diversos: nam narrantur illorum duodecim exempla secuti, ad antiquos Saxones, non ad Fresiam ad quam illi duodecim divertebant pervenisse. Inter hos etiam Uictberctum ponit, jussuque Rathbedi occisum tradit; sed probabile est ex hoc Bedæ loco illum Fresiam nunquam repetiisse, sed ad Hiberniam in 'solito silentio vacasse Domino' usque ad mortem, aliosque 'viros sanctos' duodecim ab Ecgberto missos esse. Accam etiam, quem stulte dicit a Uilfrido postea constitutum Hagustaldensem episcopum, his adjungit: constat tamen ex v. 20, eum nunquam ex Anglia profectum, nisi cum Romam iverit cum Uilfrido. S.

A reliquias sanctorum quas ibi introduceret; quibusque ibidem depositis, consequenter in eorum honorem quorum essent [1]illæ, singula quæque loca dedicaret. Sed et alia perplura quæ tanti operis negotium quærebat, vel ibi discere, vel inde accipere cupiebat. In quibus omnibus cum sui voti compos esset effectus, ad prædicandum rediit. — Rediit.

Quo tempore fratres qui erant in Fresia verbi ministerio mancipati, elegerunt ex suo numero virum modestum moribus et mansuetum corde [a]Suidberctum qui eis ordinaretur antistes, quem Brittaniam destinatum ad petitionem eorum [b]ordinavit reverentissimus Uilfrid episcopus, qui tunc forte patria pulsus in Merciorum regionibus exulabat. Non enim eo tempore habebat episcopum Cantia, defuncto quidem Theodoro, sed necdum Berctualdo successore ejus qui trans B mare ordinandus ierat, ad sedem episcopatus sui reverso. — Suidberct eligitur in episcop. Fresonum. — A Uilfrido ordinatur.

Qui videlicet Suidberct accepto episcopatu, de Brittania regressus, non multo post ad gentem Boructuarorum secessit, ac multos eorum prædicando ad viam veritatis perduxit. Sed expugnatis non longo post tempore Boructuaris a gente antiquorum Saxonum, dispersi sunt quolibet hi qui verbum receperant; [2]ipse antistes cum quibusdam Pippinum petiit, qui interpellante [3]Blithrydae conjuge sua, dedit ei locum mansionis in insula quadam Rheni, quæ lingua eorum vocatur 'In Littore:' in qua ipse, constructo [c]monasterio quod hactenus hæredes ejus possident, aliquandiu continentissimam gessit vitam, ibique [d]diem clausit ultimum. — Ad Boructuaros secessit. — Quibus victis, — in insula In Littore condit mon.

Postquam vero per annos aliquot in Fresia, qui advenerant docuerunt, misit C Pippinus, favente omnium consensu, virum venerabilem Uilbrordum Romam cujus adhuc pontificatum Sergius habebat, postulans ut eidem Fresonum genti archiepiscopus ordinaretur. Quod ita ut petierat impletum est anno ab Incarnatione Domini sexcentesimo nonagesimo sexto. Ordinatus est autem in ecclesia sanctæ martyris [e]Ceciliæ, die natalis ejus, imposito sibi a papa memorato nomine Clementis: ac mox remissus ad sedem episcopatus sui, id est, post dies quatuordecim, ex quo in urbem venerat. — Uilbrord ordinatur Romæ. — A. 696. — Cognominatur Clemens.

Donavit autem ei Pippin locum cathedræ episcopalis in castello suo inlustri, quod antiquo gentium illarum verbo [f]Uiltaburg, id est, 'Oppidum Uiltorum,' lingua autem Gallica Trajectum vocatur; in quo ædificata [g]ecclesia, reverentissimus pontifex longe lateque verbum fidei prædicans, multosque ab errore — Uiltaburg ejus sedes. Idem author memorat eum in Fresia a paganis incarceratum et ab angelo in libertatem vendicatum; dein visum cæco, vitamque mortuo restituentem; sed fides vix videtur esse adhibenda historiæ quot lineis, fere tot erroribus refertæ. S.

CAP. XII. UT QUIDAM IN PROVINCIA NORDANHYMBRORUM A MORTUIS RESURGENS, MULTA ET TREMENDA, ET DESIDERANDA QUÆ VIDERAT NARRAVERIT.

A. 696. Drycthelmus resurgit a morte.

His temporibus miraculum memorabile, et antiquorum simile in Brittania factum est. Namque ad excitationem viventium de morte animæ, quidam aliquandiu mortuus ad vitam resurrexit corporis, et multa memoratu digna quæ viderat, narravit; e quibus hic aliqua breviter perstringenda esse putavi. Erat [2]ergo paterfamilias in regione Nordanhymbrorum quæ vocatur ^ Incuneningum, religiosam cum domo sua gerens vitam: qui infirmitate corporis tactus, et hac crescente per dies ad extrema perductus, primo tempore noctis defunctus est; sed diluculo reviviscens ac repente residens, omnes qui corpori flentes assederant, timore immenso perculsos in fugam convertit: uxor tantum quæ [3]amplius amabat, quamvis multum tremens et pavida, remansit: quam ille consolatus; 'Noli,' inquit, 'timere, quia jam vere resurrexi a morte qua tenebar, et apud homines sum iterum vivere permissus; non tamen ea mihi qua ante consueram conversatione, sed multum dissimili ex hoc tempore vivendum est.' Statimque surgens abiit ad villulæ oratorium, et usque ad diem in oratione persistens, mox omnem quam possederat substantiam in tres divisit portiones, e quibus unam conjugi, alteram filiis tradidit, tertiam sibi [4]ipse retentans, statim pauperibus distribuit. Nec multo post sæculi curis absolutus ad monasterium × Mailros, quod Tuidi fluminis circumflexu maxima ex parte clauditur, pervenit; acceptaque tonsura, locum secretæ mansionis quam præviderat abbas, intravit: et ibi usque ad diem mortis in tanta mentis et corporis contritione duravit, ut multa illum, quæ alios laterent, vel horrenda, vel desideranda vidisse, etiamsi lingua sileret, vita loqueretur. Narrabat [5]autem hoc modo quod viderat: 'Lucidus,' [6]inquiens, 'aspectu, et clarus erat indumento qui me ducebat. Incedebamus autem tacentes, ut videbatur mihi, contra ortum solis solstitialem; cumque ambularemus, devenimus ad vallem multæ latitudinis ac profunditatis, infinitæ autem longitudinis; quæ ad lævam nobis sita, unum latus flammis ferventibus nimium terribile, alterum furenti grandine ac frigore [7]nivium omnia perflante atque verrente non minus intolerabile præferebat. Utrumque autem erat animabus hominum plenum, quæ vicissim hinc inde videbantur quasi tempestatis impetu jactari. Cum enim vim fervoris immensi tolerare non possent, prosiliebant miseræ in medium frigoris infesti: et cum neque ibi quippiam requiei invenire valerent, resiliebant rursus urendæ in medium flammarum inextinguibilium. Cumque hac infelici vicissitudine longe lateque, prout aspicere poteram, sine ulla quietis intercapedine innumerabilis spirituum deformium multitudo torqueretur; cogitare cœpi quod hic fortasse esset infernus, de cujus tormentis intolerabilibus narrare sæpius audivi. A ‘At cum me hoc spectaculo tam horrendo perterritum paulatim in ulteriora produceret, vidi subito ante nos obscurari incipere loca, et tenebris omnia repleri. Quas cum intraremus, in tantum paulisper condensatæ sunt, ut nihil præter ipsas aspicerem, excepta dumtaxat specie et veste ejus qui me ducebat. Et cum progrederemur sola sub nocte per umbras, ecce subito apparent ante nos crebri flammarum tetrarum globi, ascendentes quasi de puteo magno, rursumque decidentes in eumdem. Quo cum perductus essem, repente ductor meus disparuit, ac me solum in medio tenebrarum et [1]horridæ visionis reliquit. At cum iidem globi ignium sine intermissione modo alta peterent, modo ima baratri repeterent, cerno omnia quæ ascendebant fastigia flammarum plena esse spiritibus hominum, qui instar favillarum cum fumo ascendentium nunc ad sublimiora B projicerentur, nunc retractis ignium vaporibus relaberentur in [2]profunda. Sed et fœtor incomparabilis cum [3]eisdem vaporibus ebulliens, omnia illa tenebrarum loca replebat. Et cum diutius ibi pavidus consisterem, utpote incertus quid agerem, quo verterem gressum, qui [4]me finis maneret: audio [5]subitum post terga sonitum immanissimi fletus ac miserrimi, simul et cachinnum crepitantem quasi vulgi indocti captis hostibus insultantis. Ut autem sonitus idem clarior redditus ad me usque pervenit, considero turbam malignorum spirituum, quæ [6]quinque animas hominum mœrentes ejulantesque, ipsa [7]multum exultans et cachinnans medias illas trahebat in tenebras: e quibus videlicet hominibus, ut dignoscere potui, quidam erat adtonsus ut clericus, quidam laicus, quædam femina. Trahentes autem eos maligni spiritus descenderunt in [8]medium baratri C illius ardentis; factumque est ut cum longius subeuntibus eis, fletum hominum, et risum dæmoniorum clare discernere nequirem, sonum tamen adhuc promiscuum in auribus haberem. Interea ascenderunt quidam spirituum obscurorum de abysso illa flammivoma, et adcurrentes circumdederunt me, atque oculis flammantibus, et de ore ac naribus ignem putidum efflantes angebant; forcipibus quoque igneis quos tenebant in manibus, minitabantur me comprehendere, nec tamen me ullatenus contingere, tametsi terrere præsumebant. Qui cum undiqueversum hostibus et cæcitate tenebrarum conclusus huc illucque oculos circumferrem, si forte alicunde quid auxilii quo salvarer, adveniret, apparuit retro [9]via qua veneram, quasi fulgor stellæ [10]micantis inter tenebras, qui paulatim crescens et ad me ocius festinans ubi adpropinquavit, dispersi sunt et D aufugerunt omnes qui me forcipibus rapere quærebant spiritus infesti.

Descriptio Gehennæ.

‘Ille autem qui adveniens eos fugavit, erat ipse qui me ante ducebat: qui mox conversus ad dexterum iter, quasi contra ortum solis brumalem me ducere cœpit. Nec mora, exemptum tenebris in auras me serenæ lucis eduxit: cumque me in luce aperta duceret, vidi ante nos murum permaximum, cujus neque longitudini hinc vel inde, neque altitudini ullus esse terminus videretur. Cœpi autem mirari quare ad murum accederemus, cum in eo nullam januam vel fenestram, vel ascensum alicubi conspicerem. Cum ergo pervenissemus ad murum, statim nescio quo ordine fuimus in summitate ejus. Et ecce ibi campus erat latissimus ac lætissimus, tantaque fragrantia vernantium flosculorum plenus, ut omnem mox fœtorem tenebrosæ fornacis, qui me pervaserat, effugaret admiE randi hujus suavitas odoris. Tanta autem lux cuncta ea loca perfuderat, ut omni splendore diei, sive solis meridiani radiis videretur esse præclarior. Erantque in hoc campo innumera hominum albatorum conventicula, sedesque plurimæ agminum lætantium. Cumque inter choros felicium incolarum medios me duceret, cogitare cœpi quod hoc fortasse esset regnum cælorum, de quo prædicari sæpius audivi. Respondit ille cogitatui meo: Non, inquiens, [11]non hoc est regnum cælorum quod autumas.

'Cumque [1]reversi perveniremus ad mansiones illas lætas spirituum candidatorum, dixit mihi: Scis quæ sint ista omnia quæ vidisti? Respondi ego, Non.
Et ait: Vallis illa quam aspexisti flammis ferventibus et frigoribus horrenda rigidis, ipse est locus in quo examinandæ et castigandæ [2]sunt animæ illorum, qui differentes confiteri et emendare scelera [3]quæ fecerant, in ipso tandem B mortis articulo ad pœnitentiam confugiunt, et sic de corpore exeunt: qui tamen quia confessionem et pœnitentiam vel in morte habuerunt, omnes in die judicii ad regnum cælorum [4]perveniunt. Multos autem preces viventium et eleemo-synæ et jejunia et maxime celebratio missarum, ut etiam ante diem judicii liberentur, adjuvant. Porro puteus ille flammivomus ac putidus quem vidisti, ipsum est os gehennæ, in quo quicumque semel inciderit nunquam inde liberabitur in ævum. Locus verò [5]iste florifer, in quo pulcherrimam hanc juventutem jocundari ac fulgere conspicis, ipse est in quo recipiuntur animæ eorum qui in bonis quidem operibus de corpore exeunt; non tamen sunt tantæ perfectionis, ut in regnum cælorum statim mereantur introduci: qui tamen omnes in die judicii ad visionem Christi et gaudia regni cælestis intrabunt. Nam quicumque C in omni verbo et opere et cogitatione perfecti sunt, mox de corpore egressi ad regnum cæleste perveniunt: ad cujus [6]vicina pertinet locus ille, ubi sonum cantilenæ dulcis cum odore suavitatis ac splendore lucis audisti. Tu autem quia nunc ad corpus reverti et rursum inter homines vivere debes, si actus tuos curiosius discutere, et mores sermonesque tuos in rectitudine ac simplicitate servare studueris, accipies et ipse post mortem locum mansionis inter hæc quæ cernis agmina lætabunda spirituum beatorum. Namque ego cum ad tempus abscessissem [7]a te, ad hoc feci ut quid de te fieri deberet agnoscerem. Hæc mihi cum dixisset, multum detestatus sum reverti ad corpus, delectatus nimirum suavitate ac decore loci illius quem intuebar, simul et consortio eorum quos in illo [8]videbam. Nec tamen aliquid ductorem meum rogare audebam: sed inter D hæc nescio quo ordine repente me inter homines vivere cerno.'

Hæc et alia quæ viderat idem vir Domini, non omnibus passim desidiosis ac

A Accepit autem in eodem monasterio locum mansionis secretiorem, ubi liberius continuis in orationibus famulatui sui Conditoris vacaret. Et quia locus ipse super ripam fluminis erat situs, solebat hunc [1]creber ob magnum castigandi corporis affectum ingredi, ac sæpius in eo supermeantibus undis immergi; sicque ibidem quamdiu sustinere posse videbatur, psalmis vel precibus insistere, fixusque manere ascendente aqua fluminis [2]usque ad lumbos, aliquando usque ad collum; atque inde egrediens ad terram nunquam ipsa vestimenta uda [3]atque algida deponere curabat, donec ex suo corpore calefierent et siccarentur. Cumque tempore hiemali defluentibus circa eum semifractarum crustis glacierum, quas et ipse aliquando contriverat quo haberet locum standi sive immergendi [4]in fluvio [5]dicerent qui videbant: 'Mirum, frater Drycthelme,' hoc enim erat
B viro nomen, 'quod tantam frigoris asperitatem ulla ratione tolerare prævales!' Respondebat ille simpliciter, erat namque homo simplicis ingenii ac moderatæ naturæ: 'Frigidiora ego vidi.' Et cum dicerent: 'Mirum quod tam austeram tenere continentiam velis!' Respondebat: 'Austeriora ego vidi.' Sicque usque ad diem suæ vocationis infatigabili cælestium bonorum desiderio corpus senile inter quotidiana jejunia domabat, multisque et verbo et conversatione [6]saluti fuit.

Fuit autem[8] temporibus ^Coenredi qui post [a]Aedilredum regnavit, vir in laico habitu atque officio militari positus; sed quantum pro industria exteriori regi placens, tantum pro interna suimet neglegentia displicens. Admonebat ergo illum sedulo ut confiteretur, et emendaret ac relinqueret scelera sua, priusquam subito mortis superventu tempus omne pœnitendi et emendandi perderet. Verum ille, frequenter licet admonitus, spernebat verba salutis, seseque tempore sequente pœnitentiam acturum esse promittebat. Hæc inter tactus infirmitate, decidit in lectum, atque acri cœpit dolore torqueri. Ad quem ingressus rex, diligebat enim eum multum, hortabatur ut vel tunc antequam moreretur, pœnitentiam ageret commissorum. At ille [9]respondit, non se tunc velle confiteri peccata sed vehementer modicum, ac mihi ad legendum dedit, in quo omnia quæ unquam A bona feceram, intuens scripta reperi, et hæc erant nimium pauca et modica. Receperunt codicem, neque aliquid mihi dicebant. Tum subito supervenit exercitus malignorum et [1]horridorum vultu spirituum, domumque hanc et exterius obsedit, et intus maxima ex parte residens implevit. Tunc ille qui et obscuritate tenebrosæ faciei et primatu sedis major esse videbatur eorum, proferens codicem horrendæ visionis, et magnitudinis enormis, et ponderis pene importabilis, jussit uni ex satellitibus suis mihi ad legendum [2]deferre. Quem cum legissem, [3]inveni omnia scelera, non solum quæ opere vel verbo, sed etiam quæ tenuissima cogitatione peccavi, manifestissime in eo [4]tetricis esse descripta litteris. Moritur.

Sic loquebatur miser desperans, et non multo post defunctus pœnitentiam quam ad breve tempus cum fructu veniæ facere supersedit, in æternum sine fructu pœnis subditus facit. De quo constat quia, sicut beatus papa Gregorius de quibusdam scribit, non pro se ista cui non profuere, sed pro aliis viderit, qui ejus interitum cognoscentes, differre tempus pœnitentiæ, dum vacat, timerent, C ne improviso mortis articulo prævenți impœnitentes perirent. Quod autem codices diversos per bonos sive malos spiritus sibi vidit offerri, ob id Superna dispensatione factum est, ut meminerimus facta et cogitationes nostras non in ventum diffluere, sed ad examen summi Judicis cuncta servari; et sive per amicos angelos in fine nobis ostendenda, sive per hostes. Quod vero prius candidum codicem protulerunt angeli, deinde atrum dæmones; illi perparvum, isti enormem: animadvertendum est quod in prima ætate bona aliqua fecit, quæ tamen universa prave agendo juvenis obnubilavit. Qui si e contrario errores pueritiæ corrigere in adolescentia, ac bene faciendo a Dei oculis abscondere curasset, posset eorum numero sociari, de quibus ait Psalmus: [א] 'Beati quorum remissæ sunt iniquitates, et quorum tecta sunt peccata.' Hanc historiam, D sicut a venerabili antistite [ב] Pecthelmo didici, simpliciter ob salutem legentium, sive audientium narrandam esse putavi.

Novi autem ipse fratrem quem utinam non nossem, cujus etiam nomen si hoc aliquid prodesset dicere possem, positum in monasterio nobili, sed ipsum ignobiliter viventem. Corripiebatur quidem sedulo a fratribus ac majoribus loci, atque ad castigatiorem vitam converti ammonebatur. Et quamvis eos audire noluisset, tolerabatur tamen ab eis longanimiter, ob necessitatem operum ipsius exteriorum; erat enim fabrili arte singularis. Serviebat autem mul- E tum ebrietati et cæteris vitæ remissioris inlecebris; magisque in officina sua [10]die noctuque residere, quam ad psallendum atque orandum in ecclesia audiendumque cum fratribus verbum vitæ, concurrere consuerat. Unde accidit illi, quod solent dicere quidam, 'quia qui non vult ecclesiæ januam sponte humiliatus ingredi, necesse habet in januam inferni non sponte damnatus introduci.' Percussus enim languore atque ad extrema perductus vocavit fratres, et multum mœrens ac damnato similis cœpit narrare, quia videret inferos apertos et Sa-

A thanan [1]dimersum in [2]profundis tartari, [3]Caiphanque cum cæteris qui occiderunt Dominum, juxta eum flammis ultricibus contraditum: ‘in quorum vicinia,’ inquit, ‘heu misero mihi locum [4]despicio æternæ perditionis esse præparatum.’ Audientes hæc fratres, cœperunt diligenter exhortari, ut vel tunc positus adhuc in corpore pœnitentiam [5]faceret. Respondebat ille desperans: ‘Non est mihi modo tempus vitam mutandi, cum ipse viderim judicium meum jam esse completum.’

Talia dicens, sine viatico salutis obiit, et corpus ejus in ultimis est monasterii locis humatum, neque aliquis pro eo vel missas facere, vel psalmos cantare, vel saltem orare præsumebat. O quam grandi distantia divisit [6]Deus inter lucem et tenebras! Beatus protomartyr Stephanus passurus mortem pro veritate, vidit
B cælos apertos, vidit gloriam Dei, et Jesum stantem a dextris Dei; et ubi erat futurus ipse post mortem, ibi oculos mentis ante mortem, quo lætior occumberet, misit. At contra, faber iste tenebrosæ mentis et actionis, imminente morte, vidit aperta tartara, vidit damnationem diaboli et sequacium ejus; vidit etiam suum infelix inter tales carcerem, quo miserabilius ipse desperata salute periret, sed viventibus qui hæc cognovissent, causam salutis sua perditione relinqueret. Factum est hoc nuper in provincia Berniciorum; ac longe lateque diffamatum, [7]multos ad agendam et non differendam scelerum suorum pœnitudinem provocavit. Quod utinam exhinc etiam nostrarum lectione litterarum fiat.

C CAP. XV. UT PLURIMÆ SCOTTORUM ECCLESIÆ, INSTANTE ADAMNANO, CATHOLICUM PASCHA SUSCEPERINT; UTQUE IDEM LIBRUM DE LOCIS SANCTIS SCRIPSERIT.

Quo tempore plurima pars Scottorum in Hibernia, et nonnulla etiam de Brittonibus in Brittania rationabile et ecclesiasticum Paschalis observantiæ tempus Domino donante suscepit. Siquidem [a]Adamnan presbyter et abbas monachorum qui erant in insula Hii, cum legationis gratia missus a sua gente[b], venisset ad Aldfridum regem Anglorum, et aliquandiu in ea provincia moratus, videret ritus ecclesiæ canonicos; sed et a pluribus qui erant eruditiores esset sollerter admonitus, ne contra universalem ecclesiæ morem, vel in observantia Paschali, vel in [c]aliis quibusque decretis cum suis paucissimis, et in extremo mundi angulo positis vivere præsumeret, mutatus mente est; ita ut ea quæ viderat et

Adamnanus abbas Hiiensis. A. 687.

Qui cum domum rediisset, curavit suos qui erant in Hii, quive eidem erant subditi monasterio, ad eum quem cognoverat, quemque ipse toto ex corde susceperat, veritatis callem perducere, nec valuit. Navigavit [8]Hiberniam, et prædicans eis, ac modesta exhortatione declarans legitimum Paschæ tempus, plurimos eorum, et pene omnes qui ab Hiiensium dominio erant liberi, ab errore [9]avito correctos ad unitatem reduxit catholicam, ac legitimum Paschæ tempus observare perdocuit. Qui cum celebrato in Hibernia canonico Pascha, ad suam insulam revertisset, [10]suoque monasterio catholicam temporis Paschalis ob-
E servantiam instantissime prædicaret, nec tamen perficere quod conabatur posset, contigit eum ante expletum anni circulum migrasse de sæculo. Divina utique gratia disponente, ut vir unitatis ac pacis studiosissimus ante ad vitam raperetur æternam, quam redeunte tempore Paschali, graviorem cum eis qui eum ad veritatem sequi nolebant, cogeretur habere discordiam.

Scripsit de locis sanctis. Gall. epis. Arcuulfus.

[a]Scripsit idem vir de locis sanctis [b]librum legentibus multis utillimum; cujus A auctor erat docendo ac dictando Galliarum episcopus Arcuulfus, qui locorum gratia sanctorum venerat Hierosolymam, et lustrata omni terra repromissionis, Damascum quoque, Constantinopolim, Alexandriam, [1]multas maris insulas adierat; patriamque navigio revertens, vi tempestatis in Occidentalia Brittaniæ littora delatus est: ac post multa, ad memoratum Christi famulum Adamnanum perveniens, ubi doctus in Scripturis sanctorumque locorum gnarus esse compertus est, libentissime est ab illo susceptus, [2]libentius auditus; adeo ut quæque ille se in locis sanctis memoratu digna vidisse testabatur, cuncta mox iste litteris mandare curaverit. Fecitque opus, ut dixi, [3]multum utile, et maxime illis qui longius ab eis locis in quibus patriarchæ et apostoli erant, secreti, ea tantum de his quæ lectione didicerint, norunt. Porrexit autem librum hunc Adamnan B Aldfrido regi, ac per ejus est largitionem etiam minoribus ad legendum contraditus. Scriptor quoque ipse multis ab eo muneribus donatus, [4]patriam remissus est. De cujus scriptis aliqua decerpere, ac nostræ huic historiæ inserere commodum fore legentibus reor.

Scripsit ergo de loco Dominicæ Nativitatis in hunc modum: Bethleem, civitas David, in dorso sita est angusto ex omni parte vallibus [5]circumdato, ab Occidente in Orientem mille passibus longa, [6]humili sine turribus muro per extrema plani verticis instructo; in cujus Orientali angulo quasi quoddam naturale semian- C trum est, cujus exterior pars Nativitatis Dominicæ fuisse dicitur locus; interior 'Præsepe Domini' nominatur. Hæc spelunca tota interius pretioso marmore tecta, supra locum ubi Dominus natus specialius traditur, S. Mariæ grandem gestat ecclesiam. Scripsit item hoc modo de loco Passionis ac Resurrectionis illius: [7]Ingressis a Septemtrionali parte urbem Hierosolymam, primum de locis sanctis pro conditione platearum divertendum est ad ecclesiam Constantinianam quæ Martyrium appellatur. Hanc Constantinus imperator, eo quod ibi crux Domini ab Helena [8]matre reperta sit, magnifico et regio cultu construxit. Dehinc ab Occasu Golgothana videtur ecclesia, in qua etiam rupis apparet illa, quæ quondam [9]ipsam adfixo' Domini corpore crucem [10]pertulit, argenteam modo pergrandem sustinens crucem, pendente magna desuper ærea rota cum lam- D padibus. Infra ipsum vero locum Dominicæ crucis, excisa in petra crypta est, in qua super altare pro defunctis honoratis sacrificium solet offerri, positis interim in platea corporibus. Hujus quoque ad Occasum ecclesiæ, Anastasis, hoc est, Resurrectionis Dominicæ rotunda ecclesia, tribus cincta parietibus, duodecim columnis sustentatur, inter parietes singulos latum habens spatium viæ, quæ tria altaria in tribus locis parietis medii continet, hoc est, Australi, Aquilonali, et Occidentali. Hæc bis quaternas portas, id est, introitus per tres e regione parietes habet, e quibus quatuor ad Vulturnum, et quatuor ad Eurum spectant. Hujus in medio monumentum Domini rotundum petra excisum est, cujus culmen intrinsecus stans homo manu contingere potest, ab Oriente habens introitum, cui lapis ille magnus adpositus est; quod intrinsecus ferramentorum E vestigia usque in præsens ostendit. Nam extrinsecus usque ad culminis summitatem totum marmore tectum est. Summum vero culmen auro ornatum, auream magnam gestat crucem. In hujus ergo monumenti Aquilonali parte sepulcrum Domini in eadem petra excisum[11], longitudinis septem pedum, trium mensura palmarum pavimento altius eminet; introitum habens a latere Meridiano, ubi die noctuque duodecim lampades ardent, quatuor intra sepulcrum,

Cap. XVII. Quæ item de loco Ascensionis Dominicæ, et sepulchris patriarcharum[2].

De loco quoque Dominicæ Ascensionis præfatus auctor hoc modo refert. Mons Olivarum altitudine monti Sion par est, sed latitudine et longitudine præstat, exceptis vitibus et olivis raræ ferax arboris, frumenti quoque et hordei fertilis. Neque enim brucosa, sed herbosa et florida soli illius est qualitas: in
B cujus summo vertice, ubi Dominus ad cælos ascendit, ecclesia rotunda grandis, ternas per circuitum cameratas habet porticus, desuper tectas. Interior namque domus propter Dominici corporis meatum camerari et tegi non potuit: altare ad Orientem habens [3]angusto culmine protectum, in cujus medio ultima Domini vestigia, cælo desuper patente ubi ascendit, visuntur. Quæ cum quotidie a credentibus terra tollatur, nihilominus manet, eandemque adhuc speciem veluti impressis [4]signata vestigiis servat. Hæc circa ærea rota jacet, usque ad cervicem alta, ab Occasu habens introitum, pendente desuper in trochleis, magna lampade, [5]tota die et nocte lucente. In Occidentali ejusdem ecclesiæ parte [6]fenestræ octo, totidemque e regione lampades in funibus pendentes, usque Hierosolymam per vitrum fulgent; quarum lux corda intuentium cum quadam
C alacritate et compunctione pavefacere dicitur. In die Ascensionis Dominicæ per annos singulos, missa peracta, validi flaminis procella desursum venire consuevit, et omnes qui in ecclesia adfuerint terræ prosternere.

Mons Olivarum.

De situ etiam [7]Chebron et monumentis Patrum ita scribit: Chebron quondam civitas et metropolis regni David, nunc ruinis tantum quid [8]tunc fuerit ostendens. Uno ad Orientem stadio speluncam duplicem in valle habet, ubi sepulchra patriarcharum quadrato muro circumdantur, capitibus versis ad Aquilonem; et hæc singula singulis tecta lapidibus instar basilicæ dolatis; trium patriarcharum candidis, Adam obscurioris et vilioris operis, qui haud longe ab illis [9]ad Borealem, extremamque muri illius [10]partem pausat. Trium quoque feminarum viliores et minores memoriæ cernuntur.

D [11]Mamre collis mille passibus [12]a monumentis his ad Boream, herbosus valde et floridus, campestrem habens in vertice planitiem; in cujus Aquilonali parte quercus Abrahæ, duorum hominum altitudinis truncus, ecclesia circumdata est. Hæc de opusculis excerpta præfati scriptoris ad sensum quidem verborum illius, sed brevioribus strictisque comprehensa sermonibus, nostris ad utilitatem legentium historiis indere placuit. Plura voluminis illius [13]si qui' scire delectat, vel in ipso illo volumine, vel in eo quod de illo dudum strictim excerpsimus, epitomate requirat.

Scripsit et de virginitate librum eximium, quem in exemplum Sedulii geminato opere, et versibus hexametris, et prosa composuit. Scripsit et alia nonnulla, utpote vir undecumque doctissimus: nam et sermone nitidus, et scripturarum, ut dixi, tam liberalium quam ecclesiasticarum erat eruditione mirandus. A CAP. XIX. UT COINRED MERCIORUM, ET OFFA ORIENTALIUM SAXONUM [1]REX IN MONACHICO HABITU [2]ROMÆ VITAM FINIERINT; ET DE VITA VEL OBITU UILFRIDI EPISCOPI.

A. 709. Coinred it Romam.

Nam venit Romam, ibique adtonsus, pontificatum habente [b]Constantino; ac monachus factus, ad limina apostolorum, in precibus, jejuniis et eleemosynis usque ad diem permansit ultimum; succedente in regnum [c]Ceolredo filio Aedilredi, qui ante ipsum Coinredum idem regnum tenebat. Venit autem cum illo et filius Sigheri regis Orientalium Saxonum, cujus [*]supra meminimus, vocabulo [d]Offa, juvenis amantissimæ ætatis et venustatis, totæque suæ genti ad tenenda servandaque regni sceptra exoptatissimus. A. 709. Uilfrid episcopus Ebor. obit.

Eodem sane anno quo hi Brittanniam reliquere, antistes eximius Uilfrid, post quadraginta et quinque annos accepti episcopatus, diem clausit extremum in provincia quæ vocatur Inundalum[×]: corpusque ejus loculo inditum, perlatum est in monasterium ipsius, quod dicitur Inhrypum[ϒ], et juxta honorem tanto pontifici congruum, in ecclesia beati apostoli Petri sepultum. Qui cum Brittaniam remeans in Galliarum partes devenisset, tactus est infirmitate repentina, et ea crescente adeo pressus, ut neque equo vehi posset, sed manibus ministrorum portaretur in grabato. Sic delatus [12]in Maeldum civitatem Galliæ, quatuor diebus ac noctibus quasi mortuus jacebat, halitu tantum pertenui quia viveret demonstrans. Cumque ita sine cibo et potu, sine voce et auditu quatriduo perseveraret, quinta demum [13]inlucescente die, quasi de gravi experrectus somno exsurgens resedit; apertisque oculis, vidit circa se choros psallentium simul et flentium fratrum; ac modicum suspirans interrogavit, ubi esset Acca presbyter; qui statim vocatus intravit, et videns eum melius habentem ac loqui jam valentem, flexis genibus gratias egit Deo cum omnibus qui aderant fratribus. Et cum parum consedissent, ac de supernis judiciis trepidi, [14]aliqua confabulari′ cœpissent: jussit pontifex cæteros ad horam egredi, et ad Accan presbyterum ita loqui exorsus est: ‘ Visio mihi modo tremenda apparuit, quam te audire ac silentio tegere volo, donec sciam quid de me fieri velit Deus. A Adstitit enim mihi quidam candido præclarus habitu, dicens se Michahelem esse archangelum; et ob hoc, inquit, missus sum ut te a morte revocem: donavit enim tibi Dominus vitam per orationes ac lacrymas discipulorum ac fratrum tuorum, et per intercessionem beatæ suæ genitricis semperque virginis Mariæ. Quapropter dico tibi, quia modo quidem ab infirmitate hac sanaberis; sed paratus esto, quia post quadriennium revertens, visitabo te; patriam vero perveniens, maximam possessionum [1]tuarum quæ tibi ablatæ sunt, portionem recipies, atque in pace tranquilla vitam terminabis.' Epistola Ceolfridi ad Naitanum de Pascha.

'Domino excellentissimo et gloriosissimo regi NAITANO, CEOLFRID abbas in Domino salutem. Catholicam sancti Paschæ observantiam, quam a nobis, rex Deo devote, religioso studio quæsisti, promptissime ac libentissime tuo desiderio, juxta quod ab apostolica sede didicimus, patefacere satagimus. Scimus namque cælitus sanctæ ecclesiæ donatum, quotiens ipsi rerum domini, discendæ, docendæ, custodiendæ veritati operam impendunt. Nam et vere omnino dixit quidam sæcularium scriptorum, quia felicissimo [2] mundus statu ageretur, si vel reges philosopharentur, vel regnarent philosophi. Quod si de philosophia hujus mundi vere intellegere,[3] de statu hujus mundi merito [4] diligere potuit homo [5] hujus mundi; quanto magis [6] civibus patriæ cælestis in hoc [7] mundo
C peregrinantibus optandum est et totis animi viribus supplicandum, ut quo plus in mundo quique valent, eo amplius ejus qui super omnia est Judicis mandatis auscultare contendant, atque ad hæc observanda secum eos quoque qui sibi commissi sunt, [8] exemplis simul et auctoritate instituant? Tres sunt ergo regulæ sacris inditæ litteris, quibus Paschæ celebrandi tempus nobis præfinitum, nulla prorsus humana licet auctoritate mutari; e quibus duæ in Lege

Mosi divinitus statutæ, tertia in Evangelio per effectum Dominicæ Passionis et Resurrectionis adjuncta est. Præcepit [9] enim Lex ut Pascha primo mense anni, et tertia ejusdem mensis septimana, id est, a quinta decima die usque ad vicesimam primam fieri deberet: [10] additum est per institutionem apostolicam ex Evangelio, ut in ipsa tertia septimana diem Dominicam exspectare, atque
D in ea temporis Paschalis initium tenere debeamus. Quam videlicet regulam triformem quisquis rite custodierit, nunquam in adnotatione festi Paschalis errabit. Verum si de his singulis enucleatius ac latius audire desideras, scriptum est in Exodo, ubi liberandus de Aegypto populus Israel, primum Pascha facere jubetur, quia dixerit Dominus ad Moysen et Aaron: [ר] 'Mensis iste vobis principium mensium primus erit in mensibus anni. Loquimini ad universum cœtum filiorum Israel, et dicite eis: Decima die mensis hujus tollat unusquisque agnum per familias et domos suas.' Et paulo post: [+] 'Et servabitis eum usque ad quartam decimam [11] mensis hujus. Immolabitque eum universa multitudo filiorum Israel ad vesperam.' Quibus verbis manifestissime constat, quod ita in observatione Paschali mentio fit diei quartædecimæ, ut non tamen
E in ipsa die quartadecima Pascha fieri præcipiatur; sed adveniente tandem [12] vespera diei quartædecimæ, id est, quintadecima luna, quæ initium tertiæ septimanæ faciat, in cæli faciem prodeunte, agnus immolari jubeatur: et quod

ipsa sit nox quintædecimæ lunæ, in qua percussis Aegyptiis, Israel est a longa servitute redemptus. ‘Septem,’ inquit, ‘diebus azyma comedetis.’ Quibus item verbis tota tertia septimana ejusdem primi mensis decernitur sollemnis esse debere. Sed ne putaremus easdem septem dies a quartadecima usque ad vicesimam esse [1]computandas, continuo subjecit: ‘In die primo non erit fermentum in domibus vestris. [2]Quicumque comederit fermentum,’ peribit anima illa de Israel. A die primo usque ad diem septimum,’ et cætera, usquedum ait: ‘In eadem enim ipsa die educam exercitum vestrum de terra Aegypti.’ Primum ergo diem azymorum appellat eum in quo exercitum eorum esset educturus de Aegypto. Constat autem quia non quartadecima die, in cujus vespera agnus est immolatus, et quæ proprie Pascha sive Phase dicitur; sed quintadecima sunt educti ex Aegypto, sicut in libro Numerorum apertissime scribitur. Profecti igitur de Ramesse quintadecima die mensis primi, altera die [3]Phase filii Israel in manu excelsa. Septem ergo dies azymorum, in quarum prima eductus est populus Domini ex Aegypto, ab initio, ut diximus, tertiæ septimanæ, hoc est, a quintadecima die mensis primi, usque ad vicesimam primam ejusdem mensis diem completam computari oportet. Porro dies quartadecima extra hunc numerum [4]separatim sub Paschæ titulo prænotatur, sicut Exodi sequentia patenter edocent: ubi cum dictum esset: [א]‘In eadem enim ipsa die educam exercitum vestrum de terra Aegypti;’ protinus [5]adjunctum est: ‘Et custodietis diem istum in generationes vestras ritu perpetuo. Primo mense, quartadecima die mensis comedetis azyma usque ad diem vicesimam primam ejusdem mensis ad vesperam. Septem diebus fermentatum non invenietur in domibus vestris.’ Quis enim non videat, a quartadecima usque ad vicesimam primam, non septem solummodo, sed octo potius esse dies, si et ipsa quartadecima annumeretur? Sin autem, ut diligentius explorata Scripturæ veritas docet, a vespera diei quartædecimæ usque ad vesperam vicesimæ primæ computaverimus, videbimus profecto quod ita dies quartadecima vesperam suam [6]in festi Paschalis initium [7]prorogat, ut non amplius tota [8]sacra sollemnitas quam septem tantummodo noctes cum totidem diebus comprehendat: unde et vera esse probatur nostra diffinitio, qua tempus Paschale primo mense anni, et tertia ejus hebdomada celebrandum esse diximus. Veraciter enim tertia agitur hebdomada, quod a vespera quartædecimæ diei incipit, et in vespera vicesimæ primæ completur. Postquam vero Pascha nostrum immolatus est Christus, diemque nobis Dominicam, quæ apud antiquos una vel prima sabbati, sive sabbatorum vocatur, gaudio suæ resurrectionis fecit esse sollemnem; ita hanc [9]apostolica traditio festis Paschalibus inseruit, ut nil omnimodis de tempore Paschæ legalis præoccupandum, nihil minuendum esse decerneret. Quin potius statuit ut exspectaretur juxta præceptum Legis idem primus anni mensis, exspectaretur quartadecima dies illius, exspectaretur vespera ejusdem. Et cum hæc dies in sabbatum forte inciderit, tolleret unusquisque agnum per familias et domos suas, et [10]immolaret eum ad vesperam, id est, præpararent omnes ecclesiæ per orbem, quæ unam catholicam faciunt, panem et vinum in mysterium carnis et sanguinis Agni immaculati, qui abstulit peccata mundi: et præcedente congrua lectionum, orationum[11], cæremoniarum Paschalium sollemnitate, offerrent hæc Domino in spem futuræ suæ redemptionis. Ipsa est enim eadem nox in qua de Aegypto per sanguinem agni Israelitica plebs erepta est; ipsa in qua per resurrectionem Christi liberatus est a morte æterna populus omnis Dei. Mane autem inlucescente die Dominica, primam Paschalis festi diem celebrarent. Ipsa est enim dies in qua resurrectionis suæ gloriam Dominus multifario piæ revelationis gaudio discipulis patefecit. Ipsa prima dies azymorum, de qua multum distincte in Levitico scriptum est: [א]‘Mense primo, quartadecima die mensis[12], ad vesperam, Phase

A Domini est, et quintadecima die mensis hujus sollemnitas azymorum Domini est. Septem diebus azyma comedetis. Dies primus erit celeberrimus sanctusque.' Si ergo fieri [1]posset ut semper in diem quintumdecimum primi mensis, id est, in lunam quintamdecimam Dominica dies incurreret, uno semper eodemque tempore cum antiquo Dei populo, quanquam sacramentorum genere discreto, sicut una eademque fide Pascha celebrare possemus. Quia vero dies septimanæ non æquali cum luna tramite procurrit, decrevit apostolica traditio, quæ per B. Petrum Romæ prædicata, per Marcum evangelistam et interpretem ipsius Alexandriæ confirmata est, ut adveniente primo mense, adveniente [2]in eo' vespera diei quartædecimæ, exspectetur etiam dies Dominica, a quintadecima usque ad vicesimam primam diem ejusdem mensis. In quacumque
B enim harum inventa fuerit, merito in ea Pascha celebrabitur: quia nimirum hæc ad numerum pertinet illarum septem dierum, quibus azyma celebrar jubetur. Itaque fit ut nunquam Pascha nostrum a septimana mensis primi tertia in utramvis partem declinet: sed vel totam eam, id est, omnes septem legalium azymorum dies, vel certe aliquos de illis teneat. Nam etsi saltem unum ex eis, hoc est, ipsum septimum adprehenderit, quem tam excellenter Scriptura commendat; [A]' Dies autem,' [3]inquiens, ' septimus erit celebrior et sanctior, nullumque servile opus fiet in eo;' nullus arguere nos poterit, quod [4]non recte Dominicum Paschæ diem, quem de Evangelio suscepimus, in ipsa quam Lex statuit, tertia primi mensis hebdomada celebremus. Cujus observantiæ catholica ratione patefacta, patet e contrario error inrationabilis eorum qui præfixos
C in Lege terminos, nulla cogente necessitate, vel anticipare, vel transcendere præsumunt. Namque sine ratione necessitatis alicujus anticipant illi tempus in Lege præscriptum, [5]qui Dominicum Paschæ diem a quartadecima mensis primi, usque ad vicesimam putant lunam esse servandum. Cum enim a vespera diei tertiædecimæ vigilias sanctæ noctis celebrare incipiunt, claret quod [6]illam in exordio [7]sui Paschæ diem statuunt, cujus nullam omnino mentionem in decreto Legis inveniunt. Et cum vicesima prima die mensis Pascha Dominicum celebrare refugiunt, patet profecto, quod illam per omnia diem a sua sollemnitate secernunt, quam Lex majore præ cæteris festivitate memorabilem sæpenumero commendat: sicque diem Paschæ ordine perverso, et aliquando in secunda hebdomada totam compleant, et nunquam in hebdomadæ tertiæ die D septimo ponant; rursumque qui a sextadecima die mensis sæpedicti usque ad vicesimam secundam Pascha celebrandum magis autumant, non minore utique errore, tametsi altero latere, a recto veritatis tramite divertunt, et veluti naufragia Scyllæ fugientes, in Charybdis voraginem submergendi decidunt. Nam cum a luna sextadecima primi mensis oriente, id est, a vespera diei quintædecimæ Pascha incipiendum doceant; nimirum constat quia quartamdecimam diem mensis ejusdem, quam Lex primitus et præcipue commendat, a sua prorsus sollemnitate secludunt: ita ut quintædecimæ, in qua populus Dei ab [8]Aegyptia servitute redemptus est, et in qua Dominus suo mundum sanguine a peccatorum tenebris liberavit, in qua etiam sepultus spem nobis post mortem beatæ quietis tribuit, vix vesperam tangant. Iidemque pœnam erroris sui in semetipsos reci-
E pientes, cum in vicesima secunda die mensis, Paschæ diem statuunt Dominicum, legitimos utique terminos Paschæ aperta transgressione violant, utpote qui ab illius diei vespera Pascha incipiunt, in qua hoc Lex consummari et perfici debere decrevit. Illam in Pascha diem adsignent primam, cujus in Lege mentio nulla usquam reperitur, id est, quartæ primam septimanæ. Qui [9]utrique non solum in diffinitione et computo lunaris ætatis, sed et in mensis primi nonnunquam inventione falluntur. Quæ disputatio major est, quam epistola [10]hac vel valeat comprehendi, vel debeat. Tantum hoc dicam, quod per æquinoctium vernale semper inerrabiliter possit inveniri, qui mensis juxta computum lunæ, primus

palmam tenent, duodecimo Kalendarum Aprilium die provenire consuevit, ut etiam ipsi horologica inspectione [1] probamus. Quæcumque ergo luna ante æquinoctium plena est, quartadecima videlicet vel quintadecima existens, hæc ad præcedentis anni novissimum pertinet mensem, ideoque Paschæ celebrando habilis non est. Quæ vero post æquinoctium vel in ipso æquinoctio suum plenilunium habet, in hac absque ulla dubietate, quia primi mensis est, et anti-quos Pascha celebrare solitos, et nos ubi Dominica dies advenerit, celebrare debere noscendum est. Quod ita fieri oportere illa nimirum ratio cogit, quia in Genesi scriptum est, quod fecit Deus duo luminaria magna; luminare majus, ut præesset diei; et luminare minus, ut præesset nocti: vel, sicut alia dicit B editio, luminare majus in inchoationem diei; et luminare minus in inchoationem noctis. Sicut ergo prius sol a medio procedens Orientis, æquinoctium vernale suo præfixit exortu; deinde luna, sole ad [2] vesperam occidente, et ipsa plena a medio secuta est Orientis: ita omnibus annis idem primus lunæ mensis eodem necesse est ordine servari, ut non ante æquinoctium, sed vel ipso æquinoctii die, sicut in principio factum est, vel eo transcenso plenilunium habere debeat.
At si uno saltem die plenilunium tempus æquinoctii præcesserit, non hanc primo [3] mensi anni incipientis, sed ultimo potius præteriti lunam esse adscribendam; et ideo festis Paschalibus inhabilem, memorata ratio probat. Quod si mysticam quoque vos in his rationem audire delectat, primo mense anni, qui etiam mensis novorum dictus est, Pascha facere jubemur; quia renovato ad C amorem cælestium spiritu mentis nostræ, Sacramenta Dominicæ Resurrectionis, et ereptionis nostræ celebrare debemus, tertia ejusdem mensis septimana facere præcipimur; quia ante Legem et sub Lege promissus, tertio tempore sæculi cum gratia venit Ipse qui Pascha nostrum immolaretur Christus: quia tertia post immolationem suæ passionis die resurgens a mortuis, hanc Dominicam vocari et in ea nos annuatim Paschalia ejusdem resurrectionis voluit festa celebrare:
quia nos quoque ita solum veraciter ejus sollemnia celebramus, si per fidem, spem et caritatem Pascha, id est, transitum de hoc mundo ad Patrem, cum illo facere curamus. Post æquinoctium veris, plenilunium mensis præcipimur observare Paschalis; ut videlicet primo sol longiorem nocte faciat diem, deinde luna plenum suæ lucis orbem mundo præsentet; quia primo quidem Sol jus- D titiæ, in cujus pennis est sanitas, id est, Dominus Jesus, per resurrectionis suæ triumphum cunctas mortis tenebras superavit: ac sic ascendens in cælos, misso desuper Spiritu, ecclesiam suam quæ sæpe lunæ vocabulo designatur, internæ gratiæ luce replevit. Quem videlicet ordinem nostræ salutis propheta con-

A certissima gaudere signemus. Hic autem quem vobis sequendum monstramus, computus Paschæ, decennovenali circulo continetur; qui dudum quidem, hoc est, ipsis apostolorum temporibus, jam servari in ecclesia cœpit, maxime Romæ et Aegypti, ut supra jam diximus. Sed per industriam Eusebii qui a beato martyre Pamphilo cognomen habet, distinctius in ordinem compositus est; ut quod eatenus per Alexandriæ pontificem singulis annis per omnes ecclesias mandari consueverat, jam deinde congesta in ordinem serie lunæ quartædecimæ, facillime posset ab omnibus sciri. Cujus computum Paschalis Theophilus Alexandriæ præsul in centum annorum tempus Theodosio imperatori composuit. Item successor ejus Cyrillus seriem nonaginta et quinque annorum in quinque decennovenalibus circulis comprehendit: post quem Dionysius Exiguus
B totidem alios ex ordine pari schemate subnexuit, qui ad nostra usque tempora pertingebant. Quibus termino adpropinquantibus, tanta hodie calculatorum exuberat copia, ut etiam in nostris per Brittaniam ecclesiis plures sint qui mandatis memoriæ [1]veteribus illis Aegyptiorum argumentis, facillime possint in quotlibet spatia temporum Paschales protendere circulos, etiamsi ad quingentos usque et triginta duos [2]voluerint annos; quibus expletis, omnia quæ ad solis et lunæ, mensis et septimanæ consequentiam spectant, eodem quo prius ordine recurrunt. Ideo autem circulos eosdem temporum instantium vobis mittere supersedimus, quia de ratione tantum temporis Paschalis instrui quærentes, ipsos vobis circulos Paschæ catholicos abundare probastis.

C suram quoque, de qua pariter vobis litteras fieri voluistis, hortor ut ecclesiasticam et Christianæ fidei congruam habere curetis. Et quidem scimus quia neque apostoli omnes uno eodemque sunt modo adtonsi, neque nunc ecclesia catholica sicut una fide, spe et caritate in Deum consentit, ita etiam una atque indissimili totum per orbem tonsuræ sibi forma congruit. Denique ut superiora, id est, patriarcharum tempora respiciamus, Job exemplar patien-

At Joseph, et ipse castitatis, humilitatis, pietatis cæterarumque virtutum executor ac doctor eximius, cum servitio absolvendus, attonsus esse legitur: patet profecto quia tempore servitutis, intonsis in carcere crinibus manere solebat. Ecce uterque vir Dei diversum ab altero vultus habitum foris præmonstrabat, quorum tamen intus conscientia in parili virtutum sibi gratia concordabat. Verum, [4]etsi profiteri nobis liberum est, quia tonsuræ discrimen non noceat, quibus pura in Deum fides, et caritas in proximum sincera est; maxime cum nunquam patribus catholicis sicut de Paschæ vel fidei diversitate conflictus, ita etiam de tonsuræ differentia legatur aliqua fuisse controversia; inter omnes tamen quas vel in ecclesia, vel in universo hominum genere reperimus tonsuras, nullam magis sequendam nobis amplectendamque jure dixerim, ea quam in capite suo gestabat ille, cui se confitenti Dominus ait: ⁂ 'Tu es Petrus, et super hanc pe- ⁂ Mat xvi. 18.

Neque vero ob id tantum in coronam [8]adtondimur, quia Petrus ita attonsus est; sed quia Petrus in memoriam Dominicæ passionis ita attonsus est, idcirco et nos qui per eandem passionem salvari desideramus, ipsius passionis signum cum illo in vertice, summa videlicet corporis nostri parte gestamus. A regnantem, ad nostram omnium pacem custodiat incolumem, dilectissime in Christo fili.'

Hæc epistola cum præsente rege Naitono, multisque viris doctioribus esset lecta, ac diligenter ab his qui intelligere poterant, in linguam ejus propriam interpretata, multum de ejus exhortatione gavisus esse perhibetur; ita ut [1]exsurgens de medio optimatum suorum consessu genua flecteret in terram, Deo gratias agens, quod tale munusculum de terra Anglorum mereretur accipere. 'Et quidem et antea novi,' inquit, 'quia hæc erat vera Paschæ celebratio, sed in [2]tantum modo' rationem hujus temporis [3]observandi cognosco, ut parum mihi [4]omnimodis videar de his antea intellexisse. Unde palam profiteor, vobisque qui adsidetis præsentibus protestor, quia hoc observare tempus Paschæ cum B universa mea gente perpetuo volo; [5]hanc accipere debere tonsuram quam plenam esse rationis [6]audimus, omnes qui in meo regno sunt clericos decerno.' Nec mora, quæ dixerat, regia auctoritate perfecit. Statim namque jussu publico mittebantur ad transcribendum, discendum, observandum, per universas Pictorum provincias circuli Paschæ decennovenales, oblitteratis per omnia erroneis octoginta et quatuor annorum circulis. Adtondebantur omnes in coronam ministri altaris, [7]ac monachi: et quasi novo se discipulatui beatissimi apostolorum principis Petri subditam, ejusque tutandam patrocinio gens correcta gaudebat.

Cap. XXII. Ut Hiienses monachi cum subjectis sibi monasteriis canonicum C prædicante Ecgbercto celebrare Pascha cœperint.

Nec multo post illi quoque qui insulam [a]Hii incolebant monachi Scotticæ nationis, cum his quæ sibi erant subdita monasteriis, ad ritum Paschæ ac tonsuræ canonicum Domino procurante perducti sunt. Siquidem anno ab Incarnatione Domini septingentesimo sextodecimo, quo [b]Osredo occiso, [c]Coenred gubernacula regni Nordanhymbrorum suscepit, cum venisset ad eos de Hibernia Deo amabilis, et cum omni honorificentia nominandus pater ac sacerdos Ecgberct, cujus superius memoriam [8]sæpius [A] fecimus, honorifice ab eis et multo cum gaudio susceptus est. Qui quoniam et doctor suavissimus, et eorum quæ agenda docebat erat exsecutor devotissimus, libenter auditus ab universis, immutavit piis ac sedulis exhortationibus inveteratam illam traditionem parentum eorum, D de quibus apostolicum illum licet proferre sermonem, quod æmulationem Dei habebant, sed non secundum scientiam; catholicoque illos, atque apostolico more celebrationem, ut diximus, præcipuæ sollemnitatis sub figura coronæ [9]perpetis agere perdocuit. Quod mira divinæ constat factum dispensatione pietatis, ut quoniam gens illa [10]quam noverat scientiam divinæ cognitionis libenter ac sine invidia populis Anglorum communicare curavit; ipsa quoque postmodum per gentem Anglorum in eis [11]quæ minus habuerat, ad perfectam vivendi normam perveniret. Sicut e contra Brittones, qui nolebant Anglis eam quam habebant, fidei Christianæ notitiam pandere, credentibus jam populis Anglorum et in regula fidei catholicæ per omnia instructis, ipsi adhuc inveterati et claudicantes a semitis suis, et capita sine corona prætendunt, et sollemnia E Christi sine ecclesiæ Christi societate venerantur.

Domini Ecgberct annos tredecim in præfata insula, quam ipse velut nova quadam relucente gratia ecclesiasticæ societatis et pacis Christo consecraverat; annoque Dominicæ Incarnationis septingentesimo vicesimo [1]nono, quo Pascha Dominicum octavo Kalendarum Maiarum die celebrabatur, cum missarum sollemnia in memoriam ejusdem Dominicæ Resurrectionis celebrasset, eodem die et ipse migravit ad Dominum, ac gaudium summæ festivitatis quod cum fratribus quos ad unitatis gratiam converterat, inchoavit, cum Domino et apostolis cæterisque cæli civibus complevit, immo idipsum celebrare sine fine non desinit. Mira autem divinæ dispensatio provisionis erat, quod venerabilis vir non solum in Pascha transivit de hoc mundo ad Patrem; verum etiam cum eo die Pascha celebraretur, quo nunquam prius in eis locis celebrari solebat. Gaudebant ergo fratres de [2]agnitione certa et catholica temporis Paschalis; lætabantur de patrocinio pergentis ad Dominum patris, per quem fuerant correcti; gratulabatur ille quod eatenus in carne servatus est, donec illum in Pascha diem suos auditores, quem semper antea vitabant, suscipere ac secum agere videret. Sicque certus de illorum correctione reverentissimus pater exultavit, ut videret diem Domini: vidit, et gavisus est.

Anno post quem proximo Tobias, Hrofensis ecclesiæ præsul defunctus est, vir, ut [*]supra meminimus, doctissimus. Erat enim discipulus beatæ memoriæ magistrorum, Theodori archiepiscopi et abbatis Hadriani: unde, ut dictum est, cum eruditione litterarum vel ecclesiasticarum vel generalium, ita Græcam quoque cum Latina didicit linguam, ut tam notas ac familiares sibi eas, quam [5]nativitatis suæ loquelam haberet. Sepultus vero est in porticu S. Pauli apostoli, quam intro [b]ecclesiam S. Andreæ sibi ipse in locum sepulcri fecerat. Post quem episcopatus officium [c]Alduulf, Berctualdo archiepiscopo consecrante suscepit.

THE [b] island of Britain is eight hundred miles long and two hundred miles broad: and here in this island are five tongues; English, British, Scottish, Pictish, and Latin. The first inhabitants of this land were Britons; they came from *Armenia, and first settled in the south of Britain. Then befel it that Picts came from the south from Scythia, with long ships, not many, and first landed in North Hibernia, and there entreated the Scots that they might there abide. But they would not permit them, for they said that they could not all abide there together. And then the Scots said, 'We may nevertheless give you counsel. We know another island eastward of this, where ye may dwell if ye will, and if any one withstand you, we will assist you, so that you may subdue it.' Then went the Picts and subdued this land northwards; the southern part the Britons had, as we before have said. And the Picts obtained wives for themselves of the Scots, on this condition, that they should always chuse their royal lineage on the woman's side; which they have held ever since. And then befel it in the course of years that some part of the Scots departed from Hibernia into Britain, and conquered some portion of the land. And their leader was called Reoda; from whom they are named Dalreodi.

[a] The Anglo-Saxon Chronicle is apparently the work of many successive hands, and extends in different copies from the time of Cæsar's invasion to the middle of the 12th century. It has been repeatedly printed, but as the previous editions, as well as the manner in which the present edition has been formed, have been already described in the preface to this volume, it may suffice to repeat, that, with the exception of the insertions placed within brackets, the text to the year 975 is taken from the MS. here designated by the letter A.; from that period to 1079 from MSS. A. C. D. E. F. and G., and from thence to the conclusion from MS. E.: and that such portions of the different MSS. as are concurrent with the text, but will not conveniently admit of collation, are given separately.

Sixty years before Christ was born, Gaius Julius, emperor of the Romans, with eighty ships, sought Britain. There he was at first distressed by a fierce battle, and a large portion of his army was dispersed. And then he left his army to abide among the [b]Scots, and went south into Gaul, and there collected six hundred ships, with which he came again into Britain. And as they first rushed together, the emperor's [×]'gerefa' was slain: he was called Labienus. Then the Welsh took large and sharp stakes and drove them into the fording place of a certain river under water; this river was called Thames. When the Romans discovered this, then would they not go over the ford. Then fled the Britons to the wood-wastes, and the emperor conquered very many of their chief cities after a great struggle, and departed again into Gaul.

[a] The notices which occur between this and the year 449 are derived principally from Jerome's translation of Eusebius' Chronicle, and its continuations, and from Bede's Chronicle and Ecclesiastical History, to the latter of which the few incidents relating to Britain during that period are owing. The Latin additions of MS. E., which begin at A. 114, and are inserted among the various readings, are apparently taken from a chronicle originally compiled in Normandy, of which several copies are still to be found. It may be added, that during the period above mentioned the chronology is of no value, as it scarcely ever accords with its presumed authorities.

[b] Some MSS. of Bede for 'hiberna' read 'Hibernia;' whence, Hibernia being the proper country of the Scots, the Roman forces are sent thither by the compilers.

[a] Herod, Antipater, Lysias, and Philippus divided, &c. Bede, from Eusebius. Here it is depraved.

[b] The translation assumes the text to have been 'he ȝehꝓıeꝓede' for 'he ȝehꝓıeꝓode.' The MSS. B.C.D. read 'ȝehpýꝓde,' or the contracted form of the same term. But as the orthography of MS. A. is seldom erroneous, it is not impossible that the original reading was 'ȝehꝓıeꝓede pæꝛun.'

A. 46. This year Herod died; he who slew James, one year before his own death.

A. 47. This year Claudius, second of the Roman kings, sought the land of Britain, and brought under his power the greater part of the island, and also subjected the Orkney Islands to the dominion of the Romans. This war he effected in the fourth year of his reign: and in the same year was the great famine in Syria, which was foretold in the Acts of the Apostles through Agabus the prophet. Then Nero succeeded to the empire after Claudius: he nearly lost the island of Britain through his cowardice. Mark the Evangelist begins to write the gospel in Egypt.

A. 48. 49.

A. 50. This year Paul was sent in bonds to Rome.

A. 51.–61.

A. 62. This year James, the brother of our Lord, suffered martyrdom.

A. 63. This year Mark the Evangelist died.

A. 64.–68.

A. 69. This year Peter and Paul suffered martyrdom.

A. 70. This year Vespasian obtained the empire.

A. 71. This year Titus, the son of Vespasian, slew one hundred and eleven thousand Jews in Jerusalem.

A. 409. This year the Goths took the city of Rome by storm, and after this the Romans never ruled in Britain; and this was about eleven hundred and ten years after it had been built. Altogether they ruled in Britain four hundred and seventy years since Caius Julius first sought the land.

A. 410.–417.

A. 418. This year the Romans collected all the treasures that were in Britain, and some they hid in the earth, so that no one has since been able to find them; and some they carried with them into Gaul.

A. 419.–422.

A. 423. This year Theodosius the younger succeeded to the empire.

A. 424.–429.

A. 430. This year Palladius the bishop was sent to the Scots by pope Celestinus, that he might confirm their faith. Bedæ Chron.

A. 444. This year St. Martin died.

A. 445.–448.

A. 449. This year Martianus and Valentinus* succeeded to the empire, and reigned seven years. And in their days Hengest and Horsa, invited by Wyrtgeorne, king of the Britons, landed in Britain on the shore which is called Ypwinesfleet; at first in aid of the Britons, but afterwards they fought against them. King Wyrtgeorne gave them land in the south-east of this country, on condition that they should fight against the Picts. Then they fought against the Picts, and had the victory wheresoever they came. They then sent to the Angles; desired a larger force to be sent, and caused them to be told the worthlessness of the Britons, and the excellencies of the land. Then they soon sent hither a larger force in aid of the others. At that time there came men from three tribes of Germany; from the Old-Saxons, from the Angles, from the Jutes. From the Jutes came the Kentish-men and the men of Wight, that is, the tribe which now dwells in Wight, and that race among the West-Saxons which is still called the race of Jutes. From the Old-Saxons came the men of Essex and Sussex and Wessex. From Anglia, which

A. 448. This year John the Baptist revealed his head to two monks, who came from the east to offer up their prayers at Jerusalem, on the spot which was formerly Herod's residence. At the same time Martianus and Valentinianus reigned, and in that time the Angles came to this country, invited by King Wyrtgeorne, to assist him in overcoming his foes. They came to this country with three long ships, and their leaders were Hengest and Horsa. First of all they slew and expelled the king's enemies, and afterwards they turned against the king and against the Britons, and destroyed them by fire and the edge of the sword.

A. 449. –And in their days Wyrtgeorn invited the Angles hither, and they came to Britain in three ceols, at the place called Heopwins-fleet.

[a] Compare Bede, I. 15. Most of the ecclesiastical notices which occur between this time and the year 729, where Bede's History ceases, are derived, seemingly, from his work; and many of the larger insertions of this kind appear to have been added at a late period, as they are found only in the more recent MSS.: but those relating to military events are generally peculiar to the Chronicle.

[b] The positions usually assigned to various places mentioned in the earlier portion of the Chronicle, are often very uncertain, depending chiefly on a supposed or real similarity of names. Where these, however, appear sufficiently probable, they are placed in the margin without remark; if otherwise, a quære is added.

[a] Ella was founder of the kingdom of Sussex. The place of his landing appears to have been near West Wittering. The forest of Andred occupied the present weald of Kent and of Sussex. See its extent described under the year 893.

[b] Neither this place, nor the position of Andreds-cester, the Roman station Anderida, next mentioned, is at present known.

[c] The genealogy of the West-Saxon kings, which Gibson here inserted in the Chronicle, will be given in its place.

being dead, Ælle succeeded to the kingdom of North-humbria, each of whom reigned thirty years. Ælla was the son of Yffa, Yffa of Uxfrea, Uxfrea of Wilgils, Wilgils of Westerfalcna, Westerfalcna of Sæfugl, Sæfugl of Sæbald, Sæbald of Sigegeat, Sigegeat of Swebdæg, Swebdæg of Sigegar, Sigegar of Wægdæg, Wægdæg of Woden, Woden of Frithowulf.

A. 561.–564.

A. 565. This year[a] Æthelbriht succeeded to the kingdom of the Kentish-men, and held it fifty-three years. In his days the holy pope Gregory sent us baptism, that was in the two and thirtieth year of his reign: and Columba, a mass-priest, came to the Picts and converted them to the faith of Christ: they are dwellers by the northern mountains. And their king gave him the island which is called ^Ii: therein are five hides of land, as men say. There Columba built a monastery, and he was abbot there thirty-two years, and there he died when he was seventy-seven years old. His successors still have the place. The Southern Picts had been baptized long before: bishop Ninia, who had been instructed at Rome, had preached baptism to them, whose church, and his monastery is at Hwiterne, hallowed in the name of St. Martin: there he resteth, with many holy men. Now in Ii there must ever be an abbot, and not a bishop; and all the Scottish bishops ought to be subject to him, because Columba was an abbot, not a bishop.

[a] All the MSS. now remaining place Ethelbert's accession in 565; Wheloc in 560, which seems right, though apparently without MS. authority: for Bede, II. 5, says he died 23d February 616, after a reign of fifty-six years; and MS. E., under the year 616, seemingly from Bede, also assigns him a reign of fifty-six years. The thirty-second year of his reign, noticed in MS. F., would of course be reckoned from 565. See Bede, III. 4.

[a] We should apparently read 'Cuthwulf;' but both were Ceawlin's brothers.

[b] The two-fold import of this term has been lost, and it is now used in relation to place only. In forsaking the original, the language of the previous translations has been adopted; but here such a version would involve an impossibility.

A. 604. This year the East-Saxons received the faith and baptism under king Sæbriht and bishop Mellitus.

A. 605.

A. 606. This [a]year pope Gregory died, about ten years after he had sent us baptism: his father was called Gordian, and his mother Silvia.

A. 607. This year Ceolwulf fought against the South-Saxons. And this [b]year Æthelfrith led his army to Chester, and there slew numberless Welshmen: and so was fulfilled the prophecy of Augustine, wherein he saith, 'If the Welsh will not be at peace with us, they shall perish at the hands of the Saxons.' There also were slain two hundred priests, who came to pray for the army of the Welsh: their ealdor was called * Scromail, who with some fifty escaped thence.

A. 608.–610.

A. 611. This year Cynegils succeeded to the kingdom of the West-Saxons, and held it thirty-one years. Cynegils was the son of Ceol, Ceol of Cutha, Cutha of Cynric.

A. 612. 613.

A. 614. This year Cynegils and Cuichelm fought at × Beandune, and slew two thousand and sixty-five Welshmen.

A. 604. This year Augustine consecrated two bishops, Mellitus and Justus. He sent Mellitus to preach baptism to the East-Saxons, whose king was called Sæberht, son of Ricole, the sister of Æthelberht, and whom Æthelberht had there appointed king. And Æthelberht gave Mellitus a bishop's see in London, and to Justus he gave Rochester, which is twenty-four miles from Canterbury.

[b] In MS. E. it is 605. There is no year assigned to this event in Bede, II. 2, nor does it appear on what ground a date is tacked to Bede's narrative, unless it be that 605 is the latest preceding year marked by him on occasion of the death of P. Gregory, with which in that copy as well as in the Latin narrative of F. it is coupled. According to the Cambrian Annals and Tigernach, it took place in the year 613.

A. 616. This year Æthelbyrht king of the Kentish-men died; he was the first English king who received baptism, and he was the son of Eormenric; he reigned fifty-six years, and from the beginning of the world to this same year five thousand eight hundred years were gone by; and after him Eadbald his son succeeded to the kingdom; he forsook his baptismal vow, and lived after the manner of the heathens, so that he had his father's widow to wife. Then Laurentius, who was archbishop of Kent, was minded that he would go southwards over sea, and leave it entirely. But the apostle Peter came to him by night and scourged him sorely, because he wished thus to forsake the flock of God, and commanded him to go to the king and preach the true faith to him: and he did so, and the king was converted, and was baptized. In this king's days Laurentius, who was archbishop of Kent after Augustine, died, and was buried beside Augustine on the 4th Non. Feb. After him Mellitus, who formerly had been bishop of London, succeeded to the archbishoprick: then the men of London, where Mellitus had been formerly, became heathens (again). And in about five years, during the reign of Eadbald, Mellitus departed to Christ. Then after him Justus succeeded to the archbishoprick; and he consecrated Romanus to Rochester, where formerly himself had been bishop.

A. 616. –In that time Laurentius was archbishop, and for the sorrowfulness which he had on account of the king's unbelief he was minded to forsake this country entirely, and go over sea; but St. Peter the apostle scourged him sorely one night, because he wished thus to forsake the flock of God, and commanded him to teach boldly the true faith to the king; and he did so, and the king turned to the right (faith). In the days of this same king, Eadbald, this Laurentius died. The holy Augustine, while yet in sound health, ordained him bishop, in order that the community of Christ, which was yet new in England, should not after his decease be any time without an archbishop.

A. 627. This year king Edwine was baptized with his people by Paulinus at Easter. And this Paulinus also preached baptism in Lindsey, where the first who believed was a certain great man called Blecca, with all his followers. And in this time Honorius, who sent Paulinus his pall, succeeded to the popedom after Boniface[A]. And archbishop Justus died on the 4th of the Ides of November, and Honorius was consecrated archbishop of Canterbury by Paulinus at Lincoln. And to this Honorius the pope[×] also sent a pall: and he sent a letter to the Scots, desiring that they should turn to the right Easter.

A. 633. This year king Edwine was slain by Cadwalla and Penda at [A]Heathfield on the 2d of the Ides of October, and he reigned seventeen years; and his son Osfrith was also slain with him. And after that went Cadwalla and Penda and laid waste the whole country of the North-humbrians. When Paulinus saw that, he took Æthelburge, Edwine's widow, and departed in a ship to Kent. And [×]Eadbold and Honorius received him very honourably, and gave him a bishop's see in Rochester; and he dwelt there till his end.

A. 634. This year Osric, whom Paulinus had formerly baptized, succeeded to the kingdom of Deira; he was the son of Ælfric, Edwine's uncle. And Eanfrith the son of Æthelfrith succeeded to Bernicia. And this year also bishop Birinus first preached baptism to the West-Saxons under king Cynegils. Birinus came thither by command of Honorius the pope, and he there was bishop until his life's end. And this year also Oswold succeeded to the kingdom of the North-humbrians, and he reigned nine years; the ninth being numbered to him because of the heathenism which they practised who reigned over them the one year between him and Eadwine.

A. 635. This year king Cynegils was baptized by Birinus the bishop, at Dorchester, and Oswold king of the North-humbrians was his godfather.

A. 636. This year king Cuichelm was baptized at Dorchester, and the same year he died. And bishop Felix preached the faith of Christ to the East-Angles.

A. 637. 638.

A. 639. This year Birinus baptized king Cuthred at Dorchester, and received him as his (god)son.

A. 640. This year Eadbald, king of the Kentish-men, died, and he reigned twenty-five years. He had two sons, Ermenred and Ercenberht, and Ercenberht reigned there after his father. He overthrew all idolatry in his kingdom, and was the first of the English kings who established the Easter-fast. His daughter was called Ercongota, a holy woman and a wondrous person, whose mother was Sexburh, daughter of Anna, king of the East-Angles. And Ermenred begot two sons, who afterwards were martyred by Thunor.

A. 641.

A. 642. This year Oswald, king of the North-humbrians, was slain by Penda and the South-humbrians at Maser-feld on the Nones of August, and his body was buried at Bardney. His sanctity and his miracles were afterwards manifested in various ways beyond his island, and his hands are at Bamborough, uncorrupted. And the same year that Oswald was slain, Oswiu his brother succeeded to the kingdom of the North-humbrians, and he reigned two less (than) thirty years. Beda, III. 9. * and? 5 Aug. III. 10.

A. 643. This year Cenwalh succeeded to the kingdom of the West-Saxons, and held it thirty-one years; and Cenwalh commanded the [a]old church at Winchester to be built in the name of St. Peter: and he was the son of Cynegils. * Cynegilsing.

A. 644. This year Paulinus died, on the 6th of the Ides of October; he was first archbishop of York, and afterwards at Rochester. He was bishop one less (than) twenty years, and two months and twenty-one days. And this year Oswine's uncle's son[b], the son of Osric, succeeded to the kingdom of Deira, and reigned seven years. III. 14. 10 Octob.

A. 645. This year king Cenwalh was driven out of his kingdom by king Penda. III. 7.

A. 646. This year king Cenwalh was baptized.

A. 647.

A. 648. This year Cenwalh gave Cuthred, his kinsman, three thousand hides of land by Ashdown.* Cuthred was the son of Cwichelm, Cwichelm of Cynegils. This year the minster was built at Winchester, which king Cynwalh caused to be made, and hallowed in the name of St. Peter. * Aston?

long time, for he was betrayed by his own wife at Easter.

This year Ithamar bishop of Rochester consecrated Deus-dedit to the see of Canterbury on the 7th of the Kalends of April. Beda, III. 20. 26 Mar.

A. 656.

A. 657. This year Peada died, and Wulfhere the son of Penda succeeded to the kingdom of the Mercians.

In his time the abbacy of Medeshamstede, which his brother had begun, waxed very rich. The king favoured it much for the love of his brother Peada, and for the love of Oswy his brother by baptism, and for the love of abbot Saxulf. And he said that he would dignify and honour it, and this by the counsel of Æthelred and Merwala his brothers, and Kyneburg and Kyneswith his sisters, and by the counsel of the archbishop, who was called Deus-dedit, and by the counsel of all his witan, both clergy and laity, who were in his kingdom; and he did so.

Then the king sent after the abbot that he should come to him with all speed; and he did so. Then the king said to the abbot, 'Lo! I have sent for thee, beloved Saxulf, for the behoof of my soul, and I will plainly tell thee for why. My brother Peada and my dear friend Oswy began a monastery to the glory of Christ and Saint Peter. But my brother, as it has pleased Christ, is departed this life, and lo! my prayer to thee is, beloved friend, that they work diligently on the work, and I will find thee gold and silver, land and possessions, and all that behoveth thereto.' Then the abbot went home and began to build; and he so sped, by the grace of Christ, that in a few years the monastery was ready. When the king heard that said, he was very glad: he bade send throughout the nation after all his thanes, after the archbishop, and after the bishops, and after his eorls, and after all who loved God, that they should come to him; and he set a day on which the monastery should be hallowed.

of London, who was called Wina, and the bishop of the Mercians, who was called Jeruman, and bishop Tuda. And there was Wilfrid the priest, who was afterwards a bishop: and all his thanes who were within his kingdom were there.

When the monastery had been hallowed in the name of St. Peter, St. Paul, and St. Andrew, then the king stood up before all his thanes, and said with a clear voice, 'Thanked be the high Almighty God for the worthy deed which here is done, and I will this day do honour to Christ and St. Peter; and I desire that ye all assent to my words: 'I, Wulfere, do this day give to St. Peter and abbot Saxulf, and the monks of the monastery, these lands, and these waters, and meres, and fens and wears, and all the lands which lie thereabout, which are of my kingdom, freely, so that none but the abbot and the monks shall have any claim upon them. This is the grant. From Medeshamstede to North-burh, and thence to the place which is called Folies, and thence all the fen straight to Esendic, and from Esendic to the place which is called Fether-mouth, and thence along the straight way ten miles to Cuggedic, and thence to Raggewilh, and from Raggewilh five miles to the straight stream which goeth to Ælm and to Wisbeach, and thence about three miles to Throkonholt, and from Throkonholt straight through all the fen to Derevorde which is twenty miles long, and thence to Grætecross, and from Grætecross through a clear water called Bradan-æ, and thence six miles to Paccelade, and thence onward through all the meres and fens which lie toward Huntendune-port, and these meres and lakes, Scælfremere and Witlesmere, and all the others which lie thereabout, with the land and the houses which are on the east-half of Scælfremere, and from thence all the fens to Medeshamstede, and from Medeshamstede to Welmesforde, and from Welmesforde to Clive, and thence to Æstun, and from Æstun to Stamford, and from Stamford even as the water runneth to the aforesaid North-burh.' These are the lands and the fens which the king gave to St. Peter's monastery.

Then said the king, 'This gift is little; but it is my will that they shall hold it so royally and so freely that neither geld nor tribute be taken from it, except for the monks alone. And thus free I will make this minster, that it be subject to Rome alone; and here it is my will that all of us who are unable to go to Rome shall visit St. Peter.'

him what he should desire of him: and the king granted it. 'I have here [a]'godefrihte' monks who wish to spend their lives in an anchoretage if they knew where. And there is an island here, which is called Anchorets-isle, and my desire is, that we might build a minster there to the glory of St. Mary, so that those may dwell therein who wish to lead a life of peace and rest.'

Then the king answered, and said thus: 'Beloved Saxulf, lo! not only that one which thou hast desired, but all things which I know thee to desire on our Lord's behalf, I thus approve and grant. And I beg of thee, my brother Æthelred, and my sisters Cyneburh and Cyneswith, that ye be witnesses for your souls redemption, and that ye write it with your fingers. And I beg all those who come after me, be they my sons, be they my brothers, or kings that come after me, that our gift may stand, even as they would be partakers of the life eternal, and would escape everlasting torment. Whosoever shall take from this our gift, or the gifts of other good men, may the heavenly gateward take from him in the kingdom of heaven; and whosoever will increase it, may the heavenly gateward increase (his state) in the kingdom of heaven.'

These are the witnesses who were there, who subscribed it with their fingers on the cross of Christ, and assented to it with their tongues. King Wulfhere was the first who confirmed it by word, and afterwards subscribed it with his fingers on the cross of Christ; and said thus: 'I, king Wulfhere, with the kings, and eorls, and dukes, and thanes, the witnesses of my gift, do confirm it before the archbishop Deus-dedit with the cross of Christ. †' 'And I, Oswi king of the North-humbrians, the friend of this monastery and of abbot Saxulf, approve of it with the cross of Christ. †' 'And I, king Sighere, grant it with the cross of Christ. †' 'And I, king Sibbi, subscribe it with the cross of Christ. †' 'And I, Æthelred, the king's brother, grant it with the cross of Christ. †' 'And we, the king's sisters, Cyneburh and Cyneswith, we approve it. †' 'And I, Deus-dedit archbishop of Canterbury, grant it. †' After that, all the others who were there assented to it with the cross of Christ. † They were by name Ithamar bishop of Rochester, and Wine bishop of London, and Jeruman who was bishop of the Mercians, and bishop Tuda, and Wilfrid the priest, who was afterwards bishop, and Eoppa the priest, whom king Wulfere sent to preach Christianity in Wight, and abbot Saxulf, and Immine the ealdorman, and Eadberht the ealdorman, and Herefrid the ealdorman, and Wilberht the ealdorman, and Abon the ealdorman, Æthelbold, Brordan, Wilberht, Ælhmund, Frethegis. These, and many others who were there, servants of the king, all assented to it. This writing was written six hundred and sixty-four years after the birth of our Lord, (in) the seventh year of king Wulfere; the ninth year of archbishop Deus-dedit. They then laid the curse of God, and the curse of all saints, and of all Christian people (upon him) who should undo any thing which there was done. 'So be it,' say all, 'Amen.'

When these things were done, the king sent to Rome to Vitalianus who then was pope, and desired that he should grant by his rescript, and with his blessing, all the before-mentioned things. And the pope sent this rescript, thus saying, 'I, pope Vitalianus, concede to thee king Wulfere, and archbishop Deus-dedit, and abbot Saxulf, all the things which ye desire, and I forbid that any king or any man have any claim thereon, except the abbot alone; nor let him obey any man except the pope of Rome, and the archbishop of Canterbury. If any one break this in any thing, may St. Peter exterminate him with his sword: if any one observe it, may St. Peter, with the keys of heaven, undo for him the kingdom of heaven.' Thus the monastery at Medeshamstede was begun, which since has been called Burh.

After that, another archbishop came to Canterbury, who was called Theodorus, a very good and a wise man, and he held his synod with his bishops and with the clergy. There was Winfred bishop of the Mercians deposed from his bishoprick, and abbot Saxulf was there chosen to be bishop, and Cuthbald, a monk of the same monastery, was chosen abbot. This synod was held six hundred and seventy-three years after the birth of our Lord.

all services; and he besought him that he would assent to it with his rescript and with his blessing. And then the pope sent his rescript to England, thus saying:

'I, Agatho pope of Rome, greet well the worshipful Æthelred king of the Mercians, and the archbishop Theodore of Canterbury, and the bishop of the Mercians Saxulf, who was formerly abbot, and all the abbots who are in England, with the greeting of God and my blessing. I have heard the desire of king Æthelred, and of archbishop Theodorus, and of bishop Saxulf, and of abbot Cuthbald; and it is my will that it be in all wise even as you have spoken. And I ordain, on behalf of God and St. Peter, and of all saints, and of every person in orders, that neither king, nor bishop, nor eorl, nor any man have any claim, nor any tribute, geld, or military service; neither let any man exact any kind of service from the abbacy of Medeshamstede. I also ordain that the shire-bishop be not so bold that he perform any ordination or consecration within the abbacy unless the abbot beseech it of him, nor have any claim there for bishop-wite or synod, or for any kind of thing. And it is my will that the abbot be holden as legate of Rome over all the island, and that whatsoever abbot shall be there chosen by the monks, he be consecrated by the archbishop of Canterbury. I will and concede that whatever man shall have made a vow to go to Rome, which he may be unable to fulfil, either from sickness, or his lord's need (of him), or from poverty, or be unable to come there from any other kind of need, be he of England, or of whatever other island he be, let him come to the minster at Medeshamstede, and have the same forgiveness of Christ and St. Peter, and of the abbot and of the monks, that he should have if he went to Rome. Now I beseech thee, brother Theodorus, that thou cause to be commanded throughout all England, that a synod be gathered, and this decree be read and observed. In like manner I command thee, bishop Saxulf, that even as thou didst desire that the minster be free, so I forbid thee and all the bishops that shall come after thee, from Christ and all his saints, that ye have any claim upon the minster, except so far as the abbot shall be willing. Now will I say in a word, that whoso observeth this rescript and this decree, let him be ever dwelling with God Almighty in the kingdom of heaven; and whoso breaketh through it, let him be excommunicated, and thrust down with Judas and with all the devils in hell, unless he turn to repentance. Amen!'

This rescript pope Agatho, and one hundred and twenty-five bishops, sent to England by Wilfrid archbishop of York. This was done six hundred and eighty years after the birth of our Lord, and in the sixth year of king Æthelred.

The king then commanded the archbishop Theodorus that he should appoint a meeting of all the witan at the place which is called Heatfield. When they were there assembled, he caused the rescript to be read, which the pope had sent thither, and they all assented to and fully confirmed it.

Then said the king: 'All those things which my brother Peada, and my brother Wulfhere, and my sisters Kineburh and Kyneswith, gave and granted to St. Peter and the abbot, it is my will shall stand; and I will in my day increase it for the good of their souls and of my own. Now to-day I give St. Peter at his minster, Medeshamstede, these lands and all that lyeth there adjoining; that is to say, Bredune, Hrepingas, Cedenac, Swineshæfed, Heanbyrig, Lodeshac, Scuffanhalch, Costesford, Stretford, Wættelleburne, Lusgeard, Æthelhuniglond, Barthanig. These lands I give St. Peter all as freely as I myself possessed them, and so that none of my successors take any thing therefrom. If any one shall do so, let him have the curse of the pope of Rome, and the curse of all bishops, and of all those who are here witnesses, and this I confirm with Christ's token. †' 'I, Theodorus archbishop of Canterbury, am witness to this charter of Medeshamstede, and I confirm it with my signature, and I excommunicate all those who shall break any part thereof, and I bless all those who shall observe it. †' 'I, Wilfrid archbishop of York, I am witness to this charter, and I assent to the same curse. †' 'I, Saxulf, who was first abbot and am now bishop, I give those my curse, and that of all my successors, who shall break through this.' 'I, Ostrithe, wife of Æthelred, grant it.' 'I, Adrianus, legate, assent to it.' 'I, Putta bishop of Rochester, I subscribe it.' 'I, Waldhere bishop of London, confirm it.' 'I, Cuthbald, abbot, assent to it, so that whoso shall break it, let him have the cursing of all bishops and of all Christian folk. Amen!'

A. 676. This year Æscwine died, and Hedda succeeded to the bishoprick[†]: and Centwine succeeded to the kingdom of the West-Saxons: and Centwine was the son of Cynegils, Cynegils of Ceolwulf. And

A. 677.

A. 678. This year the star (called) a comet appeared in August, and shone like a sun-beam every morning for three months; and bishop Wilfrith was driven from his bishoprick by king Ecgferth: and two bishops were consecrated in his stead; Bosa to Deira, and Eata to Bernicia. And Eadhed was consecrated bishop over the men of Lindsey; he was the first of the bishops of Lindsey. Beda, iv. 12.

A. 679. This year Ælfwine was slain near the Trent, where Egferth and Æthelred fought: and Saint Ætheldryth died. And Coldingham was burned by fire from heaven. iv. 21. iv. 19. iv. 25.

A. 680. This year archbishop Theodore appointed a synod at Hæthfield, because he wished to set forth aright the Christian faith. And the same year Hild abbess of Whitby died. iv. 17. iv. 23.

A. 681. This year Trumbriht was consecrated bishop of Hexham and Trumwine of [*]the Picts, for at that time they were subject to this country. * Whitern.

A. 682. In this year Centwine drove the Britons to the sea.

A. 683.

A. 684. Here in this year Ecgferth sent an army against the Scots[a], and Briht his ealdorman with it, and miserably they plundered and burned the churches of God. iv. 26.

A. 685. This year king Ecgferth commanded that Cuthbert should be consecrated a bishop; and on the first day of Easter, at York, archbishop Theodore consecrated him bishop of Hexham; because Trumbriht had been deposed from his bishoprick. This year Ceadwalla began to Ibid.

Ceadwalla was the son of Coenbryht, Coenbryht of Cadda, Cadda of Cutha, Cutha of Ceawlin, Ceawlin of Cynric, Cynric of Cerdic. And Mul was the brother of Ceadwalla, and he was afterwards burned in Kent. And the same year, on the 13th of the Kalends of June, king Ecgferth was slain near the North-sea, and a great army with him. He was king fifteen years, and Aldfrith his brother succeeded to the kingdom after him. Ecgferth was the son of Osweo, Osweo of Æthelferth, Æthelferth of Æthelric, Æthelric of Ida, Ida of Eoppa. And Hlothere king of the Kentish-men died the same year. And John was consecrated bishop of Hexham, and he was there until Wilfrith returned. Afterwards John succeeded to the bishoprick of York, for bishop Bosa was dead. Then, after that, Wilfrith his priest was consecrated bishop of York, and John retired to his minster at Derewood. This year it rained blood in Britain, and milk and butter were turned into blood.

A. 686. This year Ceadwalla and Mul his brother laid waste Kent and Wight. This Ceadwalla gave to St. Peter's minster at Medeshamstede, Hoge, which is in an island called Heabur-eahg; the then abbot of the monastery was called Egbalth. He was the third abbot after Saxulf. At that time Theodore was archbishop in Kent.

A. 687. This year Mul was burned in Kent, and twelve other men with him; and the same year Ceadwalla again laid waste Kent.

A. 688. This year Ina succeeded to the kingdom of the West-Saxons, and held it thirty-seven years; and he built the minster at Glastonbury; and he afterwards went to Rome, and there dwelt to the end of his days: and the same year Ceadwalla Trumberht had been driven from the bishoprick.

A. 688. This year king Ceadwalla went to Rome, and received baptism of pope Sergius, and he gave him the name of Peter, and in about seven days afterwards, [a] The reading of MSS. B. and F., however excessive the sum may appear, has been placed in the text, because, unlike the 'thirty men' of A.G., or the 'thirty thousand' of D.E., it is intelligible, without having recourse to conjecture. The payment, whatever its amount may have been, was probably the legal compensation for the death of Mul. (See the volume of Anglo-Saxon laws.) Of the early Latin writers, Ethelweard says, it was 30,000 solidi, 'per singulos constanti numero sexdecim nummis;' Florence of Worcester, 3,750 pounds; and Malmesbury, 30,000 mancuses; which, at eight to the pound, would agree with Florence.

Wihtred was the son of Ecgbryht, Ecgbryht of Arcenbryht, Ercenbryht of Eadbald, Eadbald of Æthelbryht.

[a]As soon as he was king, he commanded a great council to be assembled at the place which is called Baccancelde, in which sate Wihtred king of the Kentish-men, and Brihtwald the archbishop of Canterbury, and Tobias bishop of Rochester, and with them were assembled abbots and abbesses, and many wise men, all to consult about the bettering of God's churches in Kent. Now began the king to speak, and said, 'It is my will that all the minsters and the churches that were given and bequeathed to the glory of God in the days of faithful kings my predecessors, and in the days of my kinsmen, of king Ethelbert and those who followed after him, do so remain to the glory of God, and firmly continue so to all eternity for evermore. For I, Wihtred, an earthly king, instigated by the King of heaven, and burning with the zeal of righteousness, have learned from the institutes of our forefathers that no layman has a right to possess himself of a church, nor of any of the things which belong to a church. And hence strictly and faithfully do we appoint and decree, and in the name of the Almighty God and of all his saints we forbid to all kings our successors, and to ealdormen, and all laymen, any lordship whatever over the churches, and over all their possessions, which I, or my elders of olden days, have given as an everlasting inheritance to the glory of Christ and of our lady St. Mary, and of the holy apostles. And observe, when it shall happen that a bishop, or an abbot, or an abbess, shall depart this life, let it be made known to the archbishop, and by his counsel and advice let such an one be chosen as shall be worthy. And let the archbishop enquire into the life and purity of him who is chosen to such a duty, and in nowise let any one be chosen to such a duty without the counsel of the archbishop. It is the duty of kings to appoint eorls and ealdormen, shire-reeves and doomsmen, and of the archbishop to instruct and advise the community of God, and bishops, and abbots, and abbesses, priests and deacons, to choose and appoint,

[a] This is apparently a different and anticipated account of Coenred's succession as related under the year 704: but as these copies there also notice the resignation of Ethelred, it is retained in the text.

[b] In MS. C. the date here is erroneously dcc.viii. for dcc.viiii.; and in consequence of this mistake each succeeding year to dcc.xxi. has been made one short by erasure.

[a] According to Bede's computation, Ine's abdication took place in the year 725.

[b] Bede, from whom this is taken, says, 'two comets.'

[c] These events are here rightly placed according to Bede. In D. they are erroneously again described, in common with other MSS., under the year DCC.XXXI.

[a] The instrument to which this has reference has been printed from a corrupt copy in the Concilia, Wilkins, i. 86. In the Latin of MS. F. it is nearly complete, but for the reason already given at p. 324 it is here omitted. The Saxon notices from this time to the year 754 have been erased from the MS. to make room for the Latin.

[b] Wilfrid the second, archbishop of York, is apparently confounded with the bishop of Worcester of the same name. The former was succeeded by Egberct in 734. See A. 734 and 776, and Bede, p. 283, n. °.

[a] Offa, king of the East-Saxons, went to Rome in 709, but the time of his death is not stated. Selred succeeded him.

[b] This tragical story is evidently, from its position, a later insertion. Compare Florence of Worcester, A. 784. Most of the ancient authorities say Cynewulf reigned thirty-one years, although they all assign 755 and 784 for the first and the last year of his reign. Perhaps we should read xxix.; but it seldom happens that the number of years given in the Chronicle for the duration of a reign can be reconciled to those marked for its beginning and ending.

Cynewulf drove him into Andred*, and he abode there until a swine-herd stabbed him at Privets-flood, and avenged the ealdorman Cumbra. * forest.

And Cynewulf fought very many battles against the Welsh; and after he had held the kingdom about one and thirty years, he purposed to expel an etheling, who was named Cyneheard: and Cyneheard was Sigebryht's brother. And he then learned that the king with a small band was gone to Merton to visit a woman; and he there beset him and surrounded the chamber on every side, before the men who were with the king discovered him. And when the king perceived this, he went to the door, and there manfully defended himself, until he beheld the etheling, and then he rushed out upon him and sorely wounded him; and they all continued fighting against the king until they had slain him. A. 784.

And upon this, the king's thanes having discovered the affray by the woman's cries, each, as he was ready, and with his utmost speed, ran to the spot. And the etheling offered money and life to each of them, and not one of them would accept it; but they continued fighting till they all fell, except one, a British hostage, and he was sorely wounded.

Then upon the morrow, the king's thanes, whom he had left behind him, heard that the king was slain, then rode they thither, and Osric his ealdorman, and Wiferth his thane, and the men whom he had previously left behind. And at the town wherein the king lay slain they found the etheling, and those within had closed the gates against them; but they then went onward. And he then offered them their own choice of land and money if they would grant him the kingdom, and shewed them that their kinsmen were with him, men, who would not desert him. And they then said, that no kinsman was dearer to them than their lord, and that they never would follow his murderer. And they then bade their kinsmen that they should go away from him in safety; but they said that the same had been bidden their companions who before that had been with the king; then they said, that they no more minded it 'than your companions who were slain with the king.' And then they continued fighting around the gates until they made their way in, and slew the etheling, and all the men who were with him, except one who was the ealdorman's godson; and he escaped with life, though he was wounded in several places.

And Cynewulf reigned thirty-one years, and his body lies at Winchester, and the etheling's at Axminster; and their right paternal kin reaches to Cerdic.

And the same year Æthelbald king of the Mercians was slain at Seckington, and his body lies at Repton, and he town; and the same year, on the 17th of the Kalends of July, Æthelberht was consecrated at York bishop of Whiterne. 15 Jun.

In the days of king Offa there was an abbot of Medeshamstede called Beonne. The same Beonne, by the consent of all the monks of the minster, let to Cuthbriht the ealdorman ten 'bonde-lands' at Swines-head, with lease, and with meadow, and with all that lay thereto, and on this condition: that Cuthbriht should give the abbot therefor fifty pounds, and each year one day's entertainment, or thirty shillings in money; and furthermore, that after his decease the land should return to the minster. The witnesses of this were king Offa, and king Egferth, and archbishop Hygeberht, and bishop Ceolwulf, and bishop Inwona, and abbot Beonna, and many other bishops and abbots, and many other great men. In the days of this same Offa there was an ealdorman who was called Brordan. He desired of the king that for love of him he would free a minster of his called Wocingas, because he wished to give it to Medeshamstede, and St. Peter, and the abbot that then was, who was called Pusa. Pusa succeeded Beonna, and the king loved him greatly. And the king then freed the minster Wocingas, against king, and against bishop, and against eorl, and against all men, so that no one should have any claim there except St. Peter and the abbot. This was done in the king's town called Freo-ric-burna.

A. 778. This year Æthelbald and Heardberht slew three high-reeves; Ealwulf, the son of Bosa, at Kings-cliff, and Cynewulf and Ecga at Hela-thirn, on the 11th of the Kalends of April: and then Alfwold obtained the kingdom[*], and drove Æthelred out of the country; and he reigned ten years. 22 Mar.

A. 779.

A. 780. This year the Old-Saxons and the Franks fought; and the high-reeves of the North-humbrians burned Beorn the ealdorman at Sele-tun, on the 8th of the Kalends of January: and archbishop Æthelberht died at York, in whose place Eanbald was consecrated; and bishop Cynewulf gave up the bishoprick of Lindisfarne. This year Alchmund, bishop of 25 Dec.

A. 781.

A. 782. This year died Werburh, Ceolred's queen, and Cynewulf, bishop of Lindisfarne*; and there was a synod at Aclea.

A. 783.

A. 784. This year Cyneheard slew king Cynewulf, and was himself there slain, and eighty-four men with him; and then Beorhtric obtained the kingdom of the West-Saxons, and he reigned sixteen years, and his body lies at Wareham; and his right paternal kin reaches to Cerdic. At this time king Ealhmund reigned in Kent. This king Ealhmund was the father of Egberht×, and Egberht was father of Athulf.

A. 785. This year abbot Botwine died at Rippon; and this year there was a contentious synod at Cealchythe, and archbishop Iaenbyrht [a] gave up some portion of his bishoprick, and Higebryht was elected by king Offa; and Ecgferth was consecrated king. And at this time messengers were sent from Rome by pope Adrian to England, to renew the faith and the peace which St. Gregory had sent us by Augustine the bishop; and they were worshipfully received, and sent away in peace.

came over the land of the North-humbrians, and miserably terrified the people; these were excessive whirlwinds, and lightnings; and fiery dragons were seen flying in the air. A great famine soon followed these tokens: and a little after that, in the same year, on the 6th of the Ides of January, the ravaging of heathen men lamentably destroyed God's church at Lindisfarne through rapine and slaughter. And Sicga[a] died on the 8th of the Kalends of March.

A. 794. This year pope [a] Adrian and king Offa died; and Æthelred king of the North-humbrians was slain by his own people on the 13th of the Kalends of May; and bishop Ceolwulf[x] and bishop Eadbald[b] went away from the land. And Ecgferth succeeded to the kingdom of the Mercians, and died the same year. And Eadbyrht, who by a second name was named Præn, obtained the kingdom of Kent. And Æthelheard the ealdorman died on the Kalends of August; and the heathens ravaged among the North-humbrians, and plundered Ecgferth's monastery at Done mouth; and there one of their leaders was slain, and also some of their ships were wrecked by a tempest; and many of them were there drowned, and some came on shore alive, and they were soon slain at the river's mouth.

[a] Pope Adrian died on the 25th of December 795, or, according to the Saxon computation, on New Year's day 796. Offa ascended the throne in 756. Under that year he is said to have reigned thirty-nine years: in MSS. D.E., A. 796, it is forty. The first would agree with 794, if both years be included; the latter would require 795.

[b] Eadbald's see is unknown: Eanbald sat at York, and Higbald at Lindisfarne, at this time.

[c] This should be 'ðone muðe,' the mouth of the Wear, where the monastery endowed by king Egferth stood. Monks' Wearmouth.

A. 796. This year Cynulf king of the Mercians laid waste Kent as far as the Marshes, and took Præn their king, and led him bound into Mercia, and let his eyes be picked out, and his hands be cut off. And Athelhard archbishop of Canterbury appointed a [a]synod, and confirmed and ratified, by the command of pope Leo, all the things respecting God's minsters which were appointed in Wihtgar's days, and in other kings' days, and thus sayeth: 'I Athelard, the humble archbishop of Canterbury, by the unanimous counsel of the whole synod, and with...of all...to the congregation of all the minsters to which in old days immunity was given by faithful men, in the name of God, and by his awful doom, I command, as I have command of pope Leo, that henceforth none dare to choose for themselves lords over God's heritage from amongst laymen. But even as it stands in the rescript which the pope has given, or those holy men have appointed who are our fathers and instructors concerning holy minsters, thus let them continue inviolate, without any kind of gainsaying. If there be any man who will not observe this ordinance of God, and of our pope, and ours, and who despiseth and holdeth it for nought, let him know that he shall give account before the judgment-seat of God. And I Athelhard archbishop, with twelve bishops, and three and twenty abbots, do confirm and ratify this same with Christ's rood-token.' And archbishop Eanbald died on the 4th of the Ides of August of the same year, and his body lies at York; and the same year died bishop Ceolwulf[x]; and a second Eanbald was consecrated in the place of the other on the 19th of the Kalends of September. 10 Aug. [a] The council of Cloveshoo, held in the year 803, is here intended. In the Latin portion of MS. F., from which the Saxon is translated, though not always very intelligibly, the instrument is nearly complete. It has been printed from a faulty copy, Wilkins, Concil. A. 802.[a] This year on the [b]13th of the Kalends of January the moon was eclipsed at dawn; and Beornmod was ordained bishop of Rochester. — 20 Dec.

A. 803. This year died [c]Higbald bishop of Lindisfarne on the 8th of the Kalends of July, and Ecgberht was consecrated in his stead on the 3d of the Ides of June; and this year archbishop Æthelheard died in Kent, and Wulfred was ordained archbishop; and abbot Forthred died. — 24 Jun. — 11 Jun.

A. 804. This year archbishop Wulfred received his pall.

A. 805. This year king Cuthred died among the Kentish-men, and Ceolburg abbess[x], and Heabryht the ealdorman. — [x] of Berkeley.

A. 806. This year the moon was eclipsed on the Kalends of September: and Eardwulf king of the North-humbrians was driven from his kingdom; and Eanberht bishop of Hexham died. Also in the same year, on the 2d of the Nones of June, a cross appeared in the moon on a [d]Wednesday at dawn; and afterwards in this year, on the third of the Kalends of September, a wonderful circle was seen about the sun. — 1 Sept. — 4 Jun. — 30 Aug.

A. 807. 808.

A. 809. This year the sun was eclipsed at the beginning of the fifth hour of the day on the 17th of the Kalends of August, the 2d day of the week, the 29th of the moon. — 16 Jul.

A. 810. 811.

A. 812. This year king [e]Carl died, and he reigned five and forty years; and archbishop Wulfred and Wigbryht bishop of the West-Saxons[x] both went to Rome. — [x] Sherburne.

A. 813. This year archbishop Wulfred, with the blessing of pope Leo[y], returned — [y] iii.

[a] The numerals in MS. C. originally agreed with the text, but the rubricator having omitted dccc.i., a later hand has altered the whole series down to dccc.xxiv., under the erroneous impression, it would seem, that the defect should be thus supplied.

[b] The eclipse happened 'xii. Kal. Junii,' May 21.

[c] Higbald's death apparently took place in the preceding year, unless we read 'Junii' for 'Julii.' The 11th of June 803, being Sunday, would suit for his consecration.

[a] Leo III. died 11th June 816. Eginhard, Ann. Stephen IV. was consecrated on the 22d of the same month.

[b] The Angle-School was a quarter near St. Peter's, where the English pilgrims at Rome resided. According to Anastasius, they called it their 'Borough,' (burgus). v. Anastas. Bibliothecar. de Vita Stephani IV.

A. 827. This year the moon was eclipsed[a] on the mass-night of midwinter. And the same year king Ecgbryht conquered the kingdom of the Mercians, and all that was south of the Humber; and he was the eighth king who was Bret-walda. Ælle king of the South-Saxons was the first who had thus much dominion; the second was Ceawlin king of the West-Saxons; the third was Æthelbryht king of the Kentish-men; the fourth was Rædwald king of the East-Angles; the fifth was Edwine king of the North-humbrians; the sixth was Oswald who reigned after him; the seventh was Oswio, Oswald's brother; the eighth was Ecgbryht king of the West-Saxons. And Ecgbryht led an army to Dore against the North-humbrians, and they there offered him obedience and allegiance, and with that they separated. 25 Dec. v. Bed. II. 5.

A. 831. This year archbishop Ceolnoth received his pall.

A. 832. This year the heathen men ravaged Sheppey.

A. 833. This year king Ecgbryht fought against the men of thirty-five ships at Carrum, and there was great slaughter made, and the Danish-men maintained possession of the field. And Hereferth and Wigthen[a], two bishops, died; and Dudda and Osmod, two ealdormen, died.

A. 834.

A. 835. This year a great hostile fleet
+ Cornwall. came to the West-Welsh[+], and they united together, and made war upon Ecgbryht king of the West-Saxons. As soon as he heard of it he went thither with an army, and fought against them at Hengest-down, and there he put to flight both the Welsh and the Danish-men.

A. 836. This year king Ecgbryht died[b]:

[a] Wigthen and Hereferth were successive bishops of Winchester; but as they both made profession of canonical obedience to archbishop Wulfred between the years 803 and 829, this was probably a different person.

[b] Egberht's accession is invariably placed in the year 800. If, therefore, the length of his reign be rightly stated, his death could not have happened before 837.

A. 840. This year king Æthelwulf fought at Carrum against the crews of thirty-five ships, and the Danish-men maintained possession of the field. And [a]Louis the emperor died.

A. 841.–844.

A. 845. This year Eanulf the ealdorman, with the men of Somerset, and bishop Ealchstan[A], and Osric the ealdorman, with the men of Dorset, fought at the mouth of the Parret against the Danish army, and there made great slaughter, and got the victory.

A. 846.–850.

A. 851. [b]This year Ceorl the ealdorman, with the men of Devonshire, fought against the heathen men at Wicganbeorg, and there made great slaughter and got the victory. And the same year king Æthelstan and Ealchere the ealdorman fought on shipboard, and slew a great number of the enemy at Sandwich in Kent, and took nine ships, and put the others to flight: and the heathen men, for the first time, remained over winter in Thanet. And the same year came three hundred and fifty ships to the mouth of the Thames, and the crews landed and took Canterbury and London by storm, and put to flight Beorhtwulf king of the Mercians with his army, and then went south over the Thames into Surry; and there king Ethelwulf and his son Æthelbald, with the army of the West-Saxons, fought against them at Ockley, and there made the greatest slaughter among the heathen army that we have heard tell of unto the present day, and there got the victory.

A. 852. At this time Ceolred abbot of Medeshamstede and the monks let to Wulfred the land of Sempigaham, on this condition, that after his decease the land should return to the minster, and that Wulfred should give the land of Sliowaford to Medeshamstede, and each year should deliver into the minster sixty fother of wood, and twelve fother of 'græfan,' and six fother of faggots, and two tuns full of pure ale, and two beasts fit for slaughter, and six hundred loaves, and ten measures of Welsh ale, and each year a horse, and thirty shillings, and one day's entertainment. At this agreement were present king Burhred, and archbishop Ceolred, and bishop Tunberht, and bishop Cenred, and bishop Alhhun, and abbot Wihtred, and abbot Werhtherd, and Æthelheard the ealdorman, and Hunberht the ealdorman, and many others.

A. 853. This year Burhred king of the Mercians and his 'witan' begged of king Æthelwulf that he would assist him so that he might make the North-Welsh obedient to him. He then did so; and went with an army across Mercia among the North-Welsh, and made them all obedient to him. And the same year king Ethelwulf sent his son Alfred to Rome. [a] Leo [a] iv. was then pope of Rome; and he consecrated him king, and took him for his son at confirmation. Then, in the same year, Ealhere, with the men of Kent, and Huda, with the men of Surry, fought in Thanet against the heathen army; and at first they were victorious; and many there were slain, and drowned on either hand, and both the ealdormen were killed. And upon this after Easter Æthelwulf king of the West-Saxons gave his daughter to Burgred king of the Mercians.

A. 855. This year the heathen men, for

A. 855. —And on his return homewards he took to (wife) the daughter of Charles king of the French, whose name was Judith, and he came home safe. And then in about two years he died, and his body lies at Winchester; and he reigned eighteen years and a half, and he was the son of Ecgbryht. And then his two sons succeeded to the kingdom; Æthelbald to the kingdom of the West-Saxons, and Æthelbyrht to the kingdom of the Kentish-men, and of the East-Saxons, and of Surry, and of the South-Saxons. And he reigned five years.

[a] For Æthelwulf's grant, which has given rise to much controversy, see Asser, A. 855, and, in their place, various charters connected with this donation.

[b] Æthelwulf married Judith, daughter of Charles the Bald, on the 1st of October 856, and died in January, or, as one MS. of Florence of Worcester reads, June 858. See Asser, A. 855.

[c] The account of the succession of Æthelwulf's sons in MSS. D. and E. is here mutilated; but in D. it is repeated correctly lower down.

burne fifty years, and his body lies there in the town.

A. 868. This year the same army went into Mercia to Nottingham, and there took up their winter quarters. And Burgræd king of the Mercians, and his 'witan,' begged of Ethered king of the West-Saxons, and of Ælfred his brother, that they would help them, that they might fight against the army. And then they went with the West-Saxon power into Mercia as far as Nottingham, and there met with the army within the fortress; and besieged them therein: but there was no great battle; and the Mercians made peace with the army.

A. 869. This year the army again went to York, and sate there one year.

A. 870. This year the army rode across Mercia into East-Anglia, and took up their winter quarters at Thetford: and the same winter king Eadmund fought against them, and the Danes got the victory, and slew the king, and subdued all the land, and destroyed all the minsters which they came to. The names of their chiefs who slew the king were Ingwair and Ubba. At that same time they came to Medeshamstede, and burned and beat it down, slew abbot and monks, and all that they found there. And that place, which before was full rich, they reduced to nothing. And the same year died archbishop Ceolnoth. Then went Æthered and Ælfred his brother, and took Æthelred[a] bishop of Wiltshire, and appointed him archbishop of Canterbury, because formerly he had been a monk of the same minster of Canterbury. All so soon as he came to Canterbury, and he was stablished in his archbishoprick, he then thought how he might expel the clerks who (were) there within, whom the archbishop Ceolnoth had (before) placed there for such need... as we shall relate. The first year that he was made archbishop there was so great a mortality, that of all the monks whom he found there within, no more than five monks survived. Then for the.... he (commanded) his chaplains, and also some priests of his vills, that they should help the few monks who there survived to do Christ's service, because he could not so readily find monks who might of themselves do the service; and for this reason he commanded that the priests, the while, until God should give peace in this land, should help the monks. In that same time was this land much distressed by frequent battles, and hence the archbishop could not there effect it, for there was warfare and sorrow all his time over England; and hence the clerks remained with the monks. Nor was there ever a time that monks were not there within, and they ever had lordship over the priests. Again the archbishop Ceolnoth thought, and also said to those who were with him, 'All so soon as God shall give peace in this land, either these priests shall be monks, or from elsewhere I will place within the minster as many monks as may do the service of themselves: for God knows that I.....)

A. 871. This year the army came to Reading in Wessex; and three days after this, two of their eorls rode forth. Then Æthelwulf the ealdorman met them at Englafield, and there fought against them, and got the victory: and there one of them, whose name was Sidroc, was slain. About three days after this, king Æthered and Ælfred his brother led a large

[1] Cum autem venisset Cantuariam, statim cogitare cœpit quomodo possit eicere clericos de ecclesia Christi, quos Ceolnothus pro tali necessitate compulsus ibi posuit. Primo igitur anno ordinationis suæ tanta mortalitas facta est in ecclesia Christi, ut de tota congregatione monachorum non remanerent nisi quinque. Qua de causa quia ita subito non potuit invenire tot monachos qui ibi servitium Dei facere possent, ex simplicitate cordis præcepit capellanis clericis suis, ut essent cum eis usque quo Deus pacificaret terram, quæ tunc nimis erat turbata propter nimias tempestates bellorum. Accepit etiam de villis suis presbiteros, ut essent cum monachis, ita tamen ut monachi semper haberent dominatum super clericos. Cogitavit idem archiepiscopus et sæpe suis dixit, quia statim cum Deus pacem nobis dederit, aut isti clerici monachi fient, aut ego ubicumque monachos inveniam quos reponam. Scit enim Deus inquid, quod aliter facere non possum. Sed nunquam temporibus suis pax fuit in Anglia, et ideo remanserunt clerici cum monachis, nec ullo tempore fuit ecclesia sine monachis. And about four days after this, king Æthered and Ælfred his brother fought against the whole army at Æscesdun; and they were in two bodies: in the one were Bachsecg and Halfdene the heathen kings, and in the other were the eorls. And then king Æthered fought against the division under the kings, and there king Bagsecg was slain; and Ælfred his brother against the division under the eorls, and there eorl Sidroc the elder was slain, and eorl Sidroc the younger, and eorl Osbearn, and eorl Fræna, and eorl Hareld: and both divisions of the army were put to flight, and many thousands slain: and they continued fighting until night. And about fourteen days after this, king Æthered and Ælfred his brother fought against the army at Basing, and there the Danes obtained the victory. And about two months after this, king Æthered and Ælfred his brother fought against the army at Meretun; and they were in two bodies, and they put both to flight, and during a great part of the day were victorious; and there was great slaughter on either hand; but the Danes had possession of the place of carnage: and there bishop Heahmund^ was slain,

And after this, over Easter*, king Æthered died; and he reigned five years, and his body lies at Winburne-minster.

Then Ælfred the son of Æthelwulf, his brother, succeeded to the kingdom of the West-Saxons. And about one month after this, king Ælfred with a small band fought against the whole army at Wiltun, and put them to flight for a good part of the day; but the Danes had possession of the place of carnage. And this year nine general battles were fought against the army in the kingdom south of the Thames, besides which, Ælfred the king's brother, and single ealdormen, and king's thanes, oftentimes made incursions on them, which were not counted: and within the year nine eorls and one king were slain. And that year the West-Saxons made peace with the army.

A. 872. This year the army went from Reading to London, and there took up their winter-quarters: and then the Mercians made peace with the army.

A. 873. This year the army went into North-humbria, and took up their winter-quarters at Torksey in Lindsey: and then the Mercians made peace with the army.

A. 874. This year the army went from Lindsey to Repton, and there took up their winter-quarters, and drove king Burgræd over sea about twenty-two years after he had obtained the kingdom; and subdued the whole country: and Burgred went to Rome, and there remained; and his body lies in St. Mary's church at the English school. And that same year they committed the kingdom of the Mercians to the keeping of Ceolwulf, an unwise king's-thane; and he swore oaths to them, and delivered hostages that it should be ready for them on whatever day they would have it, and that he would be ready both in his own person and with all who would follow him, for the behoof of the army.

A. 875. This year the army went from Repton: and Healfdene went with some of the army into North-humbria, and took up winter-quarters by the river Tyne. And the army subdued the land, and oft-times spoiled the Picts, and the Strathclyde Britons. And the three kings, Godrum, and Oscytel, and Anwynd, went with a large army from Repton to Grantabridge, and sat down there one year. And that summer king Ælfred went out to sea with a fleet, and fought against the forces of seven ships, and one of them he took, and put the rest to flight.

A. 876. This year the army stole away to Wareham, a fortress of the West-Saxons. And afterwards the king made peace with the army; and they delivered to the king hostages from among the most distinguished men of the army; and then they swore oaths to him on the holy [a]ring,

[a] The 'beag' or bracelet appears to have been of a somewhat oval form, and open on one side: but it also signifies a ring. The ceremony here noticed may perhaps be elucidated by the following passage from Arngrim Jonas: 'In ara præterea annulus asservabatur argenteus, vel ex orichalcho, unciarum xx., quem forensi aliquo munere fungentes, jusjurandum jam præstituri, victimarum illinitum cruore, religiose inter jurandum contrectabant.' Rer' Islandic. i. 7.; and see Bartholinus De Armillis, p. 101. which they never before would do to any nation, that they would speedily depart his kingdom. And notwithstanding this, that part of the army which was horsed stole away by night from the fortress to Exeter. And that year Healfdene apportioned the lands of North-humbria: and they thenceforth continued ploughing and tilling them. This year Rolla overran Normandy with his army, and he reigned fifty years.

A. 877. This year the army came to Exeter from Wareham; and the fleet sailed round westwards: and then a great storm overtook them at sea, and there one hundred and twenty ships were wrecked at Swanawic. And king Ælfred with his forces rode after the army which was mounted, as far as Exeter; and they were unable to overtake them before they were within the fortress, where they could not be come at. And they there delivered to him hostages as many as he would have, and swore many oaths: and then they observed the peace well. And afterwards, during harvest, the army went into Mercia, and some part of it they apportioned, and some they delivered to Ceolwulf.

A. 878. This year, during midwinter, after twelfth night*, the army stole away to Chippenham, and overran the land of the West-Saxons, and sat down there; and many of the people they drove beyond sea, and of the remainder the greater part they subdued and forced to obey them, except king Ælfred: and he, with a small band, with difficulty retreated to the woods and to the fastnesses of the moors. And the same winter the brother of Inwær and of Healfdene came with twenty-three ships to Devonshire in Wessex; and he was there slain, and with him eight hundred and forty men of his army: and there was taken the war-flag which they called Raven. And after this, at Easter*, king Ælfred with a small band constructed a fortress at Athelney; and from this fortress, with that part of the men of Somerset which was nearest to it, from time to time they fought against the army. Then in the seventh week after Easter he rode to Ecgbryht's-stane, on the east of Selwood; and there came to meet him all the men of Somerset, and the men of Wiltshire, and that portion of the men of Hampshire which was on this side of the sea; and they were joyful at his presence. And on the following day he went from that station to Iglea, and on the day after this to Ethandun, and there fought against the whole army, and put them to flight, and pursued them as far as their fortress: and there he sat down fourteen days. And then the army delivered to him hostages, with many oaths, that they would leave his kingdom, and also promised him that their king should receive baptism: and that they accordingly fulfilled. And about three weeks after this king Guthrum came to him, with some thirty men who were of the most distinguished in the army, at Aulre, which is near Athelney: and the king was his godfather at baptism; and his [a]chrism-loosing was at Wedmore: and he was

A. 879. This year the army went to Cirencester from Chippenham, and sate there one year. And that year a body of pirates drew together, and sat down at Fulham on the Thames. And that same year[a] the sun was eclipsed during one hour of the day.

A. 880. This year the army went from Cirencester to East-Anglia, and settled in the land, and apportioned it. And that same year the army, which previously had sat down at Fulham, went over sea to Ghent in France, and sate there one year.

A. 881. This year the army went further into France, and the French fought against them: and then was the army there horsed after the battle.

A. 882. This year the army went up along the banks of the Maese far into France, and there sate one year. And that same year king Ælfred went out to sea with his ships, and fought against the forces of four ships of Danish-men, and took two of the ships, and the men were slain that were in them; and the forces of two ships surrendered to him, and they were sorely distressed and wounded before they surrendered to him.

A. 883. This year the army went up the Scheld to Condé, and sate there one year. And Marinus the pope then sent 'lignum Domini' to king Ælfred; and that same year Sighelm and Æthelstan carried to Rome the alms which the king had vowed to send thither, and also to India, to St. Thomas and to St. Bartholomew, when they sat down against the army at London; and there, thanks be to God, they largely obtained the object of their prayer after the vow.

A. 884. This year the army went up the Somme to Amiens, and there sate one year. This year[a] the benevolent bishop Æthelwold died.

A. 885. [b]This year the fore-mentioned army divided itself into two; the one part went eastward, the other part to Rochester, and besieged the city, and wrought another fortress about themselves. And, notwithstanding this, the townsmen defended the city till king Ælfred came out with his forces. Then went the army to their ships, and abandoned their fortress; and they were there deprived of their horses, and soon after, in that same summer, departed over sea. And that same year king Ælfred sent a fleet from Kent to East-Anglia. So soon as they came to the mouth of the Stour, then met them sixteen ships of pirates; and they fought against them, and captured all the ships and killed the men. As they afterwards returned homeward with the booty, a large fleet of pirates met them, and then fought against them that same day, and the Danish-men had the victory. That same year, before mid-winter, [A]Carl king of the French died; he was killed by a wild boar; and one year before this, his brother[×] died: he too had the western kingdom: and they were both sons of Louis, who likewise had the western kingdom, and died that year when the sun was eclipsed: he was son of Charles * whose daughter Æthelwulf, king of the West-Saxons, had for his queen. And that same year a large fleet drew together against the Old-Saxons; and there was a great battle twice in that year, and the Saxons had the victory, and the Frisians were there with them. That same year Charles× succeeded to the western kingdom, and to all the kingdom on this side the Wendel-sea ˅, and beyond this sea, in like manner as his great-grandfather had it, with the exception of the Lid-wiccas.+ Charles was Louis's son; Louis was Charles's brother, who was father of Judith, whom king Æthelwulf had; and they were sons of Louis, Louis was son of the elder Charles, Charles was Pippin's son. And that same year died the good pope Marinus, who, at the prayer of Ælfred king of the West-Saxons, freed the English school; and he sent him great gifts, and part of the rood on which Christ suffered. And that same year the army in East-Anglia broke the peace with king Ælfred.

[a] The account of the death of Ethelwold bishop of Winchester, here inserted in MS. F., is anticipated a century by the carelessness of the scribe: the name of his successor in the Latin puts this beyond all doubt. See A. 984.

[b] Asser omits the events of A. 884 of the Chronicle, and places those of 885 under that year. At any rate the foreign transactions are rightly so placed.

A. 886. This year the army which before had drawn eastward, went westward again, and thence up the Seine, and there took up their winter quarters near the town of Paris. That same year king Ælfred repaired London; and all the English submitted to him, except those who were under the bondage of the Danish-men; and then he committed the town to the keeping of Æthered the ealdorman.

A. 887. This year the army went up through the bridge at Paris, and thence up along the Seine as far as the Marne, and thence up the Marne to Chezy, and then sat down, there, and on the Yonne, two winters in the two places. And that same year Charles [^] king of the French died; and six weeks before he died, Earnulf his brother's son bereaved him of the kingdom. And then was that kingdom divided into five, and five kings were consecrated thereto. This, however, was done by permission of Earnulf: and they said that they would hold it from his hand, because none of them on the father's side was born thereto except him alone. Earnulf then dwelt in the land east of the Rhine: and Rothulf then succeeded to the middle kingdom [×], and Oda to the western part, and Beorngar and Witha [ˇ] to the land of the Lombards and to the lands on that side of the mountain: and that they held in great discord, and fought two general battles, and oft and many times laid waste the land, and each repeatedly drove out the other. And that same year that the army went up beyond the bridge at Paris, Æthelhelm the ealdorman [+] carried the alms of the West-Saxons and of king Ælfred to Rome.[a] bishop of Canterbury, and Æthelwold the ealdorman died in the same month.

A. 889. In this year there was no journey to Rome, except that king Ælfred sent two couriers with letters.

A. 890. This year abbot Beornhelm carried the alms of the West-Saxons and of king Ælfred to Rome. And Godrum the Northern king died, whose baptismal name was * Æthelstan; he was king Ælfred's godson, and he abode in East-Anglia, and first settled× that country. And that same year the army went from the Seine to St. Lo, which is between Brittany and France; and the Bretons fought against them, and had the victory, and drove them out into a river, and drowned many of them. This year Plegemund was chosen of God and of all the people to the archbishoprick of Canterbury.

A. 891. This year the army went east-ward; and king Earnulf, with the East-Franks and Saxons and Bavarians, fought against that part which was mounted before the ships came up, and put them to flight. And three Scots came to king Ælfred in a boat without any oars from Ireland, whence they had stolen away, because they desired for the love of God to be in a state of pilgrimage, they recked not where. The boat ϒ in which they came was made of two hides and a half; and they took with them provisions sufficient for seven days; and then about the seventh day they came on shore in Cornwall, and soon after went to king Ælfred. Thus they were named: Dub-

A. 892. And that same year after Easter, about Rogation week^ or before, the star appeared which in Latin is called cometa; some men say in English that it is a hairy star, because a long radiance streams from it, sometimes on the one side, and sometimes on each side. ^ 29 May.

A. 893. In this year the great army, about which we formerly spoke×, came again from the eastern kingdom westward to Boulogne, and there was shipped; so that they came over in one passage, horses and all; and they came to land at Limenemouth with two hundred and fifty ships. This port is in the eastern part of Kent, at the east end of the great wood which we call Andred; the wood is in length from east to west one hundred and twenty miles, or longer, and thirty miles broad: the river of which we before spoke flows out of the weald. On this river they towed up their ships as far as the weald, four miles from the outward harbour, and there stormed a fortress: within the fortress a few ceorlish men were stationed, and it was in part only constructed. Then soon after that Hasten with eighty ships landed at the mouth of the Thames, and wrought himself a fortress[d] × A. 891.

A. 894. In this year, that was about a twelve-month after these had wrought the fortress in the eastern district, the North-humbrians and the East-Angles had given oaths to king Ælfred, and the East-Angles six hostages; and nevertheless, contrary to their plighted troth, as oft as the other armies went out with all their force, they also went out, either with them or on their own part. On this king Ælfred gathered together his forces, and proceeded until he encamped between the two armies, as near as he could for the wood fastnesses, and for the water fastnesses, so that he might be able to reach either of them in case they should seek any open country. From this time the enemy always went out along the weald in bands and troops, by whichever border was at the time without forces: and they also were sought out by other bands, almost every day, either by day or night, as well from the king's force as also from the burgs. The king had divided his forces into two, so that one half was constantly at home, the other half in the field; besides those men whose duty it was to defend the burgs. The army did not come out of their stations with their whole force oftener than twice: once when they first came to land, before the forces were assembled; a second time when they would go away from their stations. Then had they taken much booty, and would at that time go northward over the Thames into Essex towards their ships. Then the king's forces outrode and got before them, and fought against them at Farnham, and put the army to flight, and retook the booty; and they fled over the Thames where there was no ford; then up along the Colne into an island. Then the forces there beset them about so long as they there had any provisions: but at length they had stayed their term of service, and had consumed their provisions; and the king was then on his way thitherwards with the division which warred under him. While he was on his way thither, and the other force was gone homewards, and the Danish-men remained there behind, because their king had been wounded in the battle, so that they could not carry him away, then those who dwell among the North-humbrians and among the East-Anglians gathered some hundred ships and went about south; and some forty ships about to the north, and besieged a fortress in Devonshire by the north sea; and those who went about to the south besieged Exeter. When the king heard that, then turned he westward towards Exeter with all his force, except a very strong body of the people eastward. These went onwards until they came to London; and then with the townsmen, and the aid which came to them from the west, they went east to Beamfleet. Hæsten was then come there with his band which before sate at Middleton; and the great army was also come thereto, which before sate at Apuldre near Limene-mouth. The fortress at Beamfleet had been ere this constructed by Hæsten, and he was at that time gone out to plunder; and the great army was therein. Then came they thereto, and put the army to flight, and stormed the fortress, and took all that was within it, as well the property, as the women, and the children also, and brought the whole to London; and all the ships they either broke in pieces or burned, or brought to London or to Rochester; and they brought the wife of Hæsten and his two sons to the king: and he afterwards gave them up to him again, because one of them was his godson, and the other Ethered's the ealdorman's. They had become their godfathers before Hæsten came to Beamfleet, and at that time Hæsten had delivered to him hostages and taken oaths: and the king had also given him many gifts; and so likewise when he gave up the youth and the woman. But as soon as they came to Beamfleet, and the fortress was constructed, then plundered he that very part of the king's realm which was in the keeping of Æthered his compater; and again, this second time, he had gone out to plunder that very same district when his fortress was stormed. Now the king with his forces had turned westward towards Exeter, as I said before, and the army had beset the 'burh:' but when he arrived there, then went they to their ships. While the king was thus busied with the army there, in the west, and both the other armies had drawn together at Shoebury in Essex, and there had constructed a fortress, then both together went up along the Thames, and a great addition came to them, as well from the East-Anglians as from the North-humbrians. They then went up along the Thames till they reached the Severn; then up along the Severn. Then Ethered the ealdorman, and Æthelm the ealdorman, and Æthelnoth the ealdorman, and the king's-thanes who were then at home in the fortified places, gathered forces from every town east of the Parret, and as well west as east of Selwood, and also north of the Thames, and west of the Severn, and also some part of the North-Welsh people. When they had all drawn together, then they came up with the army at Buttington on the bank of the Severn,

When they had now sat there many weeks on both sides of the river, and the king was in the west in Devon, against the fleet, then were the enemy distressed for want of food; and having eaten a great part of their horses, the others being starved with hunger, then went they out against the men who were encamped on the east bank of the river, and fought against them: and the Christians had the victory. And Ordheh a king's-thane was there slain, and also many other king's-thanes were slain; and of the Danish-men there was very great slaughter made; and that part which got away thence was saved by flight. When they had come into Essex to their fortress and to their ships, then the survivors again gathered a great army from among the East-Angles and the North-humbrians before winter, and committed their wives and their ships and their wealth to the East-Angles, and went at one stretch, day and night, until they arrived at a western city in Wirral, which is called Lega-ceaster.[A] Then were the forces unable to come up with them before they were within the fortress: nevertheless they beset the fortress about for some two days, and took all the cattle that was there-without, and slew the men whom they were able to overtake without the fortress, and burned all the corn, and with their horses ate it in every 'evenehthe.' And this was about a twelve-month after they first came hither over sea.

the North-Welsh, for they were unable to stay there: this was because they had been deprived both of the cattle and of the corn which they had plundered. When they had turned again out of North-Wales with the booty which they had there taken, then went they over North-humbria-land and East-Anglia, in such wise that the forces could not overtake them before they came to the eastern parts of the land of Essex, to an island that is out on the sea, which is called Mersey. And as the army which had beset Exeter again turned homewards, then spoiled they the South-Saxons near Chichester; and the townsmen put them to flight, and slew many hundreds of them, and took some of their ships. Then that same year, before winter, the Danish-men who had sat down in Mersey, towed their ships up the Thames, and thence up the Lea. This was about two years after they had come hither over sea.

A. 896. In that same year the fore-mentioned army constructed a fortress on the Lea, twenty miles above London. After this, in summer, a great body of the townsmen, and also of other people, went onwards until they arrived at the Danish fortress; and there they were put to flight, and some four king's-thanes were slain. Then after this, during harvest, the king encamped near to the town, while the people reaped their corn, so that the Danish-men might not deprive them of the crop. Then on a certain day the king rode up along the river, and observed where the river might be obstructed, so that they would be unable to bring out their ships. And they then did thus: they constructed two fortresses, on the two sides of the river. When they had already begun the work, and had encamped there-beside, then perceived the army that they should not be able to bring out their ships. They then abandoned them, and went across the country till they arrived at Cwatbridge by the Severn; and there they constructed a fortress. Then the forces rode westwards after the army: and the men of London took possession of the ships; and all which they could not bring away they broke up, and those which there were 'stælwyrthe' they brought to London: moreover the Danish-men had committed their wives to the keeping of the East-Angles before they went out from their fortress. Then sat they down for the winter at Cwatbridge. This was about three years after they had come hither over sea to Limene-mouth.

A. 897. After this, in the summer of this year, the army broke up, some for East-Anglia, some for North-humbria; and they who were moneyless procured themselves ships there, and went southwards over sea to the Seine. Thanks be to God, the army had not utterly broken down the English nation; but during the three years it was much more broken down by the mortality among cattle and among men, and most of all by this, that many of the most eminent king's-thanes in the land died during the three years: some of whom were, Swithulf bishop of Rochester, and Ceolmund ealdorman of Kent, and Beorhtulf ealdorman of Essex, and Wulfred ealdorman of Hamtunshire, and Ealheard bishop of Dorchester, and Eadulf the king's-thane in Sussex, and Beornwulf the 'wic-reeve' at Winchester, and Ecgulf the king's horse-thane, and many also besides these, though I have named the most distinguished. That same year the armies from among the East-Anglians and from among the North-humbrians harassed the land of the West-Saxons, chiefly on the south coast, by predatory bands; most of all by their 'æscs,' which they had built many years before. Then king Alfred commanded long ships to be built to oppose the æscs; they were full-nigh twice as long as the others; some had sixty oars, and some had more: they were both swifter and steadier, and also higher than the others. They were shapen neither like the Frisian nor the Danish, but so as it seemed to him that they would be most efficient. Then some time in the same year, there came six ships to Wight, and there did much harm, as well as in Devon, and elsewhere along the sea-coast. Then the king commanded nine of the new ships to go thither, and they obstructed their passage from the port towards the outer sea. Then went they with three of their ships out against them; and three lay in the upper part of the port in the dry; the men were gone from them ashore. Then took they two of the three ships at the outer part of the port, and killed the men, and the other ship escaped; in that also the men were killed except five: they got away because the other ships were aground. They also were aground very disadvantageously: three lay aground on that side of the deep on which the Danish ships were aground, and all the rest upon the other side, so that no one of them could get to the others. But when the water had ebbed many furlongs from the ships, then the Danish-men went from their three ships to the other three which were left by the tide on their side, and then they

there fought against them. There was slain Lucumon the king's reeve, and Wulfheard the Frisian, and Æbbe the Frisian, and Æthelhere the Frisian, and Æthelferth the king's 'geneat,' and of all the men, Frisians and English, seventy-two; and of the Danish-men one hundred and twenty. Then, however, the flood-tide came to the Danish ships before the Christians could shove theirs off, and they therefore rowed them out: nevertheless, they were damaged to such a degree that they could not row round the Sussex land; and there the sea cast two of them on shore, and the men were led to the king at Winchester; and he commanded them to be there hanged: and the men who were in the single ship came to East-Anglia, sorely wounded. That same summer no less than twenty ships, with their crews, wholly perished upon the south coast. That same year died Wulfric, the king's horse-thane; he was also 'Wealh-reeve.'

A. 898. In this year died Æthelm, ealdorman of Wiltshire, nine days before midsummer: and this year died Heahstan, who was bishop of London. 15 June.

A. 899. 900.

A. 901. This year died Ælfred, the son of Æthulf, six days before All-Hallowmass. He was king over the whole English nation, except that part which was under the dominion of the Danes; and he held the kingdom one year and a half less than thirty years. And then Edward his son succeeded to the kingdom. Then 26 Oct.

Æthelwald the etheling, his uncle's son, seized the vill at Winburne and that at Tweoxneam, without leave of the king and of his 'witan.' Then rode the king with his forces until he encamped at Badbury, near Winburne; and Æthelwald sat within the vill, with the men who had submitted to him; and he had obstructed all the approaches towards him, and said that he would do one of two things—or there live, or there lie dead. But, notwithstanding that, he stole away by night, and sought the army in North-humbria; and they received him for their king, and became obedient to him. And the king commanded that he should be ridden after; but they were unable to overtake him. They then beset the woman whom he had before taken, without the king's leave, and against the bishop's command; for she had previously been consecrated a nun. And in this same year Æthered, who was ealdorman of Devonshire, died, four weeks before king Ælfred.

A. 902. And that same year[a] was the battle at the Holm, between the Kentishmen and the Danish-men.

A. 903. This year died Athulf the ealdorman, brother of Ealhswith king Edward's mother; and Virgilius abbot of the Scots; and Grimbald the mass-priest, on the 8th of the Ides of July. And this same year was the consecration of the New-minster at Winchester, and St. Judoc's[b] advent.

A. 904. This year Æthelwald came hither over sea with the ships that he was able to get, and he was submitted to in Essex. This year the moon was eclipsed.

[a] The account of the exploits of Æthelflæd, lady of the Mercians, which is only to be found in MSS. B.C. and partly in D., seems once to have existed in a separate form. The MSS. B. and C., after carrying on the general narrative to the end of the year 915, or 918 of the text, return to dccc.xcvi. (B. by a mistake has dccc.xvi.), and mark blank dates in succession to 901. This is followed by 902—the death of Ealhswith, &c.; and from this point they exhibit the Mercian transactions connectedly to the year 921, and at 924 again fall in with the general annals. In MS. D. some of these notices, mostly abbreviated, are intermixed with the text during the period above mentioned; but with some variation of chronology, and, as well as in the other MSS., with some repetitions, arising apparently from the use of two independent narrations. They are here distributed according to the chronology of MS. C.

[b] The relics of S. Judoc were brought from Ponthieu by certain monks, and placed in the New Minster.

A. 905. This year Æthelwald inticed the army in East-Anglia to break the peace, so that they ravaged over all the land of Mercia until they came to Cricklade, and there they went over the Thames, and took, as well in Bræden as thereabout, all that they could lay hands on, and then turned homewards again. Then king Edward went after them, as speedily as he could gather his forces, and overran all their land between the dikes and the Ouse, all as far north as the fens. When, after this, he would return thence, then commanded he it to be proclaimed through his whole force, that they should all return together. Then the Kentish-men remained there behind, notwithstanding his orders, and seven messengers whom he had sent to them. Then the army there came up to them, and there fought them: and there Sigulf the ealdorman, and Sigelm the ealdorman, and Eadwold the king's-thane, and Cenulf the abbot, and Sigebreht son of Sigulf, and Eadwald son of Acca, were slain, and likewise many with them, though I have named the most distinguished. And on the Danish side were slain Eohric their king, and Æthelwald the etheling, who had inticed him to break the peace, and Byrhtsige son of Beornoth the etheling, and Ysopa the 'hold,' and Oscytel the hold, and likewise very many with them, whom we are now unable to name. And there was great slaughter made on either hand; and of the Danish-men there were more slain, though they had possession of the place of carnage. And Ealhswith died that same year. This year a comet appeared on the 13th of the Kalends of November. 20 Oct.

A. 906. In this year died Ælfred, who was reeve at Bath. And in the same year peace was concluded at Yttingaford, even as king Edward ordained, as well with the East-Angles as with the North-humbrians.

A. 907. This year Chester was repaired.

A. 908. This year died Denulf, who was bishop at Winchester.

A. 909. This year St. Oswald's body was removed from Bardney into Mercia.

A. 910. This year Frithestan succeeded to the bishoprick at Winchester: and, after that, bishop Asser died; he was bishop at Shireburne. And that same year king Edward sent out a force both of West-Saxons and of Mercians, and they greatly spoiled the army of the north, as well of men as of every kind of cattle, and slew many of the Danish-men: and they were therein five weeks. In this year the Angles and the Danes fought at Teotanheal on the 8th of the Ides of August, and the Angles obtained the victory. And that same year Æthelflæd built the burh at Bremes-byrig.

A. 911. This year the army among the North-humbrians broke the peace, and despised whatever peace king Edward and his 'witan' offered them, and overran the land of Mercia. And the king had gathered together some hundred ships, and was then necessity, concluded a peace both with the army of East-Anglia and of North-humbria.

A. 910. [a]This year the army of the Angles and of the Danes fought at Totanheal. [y]And Æthered ealdor of the Mercians died; and king Edward took possession of London, and of Oxford, and of all the lands which owed obedience thereto. [x]And a great fleet came hither from the south, from the [y]Lidwiccas, and greatly ravaged by the Severn; but they there, afterwards, almost all perished.

Then thought the army that the greatest part of his force was in the ships, and that they should be able to go, unfought, wheresoever they chose. When the king learned that, that they were gone out to plunder, then sent he his forces after them, both of the West-Saxons and of the Mercians; and they overtook the army as they were on their way homewards, and then fought against them, and put them to flight, and slew many thousands of them; and there was slain king Ecwils, and king Healfden, and Ohter the eorl, and Scurfa the eorl, and Othulf the hold, and Benesing the hold, and Anlaf the black, and Thurferth the hold, and Osferth 'hlytte,' and Guthferth the hold, and Agmund the hold, and Guthferth.

structed the burh at Hertford, on the south side of the Lea. This year, by the help of God, Æthelflæd lady of the Mercians went with all the Mercians to Tamworth, and there built the burh early in the summer; and after this, before Lammas, that at Stafford.

A. 914. Then after this, in the next year, that at Eadesbyrig, early in the summer; and afterwards, in the same year, late in harvest, that at Warwic.

A. 915. Then after this, in the next year, after midwinter, that at Cyric-byrig, and that at Weard-byrig; and that same year, before midwinter, that at Rumcofa.

A. 916. This year abbot Ecgbriht was guiltlessly slain, before midsummer, on the 16th of the Kalends of July: the same day was the feast of the martyr St. Ciricius and his fellows. And about three days after this, Æthelflæd sent her forces among the Welsh, and stormed Brecenan-mere, and there took[a] the king's wife, and some four and thirty persons.

A. 917. In this year, after Easter^, the army rode forth from North-hamtun and Leicester, and broke the peace, and slew many men at Hocneratun, and there about. And then very speedily after that, when the one came home, then got they ready another troop which rode out against Lygton: and then the inhabitants were aware of them, and fought against them, and put them to full flight, and retook all which they had seized, and also a great portion of their horses and of their weapons. This year, before Lammas, Æthelflæd lady of the Mercians, God helping her, got possession of the burh which is called Derby, with all that owed obedience thereto; and there also were slain, within the gates, four of her thanes, which to her was a cause of sorrow.

A. 918. This year, in the early part of the year, by God's help, she got into her power, by treaty, the burh at Leicester, and the greater part of the army which owed obedience thereto became subject to her; and the people of York had also covenanted with her, some having given a pledge, and some having bound themselves by oath, that they would be at her command. In this [a]year a great fleet came over hither from the south, from the Lidwiccas[^], and with it two eorls, Ohtor and Hroald: and they went west about till they arrived within the mouth of the Severn, and they spoiled the North-Welsh everywhere by the sea-coast where they then pleased. And in Ircingfeld they took bishop[×] Cameleac, and led him with them to their ships; and then king Edward ransomed him afterwards with forty pounds. Then after that, the whole army landed, and would have gone once more to plunder about Ircingfeld. Then met them the men of Hereford and of Gloucester, and of the nearest burhs, and fought against them, and put them to flight, and slew the eorl Hroald, and a brother of Ohter the other eorl, and many of the army, and drove them into an inclosure, and there beset them about, until they delivered hostages to them that they would depart from king Edward's dominion. And the king had so ordered it that his forces sat down against them on the south side of Severn-mouth, from the Welsh coast westward, to the mouth of the Avon eastward; so that on that side they durst not anywhere attempt the land. Then, nevertheless, they stole away by night on some two occasions; once, to the east of Watchet, and another time to Porlock. But they were beaten on either occasion, so that few of them got away, except those alone who there swam out to the ships. And then they sat down, out on the island of ^λBradanrelice, until such time as they were quite destitute of food; and many men died of hunger, because they could not obtain any food. Then they went thence to ^×Deomod, and then out to Ireland: and this was during harvest. And then after that, in the same year, before Martinmas^ϒ, king Edward went with his forces to Buckingham, and there sat down four weeks; and, ere he went thence, he erected both the burhs on either side of the river. And Thurcytel the eorl sought to him to be his lord, and all the 'holds,' and almost all the chief men who owed obedience to Bedford, and also many of those who owed obedience to North-hamton.

[a] The arrival of the fleet from Brittany is placed under the year 915 by Florence of Worcester, in common with the MSS. C. and D. The dates which occasionally occur in B. seem to agree with C.; but as they are ambiguously placed, it has not been deemed necessary further to notice them.

[b] The death of Æthelflæd, but connected with different circumstances, is described under the year 922 of the text; it is, therefore, here necessarily separated from the other Mercian notices of the MSS. B.C. and D., although it is by no means certain that the date of 922 is right. For it is to be observed that these MSS. place the death of Ethered her husband under the years 911 or 912; that Florence of Worcester, and the text also, places it under 912; that these MSS., as well as Florence, say she died in the eighth year of her government; and that Henry of Huntingdon has the like interval between those events. To this may be added, that Ethelweard, the Cambrian Annals, and the Annals of Ulster assign her death to the year 917 or 918.

A. 920. In this year, before midsummer, king Edward went to Maldon, and built the burh and fortified it before he departed thence. And that same year Thurcytel the eorl went over sea into France, together with such men as would follow him, with the peace and aid of king Edward.

A. 921. In this year, before Easter[y], king Edward gave orders to take possession of the burh at Towcester, and to fortify it. And again, after that, in the same year, during Rogation[x] days, he commanded the burh at Wiginga-mere to be built. That same summer, between Lammas[z] and midsummer, the army from Northampton and from Leicester, and thence north, broke the peace, and went to Towcester, and fought against the burh the whole day; and they thought that they should be able to take it by storm. But, nevertheless, the people who were within defended it until a larger force came to them: and they then departed from the burh and went away. Then, again very soon after that, they went out once more by night with a predatory band, and came upon men who were unprepared, and took no small number as well of men as of cattle between Burnewood and Aylesbury. At that same time went out the army from Huntingdon and from the East-Angles, and constructed the fortress at Temesford, and abode, and built there; and forsook the other at Huntingdon, and thought that from thence they could, by warfare and hostility, get more of the land again. And they went forth until they arrived at Bedford: and then the men who were there within went out against them, and fought with them and put them to flight, and slew a good part of them. Then again, after that, a large army once more drew together from East-Anglia and from Mercia, and went to the burh at Wiginga-mere, and beset it round about, and fought against it the greater part of the day, and took the cattle thereabout. nevertheless, the men who were within the burh defended it: and then the army left the burh and went away. Then, after that, in the same summer, much people, within king Edward's dominion, drew together out of the nearest burhs, who could go thither, and went to Temsford, and beset the burh, and fought against it till they took it by storm, and slew the king, and Toglos the eorl, and Manna the eorl, his son, and his brother, and all those who were there within and would defend themselves; and took the others, and all that was therein. Then, very soon after this, much people drew together during harvest, as well from Kent as from Surry and from Essex, and from each of the nearest burhs, and went to Colchester, and beset the burh, and fought against it until they mastered it, and slew all the people there within, and took all that was there, except the men who fled away over the wall. Then, after that, once again during the same harvest, a large army drew together out of East-Anglia, as well of the land-force as of the pirates whom they had inticed to their aid; and they thought that they should be able to avenge their wrongs. And they went to Maldon, and beset the burh, and fought against it until more aid came to the help of the townsmen from without; and then the army left the burh and went away. And then the men from the burh went out after them, and those also who came from without to their aid; and they put the army to flight, and slew many hundreds of them, as well of the æsc-men as of the others. Then, very shortly after, during the same harvest, king Edward went with the forces of the West-Saxons to Passaham, and sat down there while they encompassed the burh at Towcester with a stone wall. And Thurferth the eorl, and the holds, and all the army which owed obedience to Northampton, as far north as the Welland, submitted to him, and sought to him to be their lord and protector. And when one division of the forces went home, then another went out, and took possession of the burh at Huntingdon, and repaired and rebuilt it, by command of king Edward, where it had been previously demolished; and all who were left of the inhabitants of that country submitted to king Edward, and sought his peace and his protection. And after this, still in the same year, before Martinmas, king Edward went with the forces of the West-Saxons to Colchester, and repaired the burh, and rebuilt it where it had been before broken down; and much people submitted to him, as well among the East-Anglians as among the East-Saxons, who before were under the dominion of the Danes. And all the army among the East-Anglians swore oneness with him, that they all that would that he would, and would observe peace towards all to which the king should grant his peace, both by sea and by land. And the army which owed obedience to Grantabridge chose him specially to be their lord and protector; and confirmed it with oaths, even as he it then decreed. This year king Edward built the burh at Clede-mouth. This year king Sihtric slew Niel his brother.

A. 922. In this year, between Rogation[^] days and midsummer, king Edward went with his forces to Stamford, and commanded the burh to be built upon the south side of the river: and all the people which owed obedience to the northern burh submitted to him, and sought to him to be their lord. And then, during the sojourn which he there made, then died [×]Æthelflæd his sister, at Tamworth, twelve days before[ˇ] midsummer. And then he took possession of the burh at Tamworth; and all the people of the land of Mercia, who before were subject to Æthelflæd, submitted to him; and the kings of the North-Welsh, Howel, and Cledauc, and Jeothwel, and all the North-Welsh race, sought to him to be their lord. Then went he thence to Nottingham and took possession of the burh, and commanded it to be repaired and occupied as well by English as by Danes. And all the people who were settled in Mercia, as well Danish as English, submitted to him.

A. 926. This year fiery lights appeared in the north part of the heavens. And Sihtric perished: and king Æthelstan obtained the kingdom of the North-humbrians. And he ruled all the kings who were in this island: first, Huwal king of the West-Welsh; and Constantine king of the Scots; and Uwen king of the Guentian people; and Ealdred, son of Ealdulf, of Bamborough: and they confirmed the peace by pledge, and by oaths, at the place which is called Eamot, on the 4th of the Ides of July; and they renounced all idolatry, and after that submitted to him in peace.

hoards and homes.
The foe they crushed,
the Scottish people and the shipmen fated fell.
The field 'dæniede'
with warriors blood, since the sun up
at morning-tide,
mighty planet,
glided o'er grounds,
God's candle bright,
the eternal Lord's,
till the noble creature sank to her settle.
There lay many a warrior
by javelins strewed;
northern man
over shield shot;
so the Scots eke,
weary, war-sad.
West-Saxons onwards throughout the day,
in bands,
pursued the footsteps
of the loathed nations.
They hewed the fugitives behind, amain,
with swords mill-sharp.
Mercians refused not the hard hand-play to any heroes who with Anlaf,
in the ship's bosom,
this land sought
fated to the fight.
Five lay on the battle-stead,
youthful kings,
by swords in slumber laid:
so seven eke
of Anlaf's eorls;
of the army countless,
shipmen and Scots.
There was made flee
the North-men's chieftain, by need constrained,

to the ship's prow
with a little band.
The bark drove afloat:
the king departed on the fallow flood,
his life preserved.
So there eke the sage came by flight to his country north, Constantine,
hoary warrior.
He had no cause to exult
in the communion of swords.
Here was his kindred band of friends o'erthrown on the folk-stead,
in battle slain;
and his son he left on the slaughter-place, mangled with wounds,
young in the fight:
he had no cause to boast,
beorn grizzly-haired,
of the bill-clashing,
the old deceiver;
nor Anlaf the more,
with the remnant of their armies;
they had no cause to laugh that they in war's works the better men were in the battle-stead, at the conflict of banners,
meeting of spears,
concourse of men,
traffic of weapons;
that they on the slaughter-field with Eadweard's offspring played.
The North-men departed in their nailed barks;
bloody relic of darts,
on 'dinges' ocean
o'er the deep water Dublin to seek,
again Ireland,
shamed in mind.
So too the brothers,
both together,

their country sought,
West-Saxons' land,
in the war exulting.
They left behind them,
the corse to devour,
the sallowy 'pada,' and the swart raven
with horned neb,
erne white-tailed,
the corse to enjoy,
greedy war-hawk,
and the grey beast,
wolf of the wood.
Carnage greater has not been in this island ever yet of people slain,
before this,
by edges of swords,
as books us say,
old writers,
since from the east hither, Angles and Saxons came to land,
o'er the broad seas Britain sought, mighty war-smiths,
the Welsh o'ercame,
this earth obtained.

A. 938. 939.

A. 940. This year king Æthelstan died at Gloucester on the 6th of the Kalends of November, about forty-one years, except one day, after king Ælfred died. And Eadmund the etheling, his brother, succeeded to the kingdom, and he was then eighteen years of age: and king Æthelstan reigned fourteen years and ten weeks. Then was Wulfelm archbishop in Kent.

A. 941. This year the North-humbrians were false to their plighted troth, and chose Anlaf of Ireland to be their king.

Here Eadmund king, ruler of Angles,
Mercia obtained,

[a] See Hen. Huntingdon and Simeon of Durham, A. 941. There were several chiefs of that name at this period: Anlaf the son of Guthferth, Anlaf the son of Sihtric, and Anlaf Cuaran, mentioned A. 949.

[b] In MS. F. the date of this notice has seemingly been cut off by the binder; but it is here placed on the authority of the fragment in A. Florence of Worcester has 942.

[c] In MSS. A. and G. this follows the verses uninterruptedly, so as to make the last line 'Eadmund cýning' a part of the narration; and thus, apparently, confounding the transactions of different years. The events here noticed are placed under the year 943 in the other MSS. as well as in Florence of Worcester; and the narrative in D. being much fuller than the others, it has been placed in the text.

A. 945. This year king Eadmund ravaged all Cumberland, and granted it all to Malcolm king of the Scots, on the condition, that he should be his fellow-worker as well by sea as by land.

A. 946. This year king Eadmund died on St. Augustine's mass-day. That was wide known how he his days ended: that Liofa him stabbed at Puckle-church. And Æthelflæd at Domerham, Ælfgar's daughter, the ealdorman, was then his queen: and he had the kingdom six years and a half. And then after him his brother Eadred the etheling succeeded to the kingdom, and subdued all North-humberland under his power: and the Scots gave him oaths, that they would all that he would.

A. 947. This year king Eadred came to Taddenes-scylf, and there Wulstan the archbishop and all the North-humbrian 'witan' plighted their troth to the king: and within a little while they belied it all, both pledge and also oaths.

A. 948. This year king Eadred ravaged all North-humberland, because they had taken Yric to be their king: and then, during the pillage, was the great minster burned at Rippon that St. Wilferth built. And as the king went homewards, then the army of York overtook him: the rear of the king's forces was at Ceaster-ford; and there they made great slaughter. Then was the king so wroth that he would have marched his forces in again and wholly destroyed the land. When the North-humbrian 'witan' understood that, then forsook they Hyryc, and made compensation for the deed with king Eadred.

This same blessed S. Dunstan....

A. 952. In this year king Eadred commanded archbishop Wulstan to be brought into the fastness at Judan-byrig, because he had been oft accused to the king: and in this year also the king commanded great slaughter to be made in the burh of Thetford, in revenge of the abbot Eadelm, whom they had before slain. This year the North-humbrians expelled king Anlaf, and received Yric, Harold's son.

A. 953.

A. 954. This year the North-humbrians expelled Yric, and Eadred obtained the kingdom of the North-humbrians. This year archbishop Wulstan again obtained a bishoprick at Dorchester.

A. 955. This year died king Eadred on St. Clement's mass-day[^], at Frome, and he rests in the Old-minster[×]; and he reigned nine years and a half. And then Eadwy succeeded to the kingdom, king Eadmund's and St. Ælfgiva's son. And he banished St. Dunstan out of the land.

[×] Winchester.

A. 956.

A. 957. This year died Wulfstan archbishop of York, on the 17th of the Kalends of January, and he was buried at Oundle. And in the same year abbot Dunstan was driven away over sea. This year Eadgar the etheling succeeded to the kingdom of the Mercians.

16 Dec.

A. 958. In this year archbishop Oda[ϒ] separated king Eadwy and Ælfgyfe, because they were too nearly related. This year died king Eadwy on the Kalends of October; and Eadgar his brother succeeded to the kingdom, as well of the West-Saxons as of the Mercians, and of the North-humbrians; and he was then sixteen years of age.

He upreared God's glory wide, and loved God's law,
and bettered the public peace,

in man's memory.
And God him eke so helped,
that kings and eorls gladly to him bowed,
and were submissive
to that, that he willed;
and without war
he ruled all that himself would.
He was wide throughout nations greatly honoured,
because he honoured God's name earnestly, and God's law pondered much and oft,
and God's glory reared wide and far,
and wisely counselled,
most oft, and ever,
for God and for the world,
of all his people.
One misdeed he did all too much that he foreign
and heathen customs within this land
brought too oft,
and outlandish men
hither enticed, and harmful people
allured to this land.
But God grant him that his good deeds
be more availing than his misdeeds,
for his soul's protection

rests at Wiltun. And king Sigferth killed himself, and his body lies at Winburne. And then, within the year, there was a great mortality, and the great fever was in London; and Paul's minster was burnt, and that same year was again built up. In this same year Athelmod the mass-priest went to Rome, and there died, on the 18th of the Kalends of September. 15 Aug.

A. 963. This year died Wulfstan the deacon on Childer-mass-day^, and after that died Gyric the mass-priest. In this same year abbot Athelwold^x succeeded to the bishoprick at Winchester, and he was consecrated on the vigil of St. Andrew: it was Sunday that day. In the year after he was consecrated, then made he many minsters, and drove the clerks out of the bishoprick, because they would not observe any rule, and he set monks there. He made there two abbacies; one of monks, one of nuns; all which was within Winchester. Afterwards, then came he to the king, Eadgar, and begged of him that he would give him all the minsters which heathen men had formerly broken down, because he would restore them: and the king blithely granted it. And then the bishop came first to Ely, where St. Ætheldrith lies, and caused the minster to be made: then he gave it to one of his monks, who was named Brihtnoth. He then consecrated him abbot, and there set monks to serve God where previously had been nuns: he bought then many 'cotlifs' of the king, and made it very rich. After that came bishop Athelwold to the minster which was called Medeshamstede, which formerly had been destroyed by heathen men: he found no thing there but old walls and wild woods. There found he, hidden in the old walls, writings that abbot Headda had erewhile written, how king Wulfhere and Æthelred his brother had built it, and how they had freed it against king and against bishop, and against all secular services, and how the pope Agatho had confirmed the same by his rescript, and the archbishop Deus-dedit. Then caused he the minster to be built; and set there an abbot, who was called Aldulf, and caused monks to be there where before was no thing. Then came he to the king, and caused him to look at the writings which before were found; and the king answered then and said:

Then Dunstan the archbishop of Canterbury answered, and said: 'I grant that all the things which here are given and spoken of, and all the things which thy predecessors and mine have conceded, those will I that they stand; and whosoever this breaketh, then give I him the curse of God, and of all saints, and of all ordained heads, and of myself, unless he come to repentance. And I give, in acknowledgment, to St. Peter, my mass-hackel, and my 'reef,' for the service of Christ.' Then the abbot Aldulf bought lands, numerous and many, and then greatly enriched the minster withal; and then was he there so long as until the archbishop Oswald of York was dead,* and then was he chosen archbishop. And then, soon, another abbot was chosen of the self-same minster, who was called Kenulf: he was afterwards bishop at Winchester. And he first made the wall about the minster: then gave he that to name 'Burch,' which before was called Medeshamstede: he was there so long as until he was appointed bishop at Winchester.× Then another abbot was chosen of the self-same minster, who was called Ælfsi: Ælfsi was then abbot, from that time, fifty years. He took up St. Kyneburh and St. Kyneswith, who lay at Castre, and St. Tibba, who lay at Rihall, and brought them to Burch, and made an offering of them all to St. Peter in one day; and observed it the while that he was there.

A. 972. This year Eadgar the etheling was hallowed king at Hot-baths, on Pentecost's mass-day, on the 5th of the Ides of May×, the thirteenth year since he had obtained the kingdom; and he was then one less than thirty years of age. And soon after that, the king led all his ship-forces to Chester; and there came to meet him six kings, and they all plighted their troth to him, that they would be his fellow-workers by sea and by land.

A. 976. This year was the great famine among the English nation.

A. 977. This year, over Easter[a], was the great 'gemote' at Kyrtling-tun; and there died bishop Sideman, by a sudden death, on the 2d of the Kalends of May. He was bishop in Devon-shire, and he desired that the resting-place of his body should be at Crediton, at his episcopal-seat. Then commanded king Edward and archbishop Dunstan that he should be borne to St. Mary's minster, which is at Abbendon: and so too was it done: and he is moreover honourably buried on the north side, in St. Paul's chapel. [a] 8 April. 30 Apl.

A. 978. In this year all the chief 'witan' of the English nation fell at Calne from an upper chamber, except the holy archbishop Dunstan, who alone supported himself upon a beam; and there some were grievously maimed, and some did not escape it with life. In this year [b]was king Edward martyred; and Æthelred the etheling, his bro-

A. 979. In this year was Æthelred hallowed king at Kingston, on the Sunday, fourteen days over Easter; and there were at his hallowing two archbishops, and ten suffragan-bishops. That same year was seen a bloody cloud, often-times, in the likeness of fire; and it was mostly apparent at midnight, and so in various beams was coloured: when it began to dawn, then glided it away.

A. 979. This year was king Edward slain at even-tide, at Corfes-geat, on the 15th of the Kalends of April, and then was he buried at Wareham, without any kind of kingly honours.

There has not been 'mid Angles a worse deed done
than this was,
since they first
Britain-land sought.
Men him murdered,
but God him glorified.
He was in life
an earthly king;
he is now after death
a heavenly saint.
Him would not his earthly kinsmen avenge,
but him hath his heavenly Father greatly avenged.
The earthly murderers would his memory
on earth blot out, but the lofty Avenger hath his memory in the heavens
and on earth wide-spread.
They who would not erewhile to his living body bow down, they now humbly
on knees bend
to his dead bones.
Now we may understand

979 it repeats the account of his coronation, as though a year had intervened between the murder of Edward and that event, unless on the latter occasion the writer may be supposed to begin the year either at Lady-day or at Easter. Florence says he was crowned on Sunday the 14th of April, Indiction 6, which characters agree with 978.

A. 980. In this year abbot Æthelgar [a] was consecrated bishop on the 6th of the Nones of May [x], to the episcopal seat at Selsey. And in the same year was Southhamton ravaged by a ship-force, and the most part of the townsmen slain, and led captive. And that same year was Tanetland ravaged. And that same year was Legecester-shire [y] ravaged by a northern ship-force. In this year St. Dunstan and Ælfhere the ealdorman fetched the holy king's body, St. Edward's, from Wareham, and bore it with much worship to Shaftsbury.

A. 982. In this year landed among the men of Dorset three ships of pirates; and they ravaged in Portland. That same year London was burnt; and in the same year died two ealdormen, Æthelmær in Hampshire, and Eadwine in Sussex; and Æthelmær's body lies at Winchester, in the New-minster, and Eadwine's in the minster at Abbendon. This same year died two abbesses in Dorset, Here-lufu at Shaftsbury, and Wulfwin at Wareham. And that same year went Odda [x] the Roman emperor to Greekland [y], and then met he a large force of Saracens, coming up from the sea, and they would then go plundering the Christian people. And then the emperor fought against them, and there was great slaughter made on either hand; and the emperor had possession of the place of carnage: and nevertheless he was there much harassed before he turned thence: and as he homeward

A. 992. This year Oswald the holy archbishop[^] left this[×], and passed to the heavenly life: and Æthelwine the ealdorman[ϒ] died in the same year. Then decreed the king and all his witan that all the ships which were aught worth should be gathered together at London. And the king then committed the forces to the leading of Ælfric the ealdorman, and of Thored the eorl, and of bishop Ælfstan[+], and of bishop Æscwig[^]; and they were to try if they could any where betrap the army about. Then sent the ealdorman Ælfric and directed the army to be warned; and then during the night of which they should have joined battle by day, then fled he by night from the forces, to his great disgrace: and the army then escaped, except one ship, whose crew was there slain. And then met the army the ships from East-Anglia, and from London, and they there made

A. 992. This year Oswold the blessed archbishop died, and abbot Eadulf succeeded to York and to Worcester. And this year the king and all his witan decreed that all the ships which were aught worth should be gathered together at London, in order that they might try if they could any where betrap the army from without. But Ælfric the ealdorman, one of those in whom the king had most confidence, directed the army to be warned; and in the night, as they should on the morrow have joined battle, the selfsame Ælfric fled from the forces; and then the army escaped.

A. 993. In this year[a] came Unlaf with ninety-three ships to Stane, and ravaged there about, and then went thence to Sandwich, and so thence to Ipswich, and that all over-ran; and so to Maldon. And there Byrhtnoth the ealdorman came against them with his forces, and fought against them: and they there slew the ealdorman, and had possession of the place of carnage. And after that peace was made with them; and him[×] the king afterwards received at the bishop's hands, through the instruction of Siric bishop of the Kentish-men, and of Ælfeah of Winchester.

great slaughter of them; and took the ship, all armed and equipped, in which the ealdorman was. And then after the decease of archbishop Oswald, abbot Ealdulf, of Burch^, succeeded to the bishoprick of York, and of Worcester; and Kenulf to the abbacy at Burch.

A. 993. In this year was Bamborough entered by storm, and much booty there taken. And after that the army came to the mouth of the Humber, and there wrought much evil, as well in Lindsey as in Northumbria. Then a very large force was gathered together; and as they should have joined battle, then the leaders, first of all, began the flight; that was Fræna, and Godwine, and Frythegyst. In this year the king ordered Ælfgar, son of Ælfric the ealdorman, to be blinded.

A. 994. In this year came Anlaf and Swegen to London, on the Nativity of St. Mary×, with ninety-four ships; and they then continued fighting stoutly against the burh, and would also have set fire to it. But they there sustained more harm and evil than they ever weened that any townsmen would be able to do unto them. But the holy mother of God, on that day, shewed her mercy to the townsmen, and delivered them from their foes. And they then went thence, and wrought the utmost evil that ever any army could do, by burning, and plundering, and by man-slaying, both by the sea-coast and among the East-Saxons, and in the land of Kent, and in Sussex, and in Hampshire. And at last they took to themselves horses, and rode as far as they would, and continued doing unspeakable evil. Then the king and his witan decreed that they should be sent to, and promised tribute and food, on condition that they should cease from their plundering: and that they then accepted. And then all the army came to South-hamton, and there took up their winter-quarters: and there they were victualled from all the realm of the West-Saxons, and they were paid sixteen thousand pounds of money. Then the king sent bishop Ælfeah[†] and Æthelweard the ealdorman after king Anlaf, and the while, hostages were delivered to the ships; and they then led Anlaf with much worship to the king at Andover. And king Æthelred received him at the bishop's hands, and royally gifted him. And then Anlaf made a covenant with him, even as he also fulfilled, that he never again would come hostilely to the English nation.

A. 995. In this year appeared 'cometa,' the star, and archbishop Sigeric died: and Ælfric bishop of Wiltshire was chosen[×] on Easter-day[ʏ], at Amesbury, by king Ægelred and by all his witan. [a]This Ælfric was a very wise man, so that there was no sager man in England. Then went Ælfric to his archiepiscopal seat; and when he came thither he was received by those men in orders who were most unacceptable to him, that was, by clerks. And soon (he sent for) all the wisest men he any where knew of, and also the old men who were able to say the soothest how each thing had been in this land in the days of their elders; in addition to what himself had learned from books and from wise men. Him told the very old men, as well clergy as laity, that their elders had told them how it had been established by law soon after St. Augustinus came to this land. When Augustinus had obtained the bishoprick in the burh[+], then was he archbishop over all king Ægelberht's kingdom, as it is related in Historia Anglorum[a]...... make (a bishop's) see by the king's aid in .... was begun by the old Romans ... *and to sprout forth. In that company the foremost were Mellitus, Justus, Paulinus, Rufianus. By these sent the blessed pope the pall, and therewith a letter, and instruction how he should consecrate bishops, and in which place in Britain he should seat them. And to the king (also) he sent letters and many worldly gifts of divers things. And the churches which they had got ready he commanded to be hallowed in the name of our Lord and Saviour Christ and St. Mary; and for himself there fix a dwelling-place, and for all his after-followers; and that he (should) place therein men of the same order that he had sent thither, and of which he himself was, and also that each........ monks who should fill the archiepiscopal seat at Canterbury, and that be ever observed by God's leave and blessing and by St. Peter's, and by all who came after him. When this embassy came again to king Ægelberht and to Augustine, they were very blithe through such instruction. And the archbishop then hallowed the minster in Christ's name and St. Mary's, (on) the day which is called the mass-day of the two martyrs, Primus et Felicianus, and there within placed monks all as St. Gregory commanded: and they God's service continently performed; and from the same monks bishops were taken for each ...... as thou mayst read in [x]Historia Anglorum. Then was archbishop Elfric very blithe, that he had so many witnesses (who) stood best at that time with the king. Still more, the same witan who were with the archbishop said: Thus also we .... monks have continued at Christ-Church during Agustine's days, and during Laurentius', Mellitus', Justus', Honorius', Deusdedit, Theodore's, Brihtwold's, Tatwine's, Nothelm's, Cuthberht's, Breg-

Deus, inquiunt, per beatum Augustinum aperuit cor regis Ædelberti ad suscipiendam fidem Christi, ipse Augustinus elegit sibi sedem in civitate Dorobernia (quæ er)at caput totius regni Ædelberti regis, ubi invenit quoddam opus inceptum Romano opere, quod auxiliante rege statuit perficere. Quod dum perfectum (esset) rex Ægelbertus cœpit consilium quærere ab Augustino et a cæteris consiliariis suis, quem ordinem monachorum vel clericorum convenientius in illa ecclesia (ad) serviendum Deo constituere potuisset. Qui omnes dederunt consilium, ut rex ex sua parte mitteret nuntios suos, et Augustinus monachos suos cum nuntiis regis Romæ, ad papam Gregorium, et ejus consilio sicut antea idem Augustinus venit in Angliam, ita et ecclesia jam nominata dedica(retur) et ordinaretur. Quod et factum est. Nam rex statim paratis nuntiis suis, misit Romæ, et Augustinus nichilominus suos. Cum autem venissent ad papam, et nuntias(sent) quod Angli suscepissent fidem Christi, gavisus est valde. Auditis itaque omnibus quæ a rege et Augustino mandata fuerant, statim remisit nuntios, cum quibus hos viros misit Augustino ut essent ei in adjutorium ad fidem Christi confirmandam; Mellitum, Justum, Paulinum, Rufinianum. Per istos etiam misit Augustino pallium, (atque) in quo loco deberet episcopos co-ordinare, et ponere mandavit; ecclesiam quoque quam fecerat in honorem Jhesu Christi, et S. Mariæ matris ejus, præcepit dedi(cari, ejus)demque ordinis quo ipse Augustinus, et alii quos ipse sibi misit, erant, in eadem ecclesia ad serviendum Deo ponere, sibique ibidem sedem archiepiscopalem et omnibus suc(cessoribus) suis statuere, omnesque archiepiscopos sibi succedentes monachos esse debere, ex parte Dei viventis, et beati Petri, et ex sua, et omnium suc(cess)orum præcepit. Cum autem nuntii reversi, venissent ad regem, et ad Augustinum, gaudio maximo repleti sunt pro tali mandato. Tunc Augustinus festinanter (dedicavit) ecclesiam illo die quo festum sanctorum Primi et Feliciani, v. Idus Junii, habetur, posuitque in ea monachos sicut papa mandavit; et ex ipsis ordinabantur episcopi per Angliam (sicut) ipse legisti in Ystoria Anglorum. wine's, Janberht's, ... Athelhard's, Wulfred's, Felogild's. But the (first) year when Ceolnoth came to the archbishoprick, there was such a mortality that there remained no more than five monks within Christ-Church. During all his time there was war and sorrow in this land, so that no man could think of any thing else but ..... Now, God be thanked, it is in the king's power and thine, whether they may be longer there within, because they (might) never better be brought thereout than now may be done, if it is the king's will and thine. The archbishop then, without any staying, with all (these) men, went anon to the king and showed him all, so as we here before have related. Then was the king very blithe (at these) tidings, and said to the archbishop and to the others, 'It seemeth advisable to me that thou shouldst go first of all to Rome after thy (pall, and that) thou shew to the pope all this, and, after that, act by his counsel:' And they all answered, that that was the best counsel. When (the priests) heard this, then resolved they that they should take two from among themselves and send to the pope; and they should offer him great gifts and silver, on condition that he should give them the arch(-pall). But when they came to Rome, then would not the pope do that, because they brought him no letter either from the king or from the people, and commanded them to go, lo! where they would. (So soon as) the priests had gone thence, came archbishop Ælfric to Rome, and the pope received him with much worship, and commanded him on the morrow to perform mass at St. Peter's altar, and the pope himself put on him his own pall, and greatly honoured him. When this was done, the archbishop began telling the pope all about the clerks, how it had happened, and how they were within the minster at his archbishoprick. And the pope related to him again how the priests had come to him, and offered great Addiderunt adhuc prædicti viri: Ita sicut diximus, permanserunt monachi in ecclesia Christi Cantuariæ, tempore Augustini, Laurentii, Melliti, Justi, (Hon)orii, Deusdedit, Theodorii, Brihtwaldi, Tatwini, Nothelmi, Cuthberti, Bregwini, Janberti, Athelhardi, Wulfredi, Feologildi. Illo vero primo anno (quo) Chelnodus suscepit archiepiscopatum Cantiæ tanta mortalitas facta est, ut in Ecclesia Christi non remanerent nisi v. monachi, et ideo pro tali necessitate idem C. archiepiscopus accepit de (clericis) suis presbiteros, qui quousque restauraret ecclesiam monachis, juvarent paucos monachos qui remanserunt. Nunc autem est in potestate regis et tua, si diutius vultis ut ibi clerici .. maneant, quia postquam pro tali necessitate ibi positi sunt, non potuerunt levius eici quam modo. Tunc archiepiscopus cum magna festinatione cum his omnibus quos secum ibi habebat, perrexit ad regem Ægelbertum, et indicavit ei per ordinem hæc omnia. Tunc dixit accepto consilio rex: Hoc videtur mihi melius consilium, ut eatis Romæ pro pallio vestro, et indicetis apostolico omnia, et secundum suum consilium per omnia fieri concedo. Dixerunt omnes optimum esse consilium regis. Archiepiscopus autem paratis rebus suis perrexit Romam. Statim vero ut clerici audierunt consilium regis, paraverunt duos ex ipsis qui irent Romæ, portantes secum multum auri et argenti, quod darent papæ pro pallio. Sed nuntii archiepiscopi præcesserunt. Nam cum clerici pervenerunt ad papam, respondit se nolle illorum verba suscipere, quia nullum signum nec a rege nec a populo terræ secum haberent. Discedentibus clericis, venit archiepiscopus ad papam, qui suscepit eum cum magno honore. In crastino fecit eum celebrare missam ad altare beati Petri, et ipse impo(su)it ei proprium pallium suum. Cum hæc ita facta essent, archiepiscopus cœpit dicere papæ de clericis, et de Ecclesia Christi sicut supradictum est, et papa ei de clericis quomodo venerint ad eum, et quod obtulerunt sibi magnam pecu-

gifts, in order that he should give them the pall. And the pope said, 'Go now to England again with God's blessing, and St. Peter's and mine; and as thou come home, place in thy minster men of that order which St. Gregorius commanded Augustine therein to place, by God's command, and St. Peter's and mine. Then the archbishop with this returned to England. As soon as he came home, he entered his archiepiscopal seat, and after that went to the (king) and the king and all his people thanked God for his return, and that he so had succeeded as was pleasing to them all. He then went again to Canterbury, and drove the clerks out of the minster, and there within placed monks, all as the pope commanded him.

A. 997. In this year the army went about Devonshire into Severn-mouth, and there ravaged, as well among the Cornish-men as among the North-Welsh, and among the men of Devon; and then landed at Watchet, and there wrought much evil by burning and by man-slaying. And after that they again went about Penwith-start, on the south side, and went then into the mouth of the Tamar, and then went up until they came to Lidford, and burned and destroyed every thing which they met with; and they burned Ordulf's minster at Tavistock, and brought unspeakable booty with them to their ships. This year archbishop Ælfric went to Rome after his arch-pall.

A. 998. This year the army went again eastward into Frome-mouth, and everywhere there they went up as far as they would into Dorset. And forces were often gathered against them; but so soon as they should have joined battle, then was there ever, through some cause, flight begun; and in the end they ever had the victory. And then at another time they sat down in Wight, and got their food the while from Hampshire and from Sussex.

about into Thames, and went then up along the Medway, and to Rochester. And then the Kentish forces came there to meet them, and they there stoutly joined battle: but alas! that they too-quickly yielded and fled; for they had not the support which they should have had. And the Danish-men had possession of the place of carnage; and then they took horse and rode wheresoever they themselves would, and full nigh all the West-Kentish men they ruined and plundered. Then the king, with his witan, decreed that, with a ship force and also with a land force, they should be attacked. But when the ships were ready, then the doomsmen delayed from day to day, and distressed the poor people who lay in the ships: and ever as it should have been forwarder, so was it later from one time to another; and ever they let their enemies forces increase, and ever the people retired from the sea, and they ever went forth after them. And then in the end, neither the 'ship-fyrding' nor the 'land-fyrding' effected any thing, except the people's distress and waste of money, and the emboldening of their foes.

A. 1000. In this year the king went into Cumberland, and ravaged it well nigh all. And his ships went out about Chester, and should have come to meet him, but they were not able: then ravaged they Anglesea. And the hostile fleet went this summer to Richard's dominions[]. [] Normandy.

A. 1001. This year the army came to Exmouth, and then went up to the burh, and there continued fighting stoutly; but they were very strenuously resisted. Then went they through the land, and did all as was their wont; destroyed and burnt. Then was collected a vast force of the people of Devon and of the people of Somerset, and they then came together at Peonn-ho. And so soon as they joined battle, then the people gave way: and there they made great slaughter, and then they rode over the land, and their last incursion was ever worse than the one before: and then they brought much booty with them to their ships. And thence they went into Wiht-land, and there they roved about, even as they themselves would, and no thing withstood them: nor any fleet by sea durst meet them; nor land force either, went they ever so far up. Then was it in every wise a heavy time, because they never ceased from their evil doings.

proceeded in one course until they came to Ætheling-dene; and then there came against them the men of Hampshire, and fought against them. And there was Æthelweard the king's high-reeve slain, and Leofric at Whitchurch, and Leofwine the king's high-reeve, and Wulfere the bishop's thane, and Godwine at Weorthig, bishop Ælfsige's son, and of all men, one and eighty; and there were of the Danish-men many more slain, though they had possession of the place of carnage. And they went thence west until they came to Devon; and there Pallig came to meet them, with the ships which he could gather, because he had fled from king Æthelred, contrary to all the plighted troth that he had given him; and the king had also well gifted him with vills, and with gold and with silver. And they burned Teigntun, and also many other good vills which we are unable to name; and there, afterwards, peace was made with them. And they then went thence to Exmouth, so that they proceeded upwards in one course until they came to Peonn-ho: and there Kola the king's high-reeve, and Eadsy the king's-reeve, went against them with the forces which they were able to gather together; and they there were put to flight, and there were many slain: and the Danish-men had possession of the place of carnage. And the morning after, they burned the vill at Peonn-ho and at Cliston, and also many good vills which we are unable to name, and then went again east until they

A.1002. In this year the king decreed, and his witan, that tribute should be paid to the fleet, and peace made with them, on condition that they should cease from their evil-doings. Then sent the king to the fleet Leofsige the ealdorman; and he then settled a truce with them by the king's word, and his witan's, and that they should receive food and tribute. And that they then accepted: and then were they paid twenty-four thousand pounds. Then during this, Leofsige the ealdorman slew Æfic the king's high-reeve; and the king then banished him the land. And then in the same Lent came the lady, Richard's[y] daughter, Ymma Ælfgiva, hither to land: and in the same summer archbishop Ealdulf[x] died. And in that year the king ordered all the Danish-men who were in England to be slain. This was done on Britius' mass-day[z]; because it was made known to the king that they would treacherously bereave him of his life, and afterwards all his witan; and after that have his kingdom without any gainsaying.

A.1003. This year was Exeter entered by storm, through the French ceorl Hugo, whom the [+]lady had appointed her reeve: and then the army entirely ruined the burh, and there took much booty. And in the same year the army went up into Wiltshire. Then was gathered a very large force from Wiltshire and from Hampshire, and very resolutely they came in presence of the army. Then should the ealdorman Ælfric have led the forces, but he then had recourse to his old devices: so soon as they so near were that either army could look on the other, then feigned he himself sick, and began by retching to spew, and said that he was grievously ill: and thus deceived the people whom he should have led; as it is said: When the leader groweth feeble, then is all the army greatly hindered. When Swegen saw that they were not unanimous, and that they all separated, then led he his army into Wiltun; and they spoiled the burh, and burned it; and he went then to Salisbury, and thence went to the sea again, where he knew that his sea-horses were.

A. 1004. This year came Swegen with his fleet to Norwich, and entirely spoiled and burned the burh. Then decreed Ulfcytel, with the witan of East-Anglia, that it were better that they should purchase peace of the army before they did very much harm in the land; because they had come unawares, and he had not time that he might gather his forces. Then during the truce which ought to have been between them, then stole the army up from their ships, and went their way to Thetford. When Ulfcytel understood that, then sent he word that the ships should be hewed in pieces, but they in whom he trusted failed to do it, and he then gathered his forces secretly, as he best might. And the army then came to Thetford, within three weeks of their having before plundered Norwich, and were one day there within, and plundered and burned the burh. And then on the morrow, as they would have gone to their ships, then came Ulfcytel with his band, in order that they might there join battle with them. And they there stoutly joined battle, and much slaughter was there made on either hand. There were the chief among the East-Anglian people slain; but if the full force there had been, they never again had gone to their ships; inasmuch as they themselves said, that they never had met a worse hand-play among the Eng-

A. 1005. In this year was the great famine throughout the English nation; such, that no man ever before recollected one so grim. And the fleet in this year went from this land to Denmark; and staid but a little space ere it came again.

A. 1006. This year died archbishop Ælfric, and after him bishop Ælfeah succeeded to the archbishoprick[†]: and bishop Brihtwold succeeded to the bishoprick of Wiltshire. And in the same year was Wulfgeat deprived of all his possessions, and Wulfeah and Ufegeat were blinded, and Ælfelm the ealdorman was slain; and bishop Kenulf[×] died. And then, over mid-summer, then came the great fleet to Sandwich, and did all as they had been before wont; they ravaged, and burned, and destroyed, wherever they went. Then the king commanded all the people of Wessex and of Mercia to be called out; and then they lay out all the harvest in the field against the army. But it availed nothing the more than it oft before had done: but for all this the army went wheresoever itself would, and the forces did every kind of harm to the inhabitants; so that neither profited them, nor the home army nor the foreign army. When it became winter, then went the forces home; and the army then came, over S. Martin's mass, to their 'frith-stole,' Wiht-land, and procured themselves there from all parts that which they needed. And then, at midwinter, they went to their ready 'feorme,' out through Hampshire into Berkshire to Reading: and they did their old wont; they lighted their war-beacons as they went. Then went they to Wallingford, and that all burned, and were then one day in Cholsey: and they went then along Æscesdun to Cwichelm's-hlæw, and there abode, as a daring boast; for it had been often said, if they should reach Cwichelm's-hlæw, that they would never again get to the sea: then they went homewards another way. Then were forces assembled at Kennet, and they there joined battle: and they soon brought that band to flight, and afterwards carried their booty to the sea. But there might the Winchester-men see an army daring and fearless, as they went by their gates towards the sea, and fetched themselves food and treasures over fifty miles from the sea. Then had the king gone over Thames into Shropshire, and there took his 'feorme' during the midwinter's tide. Then became the dread of the army so great, that no man could think or discover how they could be driven out of the land, or this land maintained against them; for they had every shire in Wessex sadly marked, by burning and by plundering. Then the king began earnestly with his witan to consider what might seem most advisable to them all, so that this land might be saved, before it was utterly destroyed. Then the king and his witan decreed, for the behoof of the whole nation, though it was hateful to them all, that they needs must pay tribute to the army. Then the king sent to the army, and directed it to be made known to them, that he would that there should be a truce between them, and that tribute should be paid, and food given them. And then all that they accepted: and then were they victualled from throughout the English nation.

A. 1007. In this year was the tribute delivered to the army, that was thirty-six thousand pounds. In this year also was Eadric

A. 1008. This year the king commanded that ships should be speedily built throughout the English nation: that is then, from three hundred hides and from ten hides, one vessel; and from eight hides, a helmet and a coat of mail.

A. 1009. In this year were the ships ready about which we before spake; and there were so many of them as never before, according as books say unto us, had been among the English nation in any king's days. And they were all brought together to Sandwich, and there they were to lie and defend this land against every foreign army. But still we had not the good fortune nor the worthiness, that the ship-force could be of any use to this land, any more than it oft before had been. Then befel it at this same time, or a little before, that Brihtric, Eadric the ealdorman's brother, accused to the king child Wulfnoth the South-Saxon, father of Godwine the eorl; and he then went out, and then enticed ships unto him, until he had twenty; and he then ravaged every where by the south coast, and wrought every kind of evil. Then was it told unto the ship-forces that they might be easily taken, if they would go about it. Then Brihtric took with him eighty ships, and thought that he should acquire great fame if he could seize Wulfnoth alive or dead. But as they were on their way thither, then came such a wind against them as no man before remembered, and the ships it then utterly beat, and thrashed to pieces, and cast upon the land; and soon came Wulfnoth, and burned the ships. When this was thus known in the other ships where the king was, how the others had fared, then was it as if it had been all hopeless; and the king went his way home, and the ealdormen and the high-witan, and thus lightly left the ships; and then afterwards, the people who were in the ships brought them to London: and they let the whole nation's toil thus lightly pass away; and no better was that victory on which the whole English nation had fixed their hopes. When this ship-expedition had thus ended, then came, soon after Lammas[λ], the vast hostile army, which we have called Thurkill's army, to Sandwich; and they soon went their way to Canterbury, and the burh would soon have subdued, if the townsmen had not first desired peace of them: and all the people of East-Kent made peace with the army, and gave them three thousand pounds. And then, soon after that, the army went forth till they came to Wiht-land; and thence every where in Sussex, and in Hampshire, and also in Berkshire, they ravaged and plundered, as their wont is. Then the king commanded the whole nation to be called out; so that they should be opposed on every side: but lo! nevertheless, they went how they would. Then, upon a certain occasion, the king had got before them with all his forces, as they would go to their ships; and all the people were ready to attack them. But it was then prevented through Eadric the ealdorman, as it ever yet has been. Then, after St. Martin's mass[×], then went they once more into Kent, and took up their winter-quarters on the Thames, and obtained their food from Essex, and from the shires which were there nearest, on both sides of the Thames. And oft they fought against the burh, London: but praise be to God that it yet stands sound, and they there ever fared evilly. And then, after mid-winter[y], then took they their way upwards through Chiltern, and so to Oxford, and burned the burh; and betook themselves then, on both sides of the Thames, towards their ships. Then were they warned that there were forces gathered at London against them: then went they over at Staines. And thus they went the whole winter; and during Lent they were in Kent, and repaired their ships.

A. 1010. This year, over Easter, came the fore-mentioned army into East-Anglia, and landed at Ipswich, and went forthwith where they understood Ulfcytel was with his forces. This was on the day, Prima Ascensio Domini[*]: and then the East-Anglians soon fled. Then stood Cambridgeshire firmly against them. There was slain Æthelstan the king's son-in-law, and Oswig and his son, and Wulfric, Leofwine's son, and Eadwig, Æfic's brother, and many other good thanes, and numberless of the people: the flight first began Thurcytel Myranheafod. And the Danes had possession of the place of carnage: and there were they horsed; and afterwards had dominion over East-Anglia, and the land three months ravaged and burned; and they even went into the wild fens, and they destroyed men and cattle, and burned throughout the fens: and Thetford they burned, and Grantabridge. And after that they went southward again to the Thames, and the men who were horsed rode towards the ships; and after that, very speedily, they went westward into Oxfordshire, and thence into Buckinghamshire, and so along the Ouse until they came to Bedford, and so onwards to Temes-ford; and burned ever as they went. Then went they again to their ships with their booty. And when they went to their ships, then ought the forces again to have gone out against them, until they should land; but then the forces went home: and when they were eastwards, then were the forces kept westwards; and when they were southwards, then were our forces northwards. Then were all

But although something might then be counselled, it did not stand even one month: at last there was no head-man who would assemble forces, but each fled as he best might; nor, at the last, would even one shire assist another. Then before St. Andrew's mass-day[^], then came the army to Northampton, and they soon burned the town, and took there-about as much as they themselves would; and thence they went over Thames into Wessex, and so by Caneg-marsh, and that all they burned. When they had gone so far as they then would, then came they at mid-winter to their ships.

A. 1011. In this year sent the king and his witan to the army, and desired peace, and promised them tribute and food, on condition that they would cease from their plundering. They had then over-run, 1st, East-Anglia, and 2d, Essex, and 3d, Middlesex, and 4th, Oxfordshire, and 5th, Cambridgeshire, and 6th, Hertfordshire, and 7th, Buckinghamshire, and 8th, Bedfordshire, and 9th, half of Huntingdonshire, and 10th, much of North-hamton-shire; and south of Thames, all Kent, and Sussex, and Hastings, and Surry, and Berkshire, and Hampshire, and much of Wiltshire. All these misfortunes befel us through unwise counsel, that they were not in time offered tribute, or fought against; but when they had done the most evil, then peace and truce were made with them. And nevertheless, for all the truce and tribute, they went everywhere in bands, and plundered our miserable people, and robbed and slew them. And then in this year, between the Nativity of St. Mary[×] and St. Michael's-mass[ϒ], they besieged Canterbury, and got into it through treachery, because [+] Ælmær betrayed it, whose life the archbishop Ælfeah had before saved. And then they there took the archbishop Ælfeah, and Ælfweard the king's-reeve, and the abbess Leofrune[ʌ], and bishop Godwine[×]. And abbot Ælfmær[ϒ] they let go away. And they took there within all the men in orders, and men and women: it is not to be told to any man how much people there was. And they remained within the burh afterwards as long as they would. And when they had thoroughly searched the burh, then went they to their ships, and led the archbishop with them.

head of the English race and Christendom.
There might then be seen misery, where men oft erewhile saw bliss,
in that hapless town,
whence to us came first Christendom and bliss,
for God, and for the world.

And they kept the archbishop with them so long as until the time that they martyred him.

A. 1012. In this year came Eadric the ealdorman, and all the chief witan, clergy and laity, of the English people to London, before Easter[+]; Easter-day was then on the date, Ides of April; and they were there then so long as until all the tribute was paid, over Easter; that was eight and forty thousand pounds. Then on the Saturday[ʌ] was the army greatly excited against the bishop, because he would not promise them any money: but he forbade that any thing should be given for him. They had also drunk deeply, for wine had been brought there from the south. Then took they the bishop, led him to their husting on the eve of Sunday, the octaves of Easter, which was on the 13th of the Kalends of May; and there they then shamefully slaughtered him: they cast upon him bones and the heads of oxen, and then one of them struck him with an axe-iron on the head, so that with the blow he sank down; and his holy blood fell on the earth, and his holy soul he sent forth to God's kingdom. And on the morrow the body was carried to London, and the bishops Eadnoth† and Ælfun×, and the townsmen, received it with all reverence, and buried it in St. Paul's minster; and there God now manifesteth the miraculous powers of the holy martyr. When the tribute was paid, and oaths of peace were sworn, then the army separated widely, in like manner as ere it had been gathered together. Then became subject to the king five and forty ships of the army, and covenanted with him that they would defend this country, and that he should feed and clothe them.

A.1013. In the year after that in which the archbishop Ælfeg was martyred, the king appointed bishop Lyfing to the archbishoprick at Canterbury. And in this same year, before the month of August, came king Swegen with his fleet to Sandwich, and went then, very soon, about East-Anglia into the mouth of the Humber, and so upward along Trent, until he came to Gainsborough. And then, soon, Uhtred the eorl and all the Northumbrians submitted to him, and all the people in Lindesey, and afterwards the people in the Five-burhs, and soon after, all the army north of Watling-street; and hostages were delivered to him from every shire. After he had learned that all the people were obedient to him, then bade he that his army should be victualled and horsed; and he then afterwards went south-

And after he came over Watling-street, they wrought the most evil that any army could do. Then went he to Oxford, and the townsmen soon submitted, and delivered hostages; and thence to Winchester, and they did the like. Then went he thence eastward to London, and much of his people was drowned in the Thames, because they kept not to any bridge. When he came to the burh, then would not the townsmen submit, but held out against him with all their might, because king Æthelred was therein, and Thurcyl with him. Then went king Swegen thence to Wallingford, and so over the Thames westward to Bath, and sate down there with his forces. And Æthelmær the ealdorman came thither, and the western thanes with him, and they all submitted to Swegen, and delivered hostages for themselves. And when he had thus succeeded, then went he northward to his ships; and then all the people held him for full king. And after that the townsmen of London submitted, and delivered hostages, because they dreaded lest he should utterly undo them. Then Swegen ordered a full-tribute and provisions for his army during the winter; and Thurkyl ordered the like for the army which lay at Greenwich: and for all that, they plundered as oft as they would. Then was this people nothing benefited either from the south or from the north. Then was king Æthelred some while with the fleet which lay in the Thames; and the lady[*] then departed over sea to her brother Richard[×], and Ælfsige, abbot of Burh, with her. And the king sent bishop Ælfun with the ethelings, Eadwerd and Alfred, over sea, that he might have charge of them. And the king departed then from the fleet at mid-winter into Wiht-land, and was there during that tide; and after that tide he went over the sea to Richard, and was there with him until such time as Swegen was dead. And the while that the lady was with her brother beyond sea, Ælfsige, abbot of Burh, who was there with her, went to the minster which is called Bonneval, where St. Florentine's body lay. There found he a poor place, a poor abbot, and poor monks; for they had been plundered. Then bought he there of the abbot and of the monks St. Florentine's body, all except the head, for five hundred pounds; and then when he came home again, then made he an offering of it to Christ and St. Peter.

A. 1014. In this year king Swegen ended his days, at Candlemas, on the third of the Nones of February[a]. And that same year Ælfwig was consecrated bishop of London, at York, on St. Juliana's mass-day[x]. And all the fleet then chose Cnut for king. Then counselled all the witan who were in England, clergy and laity, that they should send after king Æthelred; and they declared that no lord were dearer to them than their natural lord, if he would rule them rightlier than he had before done. Then sent the king his son Edward hither with his messengers, and ordered them to greet all his people; and said that he would be to them a loving lord, and amend all those things which they all abhorred, and each of those things should be forgiven which had been done or said to him, on condition that they all, with one consent, would be obedient to him, without deceit. And they then established full friendship, by word and by pledge, on either half, and declared every Danish king an outlaw from England for ever. Then, during Lent, king Æthelred came home to his own people; and he was gladly received by them all. Then, after Swegen was dead, Cnut sate with his army at Gainsborough until [y]Easter; and it was agreed between him and the people of Lindsey that they should find him horses, and that afterwards they should all go out together, and plunder. Then came king Æthelred thither, to Lindsey, with his full force, before they were ready: and then they plundered, and burned, and slew all the people whom they could reach. And Cnut went away out with his fleet, and thus the poor people were deceived through him, and then he went southward until he came to Sandwich; and there he caused the hostages to be put on shore who had been delivered to his father, and cut off their hands, and ears, and noses. And besides all these evils, the king ordered the army which lay at Greenwich to be paid twenty-one thousand pounds. And in this year, on the eve of St. Michael's mass[*], came the great sea-flood wide throughout this land, and ran so far up as it never before had done, and washed away many vills, and a countless number of people.

A. 1015. In this year was the great 'gemot' at Oxford; and there Eadric the ealdorman betrayed Siferth and Morcore, the chief thanes in the Seven-burhs. He allured them into his chamber, and there within they were cruelly slain. And the king then took all their possessions, and ordered Siferth's relict to be taken, and to be brought to Malmesbury. Then, after a little space, Eadmund the etheling went there and took the woman, contrary to the king's will, and had her for his wife. Then, before the Nativity[×] of St. Mary, the etheling went thence, from the west, north to the Five-burhs, and soon took possession of all Siferth's property, and Morcore's; and the people all submitted to him. And then, during the same time, came king Cnut to Sandwich; and soon after went about Kent into Wessex, until he came to the mouth of the Frome: and then he ravaged in Dorset, and in Wiltshire, and in Somerset. Then lay the king sick at Cosham. Then gathered Eadric the ealdorman forces, and the etheling Eadmund in the north. When they came together, then would the ealdorman betray the etheling, but he was not able: and they then parted without a battle on that account, and gave way to their foes. And Eadric the ealdorman then enticed forty ships from the king, and then went over to Cnut. And the men of Wessex submitted, and delivered hostages, and horsed the army; and then was it there until midwinter.

A. 1016. In this year came Cnut with his army, and Eadric the ealdorman with him, over Thames into Mercia at Cricklade. And then they went to Warwickshire, during the midwinter's-tide, and ravaged, and burned, and slew all that they could come at. Then began the etheling Eadmund to gather his forces. When the forces were assembled, then would it not content them except it so were that the king were there with them, and they might have the help of the townsmen of London: then gave they up the expedition, and each man went him away home. Then after that tide, then were the forces again called out, so that each man, who was able to go, should come forth, under pain of the full 'wite:' and they sent to the king at London, and prayed him that he would come to meet the forces with such help as he could gather. When they all had come together, then availed it no thing, the more than it oft before had done. Then was it made known to the king that they would betray him; they who ought to have been of aid to him. Then left he the forces and returned to London. Then rode the etheling Eadmund into North-humbria to Uhtred the eorl, and every man thought that they would assemble forces against king Cnut. Then marched they into Staffordshire, and into Shropshire, and to Chester; and they plundered on their part, and Cnut on his part. He went out through Buckinghamshire into Bedfordshire, and thence to Huntingdonshire, and so into North-hamton-shire along the fens to Stamford, and then into Lincolnshire; then thence to Nottinghamshire, and so to North-humbria towards York. When Uhtred heard this, then left he off his plundering, and hastened northwards, and then submitted, from need, and all the Northhumbrians with him; and he delivered hostages: and, notwithstanding, they slew him, through the counsel of Eadric the ealdorman, and Thurcytel, son of Nafena, with him. And then, after that, king Cnut appointed Yric to be his eorl in North-humbria, in like manner as Uhtred had been; and afterwards went southward, by another way, all to the west: and then, before Easter^, came all the army to their ships. ^ 1 Apl.

And the etheling Eadmund went to London to his father. And then, after Easter, went king Cnut with all his ships towards London. Then befel it that king Æthelred died, before the ships arrived. He ended his days on St. George's mass-day×, × 23 Apl.
and he held his kingdom with great toil and under great difficulties the while that his life lasted. And then, after his end, all the witan who were in London, and the townsmen, chose Eadmund to be king: and he strenuously defended his kingdom the while that his time lasted. Then came the ships to Greenwich at ʏ Rogation days. ʏ 7 May.
And within a little space they went to London, and they they dug a great ditch on the south side, and dragged their ships to the west side of the bridge; and then afterwards they ditched the burh around, so that no one could go either in or out: and they repeatedly fought against the burh; but the townsmen strenuously withstood them. Then had king Eadmund, before that, gone out; and then he over-ran Wessex, and all the people submitted to him. And soon after that he fought

And a second battle he fought, after mid-summer, at Sceorstan; and there much slaughter was made on either side, and the armies of themselves separated. In that battle was Eadric the ealdorman, and Ælmær darling, helping the army against king Eadmund. And then gathered he his forces for the third time, and went to London, all north of Thames, and so out through Clæighanger; and relieved the townsmen, and drove the army in flight to their ships. And then, two days after, the king went over at Brentford, and there fought against the army, and put them to flight: and there many of the English people were drowned, from their own carelessness; they who went before the forces, and would take booty. And after that the king went into Wessex, and collected his forces. Then went the army, soon, to London, and beset the burh around, and strongly fought against it, as well by water as by land. But the Almighty God delivered it.

The army went then, after that, from London, with their ships, into the Arewa, and there went up, and proceeded into Mercia, and destroyed and burned whatsoever they over-ran, as is their wont, and provided themselves with food: and they conducted, as well their ships as their droves, into the Medway. Then king Eadmund assembled, for the fourth time, all his forces, and went over the Thames at Brentford, and went into Kent; and the army fled before him, with their horses, into Shepey: and the king slew as many of them as he could come up with. And Eadric the ealdorman went then to

The army then went again up into Essex, and passed into Mercia, and destroyed whatever it over-ran.

When the king learned that the army was upward, then assembled he, for the fifth time, all the English nation, and followed after them, and overtook them in Essex, at the down which is called Assandun: and there they strenuously joined battle. Then did Eadric the ealdorman, as he had oft before done, begin the flight first with the Magesætas, and so betrayed his royal lord and the whole people of the English race. There Cnut had the victory; and all the English nation fought against him. There was slain bishop Eadnoth[*], and abbot Wulsige, and Ælfric the ealdorman, and Godwine the ealdorman of Lindsey, and Ulfcytel of East-Anglia, and Æthelweard, son of Æthelwine the ealdorman; and all the nobility of the English race was there destroyed.

Then counselled Eadric the ealdorman, and the witan who were there, that the kings should be mutually reconciled. And they delivered hostages mutually; and the kings came together at Olanege near Deerhurst, and then confirmed their friendship as well by pledge as by oath, and settled the tribute for the army. And they then separated with this reconcilement: and Eadmund obtained Wessex, and Cnut Mercia. And the army then went to their ships with the things which they had taken. And the men of London made a truce with the army, and bought themselves peace: and the army brought their ships to London, and took up their winter-quarters therein. Then, at St. Andrew's* mass, died king Eadmund; and his body lies at Glastonbury, with his grandfather Eadgar. And in the same year died Wulfgar, abbot of Abbendon; and Æthelsige succeeded to the abbacy.

A. 1017. In this year king Cnut obtained the whole realm of the English race, and divided it into four parts: Wessex to himself, and East-Anglia to Thurkyll, and Mercia to Eadric, and North-humbria to Yric. And in this year was Eadric the ealdorman slain in London, very justly, and Northman, son of Leofwine the ealdorman, and Æthelweard, son of Æthelmær the great, and Brihtric, son of Ælfeh, in Devonshire. And king Cnut banished Eadwig the etheling, and afterwards commanded him to be slain, and Eadwi king of the ceorls. And then, before the Kalends of August, the king commanded the relict of king Ethelred, Richard's daughter, to be fetched for his wife; that was Ælfgive in English, Ymma in French.

A. 1018. In this year the tribute was delivered throughout the whole English nation; that was altogether, two and seventy thousand pounds, besides that which the townsmen of London paid, which was ten and a half thousand pounds. And then some of the army went to Denmark, and forty ships remained with king Cnut. And the Danes and the Angles agreed, at Oxford, to live under Eadgar's law. And this year abbot Æthelsige died at Abbendon, and Æthelwine succeeded him.

the pope instructed him, in the presence of the archbishop, and of all the fellowship which was with him.

A. 1023. This year king Cnut came again to England, and Thurcil and he were reconciled; and he committed Denmark and his son to the keeping of Thurcil; and the king took Thurcil's son with him to England. This year died archbishop Wulfstan[ⱡ]: and Ælfric succeeded him; and archbishop Ægelnoth blessed him at Canterbury. [a]This year king Cnut, within London, in St. Paul's minster, gave full leave to archbishop Æthelnoth and bishop Bryhtwine[×], and to all the servants of God who were with them, that they might take up from the tomb the archbishop St. Ælfheah. And they then did so, on the sixth of the Ides of June. And the illustrious king, and the archbishop and suffragan bishops, and eorls, and very many clergy, and also laity, carried, in a ship, his holy body over the Thames to Southwark, and there delivered the holy martyr to the archbishop and his companions; and they then, with a worshipful band and winsome joy, bore him to Rochester. Then, on the third day, came Imma the lady, with her royal child Hearda-Cnut: and then they all, with much state and bliss, and songs of praise, bore the holy archbishop into Canterbury; and then worshipfully brought him into Christ's-Church, on the third of the Ides of June. Again, after that, on the eighth day, on the seventeenth of the Kalends of July, archbishop Æthelnoth, and bishop Ælfsie[ʏ], and bishop Bryhtwine, and all those who were with them, deposited St. Ælfeah's holy body on the north side of Christ's altar, to the glory of God, and the honour of the holy archbishop, and the eternal health of all who there daily seek to his holy body with a devout heart and with all humility. God Almighty have mercy on all Christian men, through St. Ælfeah's holy merits.

A. 1024.

A. 1025. This year king Cnut went to Denmark, with his ships, to the holm at the holy river. And there came against him Ulf and Eglaf, and a very great army, as well a

A. 1033. This year died bishop Leofsie, and his body rests at Worcester: and Brihteh was raised to his see[A]. In this year died Merehwit bishop of Somerset[X]; and he is buried at Glastonbury.

A. 1034. This year died bishop Ætheric[Y], and he lies at Ramsey. And that same year died Mælcolm, king in Scotland.

A. 1035. This year died king Cnut; and Harold, his son, succeeded to the kingdom. He departed at Shaftsbury, on the 2d of the Ides of November; and they bore him thence to Winchester, and there they buried him. And Ælfgyfu, Ymma, the lady, then sate there within: and Harold, who said that he was son of Cnut and of the other Ælfgyfe, though it was not sooth; he sent thither, and caused to be taken from her all the best treasures, which she could not withhold, that king Cnut had possessed; and nevertheless she still sate there within, the while that she might.

A. 1036. This year Ælfred the innocent etheling, son of king Æthelred, came in hither, and would go to his mother, who sate at Winchester; but that would not allow him Godwine the eorl, nor eke other men who had much power, because the cry was then greatly in favour of Harold, though that was unjust.

But Godwine him then let,
and his companions he dispersed;
and some divers ways slew;
some they for money sold,
some cruelly slaughtered,

some did they blind,
some did they mutilate,
some did they scalp:
nor was a bloodier deed done in this land since the Danes came,
and here accepted peace.
Now is our trust in the beloved God, that they are in bliss,
blithely with Christ, who were without guilt
so miserably slain.
The etheling still lived,
every ill they him vowed,
until it was decreed that he should be led to Ely-byrig, thus bound.
Soon as he came to land, in the ship he was blinded;
and him thus blind
they brought to the monks:
and he there abode
the while that he lived.
After that him they buried,
as well was his due,
full worthily,
as he worthy was,
at the west end,
the steeple well-nigh,
in the south aisle.
His soul is with Christ.

Denmark. And Godwine the eorl and all the chief men of Wessex withstood it as long as they could; but they were unable to effect any thing in opposition to it. And then it was decreed that Ælfgifu, Harda-cnute's mother, should dwell at Winchester with the king's, her son's, hus-carls, and hold all Wessex in his power; and Godwine the eorl was their chief man. Some men said of Harold that he was son of king Cnut and of Ælfgive daughter of Ælfelm the ealdorman, but it seemed quite unbelievable to many men; and he was nevertheless full king over all England.

A. 1037. This year was driven out Ælfgife, king Cnut's relict; she was king Hardacnut's

[a] From this time the dates in MS. E. as well as in F. are often faulty. Harold is here said to have reigned four years and sixteen weeks, although Cnute's death, Nov. 12, is placed under the year 1036; and the death of Hardacnute, and the coronation of Edward which belongs unquestionably to the year 1043, are in like manner misdated.

then they drove out his mother Ælfgyfe, the queen, without any kind of mercy, against the stormy winter: and she came then to Bruges beyond sea; and Baldwine the eorl[+] there well received her, and there kept her the while she had need. And before, in this year, died Æfic the noble dean at Evesham.

A. 1038. This year died Æthelnoth the good archbishop[x], and bishop Æthelric in Sussex[y], who desired of God that he would not let him live, any while, after his beloved father Æthelnoth; and accordingly, within seven days after, he departed, and bishop Ælfric in East-Anglia[+], and bishop Byrhteh in Worcestershire on the 13th of the Kalends of January. And then bishop Eadsige succeeded to the archbishoprick, and Grymcytel to the bishoprick in Sussex, and bishop Liuing to Worcestershire and to Gloucestershire.

A. 1039. This year was the great wind: and bishop Byrhtmær died at Lichfield. And the Welsh slew Eadwine brother of Leofric the eorl, and Thurcil, and Ælfget, and very many good men with them. And this year also came Harthacnut to Bruges, where his mother was.

A. 1040. This year died king Harald. Then sent they after Harthacnut to Bruges; thinking that they did well. And he then came hither with sixty ships before midsummer, and then imposed a very heavy tribute, so that it could hardly be levied; mother; and she then sought the protection of Baldwine south of the sea, and he gave her a dwelling in Bruges, and protected and kept her, the while that she there was.

A. 1038. This year died Æthelnoth, the 1 Nov. good archbishop, on the Kalends of November, and a little after, Æthelric bishop in Sussex, and then, before Christmas, Brihteh bishop in Worcestershire, and soon after, Ælfric bishop in East-Anglia.

A. 1039. This year[a] king Harold died at Oxford, on the 16th of the Kalends of April, and he was buried at Westminster. And he ruled England four years and sixteen weeks; and in his days sixteen ships were retained in pay, at the rate of eight marks for each rower, in like manner as had been before that was eight marks for each rower, and all were then averse to him who before had desired him; and moreover he did nought king-like the while that he reigned. He caused the dead Harald to be taken up, and had him cast into a fen. This year archbishop Eadsige[^] went to Rome. [^] of Canterbury.

A. 1041. This year Harthacnut caused all Worcestershire to be ravaged, on account of his two hus-carls, who demanded the heavy impost; when the people slew them in the town within the minster. And this year, soon after, came from beyond sea Edward, his brother on the mother's side, king Ethelred's son, who before for many years had been driven from his country; and yet was he sworn king: and he then abode thus in his brother's family the while that he lived. And in this year also Harthacnut betrayed Eadulf the eorl[×], while under his protection: and he became then a belier of his 'wed.' And this year bishop Ægelric[ˇ] was ordained at York, on the 3d of the Ides of January. [×] of Northumbria. [ˇ] of Durham. 11 Jan.

A. 1042. This year died king Harthacnut as he stood at his drink, and he suddenly fell to the earth with a terrible convulsion: and then they who were there nigh took hold of him; and he after that spake not one word: and he died on the 6th of the Ides of June. And all people then acknowledged Edward for king, as was his true natural right. 8 Jun.

And he was soon acknowledged as well by English as by Danes; though his advisers afterwards grievously requited it, when they decreed that seventy-two ships should be retained in pay, at the rate of eight marks for each rower. And in this same year the sester of wheat went up to fifty-five pence, and even further. 17 Jun.

A. 1040. This year was the 'here-geld' paid; that was twenty-one thousand pounds and ninety-nine pounds. And after that they paid to thirty-two ships, eleven thousand pounds and forty-eight pounds. And, in this same year, came Edward, son of king Ethelred, hither to land, from Wealland; he was brother of king Hardacnut: they were both Ælfgiva's sons; she was Richard's daughter the eorl's. v. A. 1043. This year was Edward hallowed king at Winchester, on the first day of Easter, with much worship; and then was Easter on the third of the Nones of April. Archbishop Eadsige hallowed him, and before all the people well instructed him; and for his own need, and all the people's, well admonished him. And Stigant the priest was blessed bishop of the East-Angles*. And soon after, the king caused all the lands which his mother possessed to be seized into his hands, and took from her all that she possessed in gold, and in silver, and in things unspeakable, because she had before held it too closely with him. And soon after, Stigant was deposed from his bishoprick, and all that he possessed was seized into the king's hands, because he was nearest to his mother's counsel, and she went just as he advised her, as people thought.

at Lambeth, on the 6th of the Ides of June: and he was king over all England two years wanting ten days; and he is buried in the Old-minster at Winchester with king Cnut his father. And his mother, for his soul, gave to the New-minster, the head of St. Valentine the martyr. And before he was buried, all people chose Edward for king at London: may he hold it the while that God shall grant it to him! And all that year was a very heavy time, in many things and divers, as well in respect to ill-seasons as to the fruits of the earth. And so much cattle perished in the year as no man before remembered, as well through various diseases as through tempests. And in this same time died Ælfsine abbot of Burh; and then Arnwi the monk was chosen abbot, because he was a very good man, and of great simplicity.

A. 1043. This year was Edward hallowed king at Winchester on the first day of Easter. And this year, fourteen days before Andrew's-mass, the king was advised to ride from Gloucester, and Leofric the eorl, and Godwine the eorl, and Sigwarth* the eorl, with their followers, to Winchester, unawares upon the lady*; and they bereaved her of all the treasures which she possessed, they were not to be told, because before that she had been very hard with the king her son; inasmuch as she had done less for him than he would, before he was king, and also since: and they suffered her after that to remain therein.

A. 1044. This year archbishop Eadsige[^] gave up the bishoprick by reason of his infirmity, and he blessed thereto Siward abbot of Abbendon, as bishop, by the king's leave and counsel, and Godwine's the eorl's: it was known to few men else before it was done, because the archbishop thought that some other man would obtain or buy it whom he could less trust in, and be pleased with, if more men should know of it. And in this year was a very great famine over all England, and corn was so dear as no man before remembered; so that the sester of wheat went up to sixty pence, and even further. And in the same year the king went out to Sandwich with thirty-five ships: and Æthelstan the church-ward obtained the abbacy at Abbendon. And Stigand re-obtained his bishoprick. And in the same year[a] king Edward took Eadgythe, daughter of Godwine the eorl, to wife, ten days before Candlemas.

A.[b]1043. This year king Edward took the daughter[y] of Godwine the eorl for his wife. And in this same year died bishop Brihtwold, and he held the bishoprick thirty-eight years, that was the bishoprick of Shireburne[+], and Hereman the king's priest succeeded to the bishoprick. And in this year Wulfric was hallowed abbot of St. Augustine's at Christmas, on Stephen's mass-day, by leave of the king, and, on account of his great infirmity, of abbot Ælfstane.

[a] There are some anomalous appearances with respect to the time of beginning the year in MS. C. before this period: but henceforward, to the year 1053, it can hardly be questioned that the computation from Easter is followed in that copy. This event, therefore, according to our mode of reckoning, would belong to the year 1045.

This year[a] died Ælfward bishop of London, on the 8th of the Kalends of August. He was first abbot of Evesham, and greatly advanced the minster the while that he there was. He went then to Ramsey, and there gave up his life. And Manni was chosen abbotY, and ordained on the 4th of the Ides of August. And in this year was driven out Gunnilde, the noble woman, king Cnut's niece; and she, after that, stayed at Bruges a long while, and afterwards went to Denmark.

A. 1046. In this year Swegen the eorl went into Wales, and Griffin the Northern king+ went with him; and they delivered hostages to him. As he was on his way homewards, then commanded he to be brought unto him the abbess of Leominster: and he had her the while that he listed; and after that he let her go home. And in this same year Osgod Clapa was outlawed before midwinter. And in this same year, after Candlemas, came the severe winter, with frost and with snow, and with all kinds of tempestuous weather, so that there was no man then alive who could remember so severe a winter as this was, as well through mortality of men as murrain of cattle; even birds and fishes perished through the great cold and famine.

Denmark, and Harold, uncle of Magnus, went to Norway after Magnus was dead; and the Normen acknowledged him: and he sent hither to land concerning peace. And Swegen also sent from Denmark, and begged of king Edward the aid of his ships. They were to be at least fifty ships: but all people opposed it. And this year also there was an earthquake, on the Kalends of May, in many places in Worcester, and in Wic, and in Derby, and elsewhere; and also there was a great mortality among men, and murrain among cattle: and moreover, the wild-fire did much evil in Derbyshire and elsewhere.

A. 1046. [a] In this year was the great synod at St. Remi^. Thereat was Leo the pope, and the archbishop of Burgundy×, and the archbishop of Besançon, and the archbishop of Triers, and the archbishop of Rheims; and many men besides, both clergy and laity. And king Edward sent thither bishop Dudoc^, and Ulfric abbot of St. Augustine's, and abbot Elfwine+, that they might make known to the king what should be there resolved on for Christendom. And in this same year king Edward went out to Sandwich with a great fleet. And Swegen the eorl, son of Godwine the eorl, came in to Bosham with seven ships; and he obtained the king's protection, and he was promised that he should be held worthy of every thing which he before possessed. Then Harold the eorl, his brother, and Beorn the eorl contended that he should not be held worthy of any of the things which the king had granted to them: but a protection of four days was appointed the pope of Rome, and many great men of many nations. He sent also to king Edward, and begged the aid of his ships, in order that he should not suffer him to escape from him by water. And he went then to Sandwich, and there continued lying with a great fleet, until the emperor obtained of Baldwin all that he would. Thither came back again Swegen the eorl to king Edward, and requested land of him, from which he might maintain himself. But Harold his brother contended, and

him to go to his ships. Then befel it during this, that word came to the king that hostile ships lay westward, and were ravaging. Then went Godwine the eorl west about with two of the king's ships; the one commanded Harold the eorl, and the other Tostig his brother; and forty-two of the people's ships. Then Harold the eorl was removed from the king's ship which Harold* the eorl before had commanded. Then went they west to Pevensey, and lay there weather-bound. Upon this, after two days, then came Swegen the eorl thither, and spoke with his father, and with Beorn the eorl, and begged of Beorn that he would go with him to the king at Sandwich, and help him to the king's friendship: and he granted it. Then went they as if they would go to the king. Then whilst they were riding, then begged Swegen of him that he would go with him to his ships: saying that his seamen would depart from him unless he should at the soonest come thither. Then went they both where his ships lay. When they came thither, then begged Swegen the eorl of him that he would go with him on shipboard. He strenuously refused, so long as until his seamen seized him, and threw him into the boat, and bound him, and rowed to the ship, and put him there aboard. Then they hoisted up their sails and ran west to Axmouth, and had him with them until they slew him: and they took the body and buried it in a church. And then his friends and litsmen came from London, and took him up, and bore him to Winchester to the Old-minster: and he is there buried with king Cnut his uncle. And Swegen went then east to Baldwin's land, and sate down there all the winter at Bruges, with his full protection. And in the same year died Eadnoth bishop[a] to the north; and Ulf was made bishop.

to Dartmouth, and there ordered him to be slain, and deeply buried. Afterwards he was found, and borne to Winchester, and buried with king Cnut his uncle. A little before that, the men of Hastings and thereabout, fought two of his ships with their ships; and slew all the men, and brought the ships to Sandwich to the king. Eight ships he had before he betrayed Beorn; after that all forsook him except two. In the same year arrived in the Welsh Axa[×], from Ireland, thirty-six ships, and thereabout did harm, with the help of Griffin the Welsh king. The people were gathered together against them: bishop Ealdred[ϒ] was also there with them; but they had too little power. And they came unawares upon them at very early morn; and there they slew many good men, and the others escaped with the bishop: this was done on the 4th of the Kalends of August. This year died, in Oxfordshire*, Oswi abbot of Thorney, and Wulfnoth abbot of Westminster; and Ulf the priest was appointed as pastor to the bishoprick which Eadnoth had held: but he was after that driven away; because he did nothing bishop-like therein: so that it shameth us now to tell more about it. And bishop Sigward died: he lieth at Abbendon. And this year was hallowed the great minster at Rheims: there was pope Leo[+], and the emperor[^]; and there they held a great synod concerning God's service. Sanctus Leo the pope presided at the synod: it is difficult to have a knowledge of the bishops who came there, and how many abbots: and hence, from this land were sent two; from St. Augustine's and from Ramsey.

A. 1047. In this year there was a great gemot in London at Mid-lent, and nine ships of litsmen were discharged, and five remained behind. And in this same year came Swegen the eorl into England. And in this same year was the great synod at Rome, and king Edward sent thither bishop Hereman and bishop Ealdred; and they came thither on Easter eve[ᵞ]. And afterwards the pope held a synod at Vercelli[+], and bishop Ulf[A] came thereto; and well nigh would they have broken his staff, if he had not given very great gifts; because he knew not how to do his duty so well as he should. And in this year died archbishop Eadsige, on the 4th of the Kalends of November.

A. 1048. In this year king Edward appointed Rodbyrd, of London, archbishop of Canterbury, during Lent. And in the same Lent he went to Rome after his pall: and the king gave the bishoprick of London to Sparhafoc abbot of Abbendon; and the king gave the abbacy of Abbendon to bishop Rothulf, his kinsman. Then came the archbishop from Rome one day before St. Peter's-mass-eve, and entered on his archiepiscopal see at Christ's-Church on St. Peter's mass-day; and soon after went to the king. Then came abbot Sparhafoc to him with the king's writ and seal, in order that he should consecrate him bishop of London. Then the archbishop refused, and said that the pope had forbidden it him. Then went the abbot to the archbishop again for that purpose, and there desired episcopal ordination; and the archbishop constantly refused him, and said that the pope had forbidden it him. Then went the abbot to London, and occupied the bishoprick which the king before had granted him, with his full leave, all the summer and the harvest. And then came Eustatius* from beyond sea soon after the bishop, and went to the king, and spoke with him that which he then would, and went then homeward. When he came to Canterbury, east, then took he refreshment there, and his men, and went to Dover. When he was some mile or more on this side of Dover, then he did on his hauberk, and his companions all, and went to Dover. When they came thither, then would they inn themselves where it liked them. Then came one of his men, and would abide in the house of a householder against his will, and wounded the householder; and the householder slew the other. Then Eustatius got upon his horse, and his companions upon theirs; and they went to the householder, and slew him within his own dwelling; and then went up towards the burh, and slew, as well within as without, more than twenty men. And the townsmen slew nineteen men on the other side, and wounded they knew not how many. And Eustatius escaped with a few men, and went again to the king, and made known to him, in part, how they had fared. And the king became very wroth with the townsmen. And the king sent off Godwine the eorl, and bade him go into Kent in a hostile manner to Dover: for Eustatius had made it appear to the king, that it had been more the fault of the townsmen than his: but it was not so. And the eorl would not consent to the inroad, because he was loath to injure his own people. Then the king sent after all his witan, and bade them come to Gloucester, nigh the aftermass of St. Mary. 8 Sept. Then had the Welshmen erected a castle in Herefordshire among the people of Swegen the eorl, and wrought every kind of harm and disgrace to the king's men there about which they could. Then came Godwine the eorl, and Swegen the eorl, and Harold the eorl, together at Beverstone, and many men with them, in order that they might go to their royal lord, and to all the witan, who were assembled with him, in order that they might have the counsel of the king and his aid, and of all this witan, how they might avenge the king's disgrace, and the whole nation's. Then were the Welshmen with the king beforehand, and accused the eorls, so that they might not come within his eyes' sight; because they said that they were coming thither in order to betray the king. Thither had come Siward the eorl[λ], and Leofric the eorl[×], and much people with them, from the north, to the king; and it was made known to the eorl Godwine and his sons, that the king and the men who were with him, were taking counsel concerning them: and they arrayed themselves on the other hand resolutely, though it were loathful to them that they should stand against their royal lord. Then the witan on either side decreed that every kind of evil should cease: and the king gave the peace of God and his full friendship to either side. Then the king and his witan decreed that a gemot of all the witan should be held for the second time in London at the harvest equinox; and the king directed the army to be called out, as well south of the Thames as north, all that was in any way most eminent. Then declared they Swegen the eorl an outlaw, and summoned Godwine the eorl and Harold the eorl to the gemot, as quickly as they could effect it. When they had come thither, then were they summoned into the gemot. Then required he safe conduct and hostages, so that he might come, unbetrayed, into the gemot and out of the gemot. Then the king demanded all the thanes whom the eorls before had; and they granted them all into his hands. Then the king sent again to them, and commanded them that they should come with twelve men to the king's council. Then the eorl again required safe conduct and hostages, that he might defend himself against each of those things which were laid to him. Then were the hostages refused him; and he was allowed a safe conduct for five nights to go out of the land. And then Godwine the eorl and Swegen the eorl went to Bosham, and shoved out their ships, and betook themselves beyond sea, and sought Baldwine's

And soon after this happened, then put away the king the lady who had been consecrated his queen[x], and caused to be taken from her all which she possessed, in land, and in gold, and in silver, and in all things, and delivered her to his sister at Wherwell. And abbot Spearhafoc was then driven out of the bishoprick of London, and William the king's priest was ordained thereto. A. 1052. This year died Ælfric archbishop of York, a very pious man, and wise. And in the same year king Edward abolished the here-geld, which king Æthelred had before imposed: that was in the nine-and-thirtieth year after he had begun it. That geld distressed all the English nation during so long a time, as it here above is written; that was ever before other gelds which were variously paid, and wherewith the people were manifoldly distressed. In the same year Eustatius[x] landed at Dover: he had king Edward's sister to wife. Then went his men inconsiderately after quarters, and a certain man of the town they slew; and another man of the town, their companion; so that there lay seven of his companions. And much harm was there done on either side, by horse and also by weapons, until the people gathered together: and then they fled away until they came to the king at Gloucester; and he gave them protection. When Godwine the eorl understood that such things should have happened in his eorldom, then began he to gather together people over all his eorldom[a], and Swein the eorl, his son, over his, and Harold, his other son, over his eorldom; and they all drew together in Gloucestershire, at Langtree, a great force and countless, all ready for battle against the king, unless Eustatius were given up, and his men placed in their hands, and also the Frenchmen who were in the castle. This was done seven days before the latter mass of

Then was king Edward sitting at Gloucester. Then sent he after Leofric the eorl [a], and north after Siward the eorl [x], and begged their forces. And then they came to him; first with a moderate aid, but after they knew how it there, in the south, was, then sent they north over all their eorldoms, and caused to be ordered out a large force for the help of their lord; and Raulf also over his eorldom: and then came they all to Gloucester to help the king, though it might be late. Then were they all so united in opinion with the king that they would have sought out Godwine's forces if the king had so willed. Then thought some of them, that it would be great folly that they should join battle; because there was nearly all that was most noble in England in the two armies, and they thought that they should expose the land to our foes, and cause great destruction among ourselves. Then counselled they that hostages should be given mutually; and they appointed a term at London, and thither the people were ordered out over all this north end, in Siward's eorldom, and in Leofric's, and also elsewhere; and Godwine the eorl and his sons were to come there with their defence. Then came they to Southwark, and a great multitude with them, from Wessex; but his band waned ever the more the longer he stayed. And they exacted pledges for the king from all the thanes who were under Harold the eorl, his son; and then they outlawed Swegen the eorl, his other son. Then did it not suit him to come with a defence to meet the king, and to meet the army which was with him. Then went he by night away; and the king on the morrow held a 'witena-gemot,' and, together with all the army, declared him outlaw, him and all his sons. And he went south to Thorney, and his wife, and Swegen his son, and Tostig and his wife, Baldwin's relation of Bruges, and Gerth his son. And Harold the eorl, and Leofwine, went to Bristol in the ship which Swegen the eorl had before got ready for himself, and provisioned. And the king sent bishop [y] Ealdred from London with a force; and they were to overtake him ere he came on ship-board: but they could not, or they would not. And he then went out from Avonmouth, and met with such heavy weather that he with difficulty got away; and there he Then went he forth to Ireland when fit weather came. And Godwine, and those who were with him, went from Thorney to Bruges, to Baldwine's land, in one ship, with as much treasure as they might therein best stow for each man. It would have seemed wondrous to every man who was in England if any one before that had said that it so should be; for he had been erewhile to that degree exalted, as if he ruled the king and all England; and his sons were eorls and the king's darlings, and his daughter wedded and united to the king: she was brought to Wherwell, and they delivered her to the abbess. Then, soon, came William the eorl[×] from beyond sea, with a great band of Frenchmen; and the king received him, and as many of his companions as it pleased him; and let him away again. This same year was given to William the priest the bishoprick of London, which before had been given to Spærhafoc.

A. 1052. This year came Harold the eorl from Ireland with his ships to the mouth of the Severn, nigh the boundaries of Somerset and Devonshire, and there greatly ravaged; and the people of the land drew together against him, as well from Somerset as from Devonshire; and he put them to flight, and there slew more than thirty good thanes, besides other people: and soon after that he went about Penwith-start. And then king Edward caused forty vessels to be fitted out. They lay at Sandwich many weeks: they were to lie in wait for Godwine the eorl, who had wich; and they set Raulf the eorl and Odda the eorl[A] as head-men thereto. Then Godwine the eorl went out from Bruges with his ships to Ysera, and left it one day before Midsummer's-mass eve, so that he came to Ness, which is south of Romney. Then came it to the knowledge of the eorls out at Sandwich; and they then went out after the other ships, and a land-force was ordered out against the ships. Then during this, then was Godwine the eorl warned, and then he went to Pevensea; and the weather was very severe, so that the eorls could not learn what was become of Godwine the eorl. And then Godwine the eorl went out again, until he came once more to Bruges; and the other ships returned again to Sandwich. And then it was decreed that the ships should return once more to London, and that other eorls and commanders should be appointed to the ships. Then was it delayed so long that the ship-force all departed, and all of them went home. Then Godwine the eorl learned that, and then drew he up his sail, and his fleet, and they then went west direct to Wiht, and there landed, and ravaged so long there, until the people yielded them so much as they laid on them. And then they went westward until they came to Portland, and there they landed, and did whatsoever harm they were able to do. Then was Harold come out from Ireland with nine ships; and then landed at Porlock, and there

When king Edward learned that, then sent he up after more help; but they came very late. And Godwine advanced ever towards London with his fleet until he came to Southwark, and there abode some while until the flood-tide came up. During that time he also treated with the townsmen, so that almost all of them would that, that he would. When he had mustered all his host, then came the flood-tide; and they then soon drew up their anchors, and held their way through the bridge by the south shore, and the land-force came from above, and arrayed themselves along the strand: and they then inclined with the ships towards the north shore, as if they would hem the king's ships about. The king had also a great land-force on his side, in addition to his shipmen: but it was loathful to almost all of them that they should fight against men of their own race; for there was little else there which was of much account, except Englishmen, on either much people was gathered against him; but he failed not to procure himself provisions. He proceeded further, and slew there a great number of the people, and took of cattle and of men and of property as it suited him. And he then went eastward to his father; and then they both went eastward until they came to Wiht, and there they took that which was yet remaining for them. And then they went thence to Pevensea, and got away thence as many ships as were there fit for service, and so onwards until he came to Ness, and got all the ships which were in Romney, and in Hythe, and in Folkstone. And then they went east to Dover, and there landed, and there took ships and hostages as many as they would, and so went to Sandwich and did 'hand' the same; and every where hostages were given them, and provisions wherever they desired. And then they went to North-mouth, and so toward London; and some of the ships went within Sheppey, and there did much harm, and went their way to King's Middleton, and that all they burned, and betook themselves then toward London after the eorls. When they came to London, there lay the king and all the eorls there against them, with fifty ships. Then side; and moreover they were unwilling that this land should be still more exposed to outlandish men, by reason that they themselves destroyed each other. Then decreed they that wise men should be sent between them: and they settled a truce on either side. And Godwine landed, and Harold his son, and from their fleet as many as to them seemed fitting. And then there was a witena-gemot: and they gave his eorldom clean to Godwine, as full and as free as he before possessed it, and to his sons also all that they before possessed, and to his wife and his daughter as full and as free as they before possessed it. And they then established between them full friendship, and to all the people they promised good law. And then they outlawed all the Frenchmen who before had upreared unjust law, and judged unjust judgments, and counselled ill counsel in this land; except so many as they agreed upon, whom the king liked to have with him, who were true to him and to all his people. And bishop Rodbeard[a], and bishop William[x], and bishop Ulf[y], with difficulty escaped, with the Frenchmen who were with them, and thus got over the eorls sent to the king, and required of him, that they might be held worthy of each of those things which had been unjustly taken from them. Then the king, however, resisted some while; so long as until the people who were with the eorl were much stirred against the king and against his people, so that the eorl himself with difficulty stilled the people. Then bishop Stigand interposed with God's help, and the wise men as well within the burh as without; and they decreed that hostages should be set forth on either side: and thus was it done. When archbishop Rotberd and the Frenchmen learned that, they took their horses, and went, some west to Pentecost's castle, some north to Rodberd's castle. And archbishop Rodberd and bishop Ulf went out at Eastgate, and their companions, and slew and otherwise injured many young men, and went their way direct to Eadulf's-ness; and he there put himself in a crazy ship, and went direct over sea, and left his pall and all Christendom here on land, so as God would have it, inasmuch as he had before obtained the dignity so as God would not
